THE DOLLAR SIDE

THEORY

On this side is that multitude of builders and material furnishers who base their arguments on: "If so and so had been so and so, then so and so would have been so and so." With these firms you pay for your experience and their's too—they profit by both your experience and your money.

FACT

On this side—the $ side—are sound tried-out facts. The hard sensible, carefully worked-out tangles of greenhouse construction; the meeting in a skilful, workmanlike way of all construction points. The originating of labor and expense saving features—the combining of 50 years' experience with the up-to-dateness of the brightest greenhouse men the country affords. The best of materials for the best of houses.

Only one side to our side—the fact side—the side that tries theory at the shop and not on you—the side that makes dollars for itself and saves dollars for you—the L & B side.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

FLORAL FUNERAL-FASHIONS.

In attending the funeral of the late governor of Ohio, John L. Pattison, the writer was impressed by the radical change which has taken place in the coloring and design of floral offerings. It was my fortune to be placed in charge of the arrangement of the entire floral decorations at the Pattison home. As was to have been expected, some of the best floral talent of the United States was represented: Washington, D. C., Cincinnati, Columbus, Cleveland, and Chicago were among the larger cities which sent offerings.

Perhaps one of the most valuable points was the absence of white. The white rose was conspicuously not there, and the usual ghastliness of the death chamber was gone. The glow of warmth radiated from the red predominating everywhere. The American Beauty played the chief part in this. The sweet pea of lavender and purple tones was undoubtedly the next favored flower, these being used largely in wreathes and casket coverings. Lily of the valley of course retained a place, but even its white was toned by a plentiful use of green, and again the lavender sweet pea. The lightest tone reached in the carnation was that of Enchantress. The white carnation appeared only in designs where strong outline was necessary. The deep, golden yellow coreopsis, the rich red of Liberty and Richmond and the bright scarlet of Flamingo carried their message of cheer. The white rose and carnation seemed to have been relegated to the wedding festival. This truly is a progressive step and, like black door crape, is giving way to modern ideas. And is this not as it should be? Flowers are to comfort the living and are not symbolical of the life of the deceased.

Radical as the change in color scheme was the noticeable absence of set designs. Not a broken wheel, not a gates ajar to cause the beheading of beautiful flowers. The day when heads are snapped from graceful stems is passing. Let us be thankful. Tall, copious baskets and vases hold natural flowers in really artistic arrangement. Conventional pieces emblematic of fraternities will always hold their place at a funeral of this character. But to rank with other modern arrangements, floral designs must adhere absolutely to correct color scheme and outlines. If a floral design is a reproduction of an emblem it must be exact. A green sky, blue sun, white mountains and a pink foreground is clearly inconsistent, inexcusable coloring. And yet at this otherwise splendid exhibit of America's best talent one of the most conspicuous pieces was so colored. This piece not only was impossible in coloring but its design was imperfect. The sun alone was one-fourth the size of the entire sky space. Being representative of a historical emblem where nearly every line was of utmost importance, it should have had no variations from its pattern.

The last of set designs to be laid on the shelf is the old, ever familiar wreath. But such wreaths would scarcely be recognized. Their severe, plain lines are softened by long, natural cycas leaves and shapely sprays of long-stemmed flowers springing out in curves from the back and top of the design. Large bows of ribbon are used everywhere. Wherever lettering appears it is placed on the streamers of ribbons. For such purposes shaded ribbon, with chiffon overties, is largely used. A favorite combination is an American Beauty ribbon shaded to a foliage green and an overtie of pink embroidered chiffon.

Upon entering the door the eye rested on the casket of black, the top completely covered by two perfectly fitting panels of valley combined with large quantities of maidenhair fern and plumosus and heavy border of lavender sweet peas. This design was rare workmanship. The casket being raised about four and a half feet from the floor, gave space for much more than usual decoration beneath. An American flag was festooned about the base and below the smilax on the casket cover. Against this background leaned an exact reproduction of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity pin. This was a beautiful emblem of old gold and black. The yellow coreopsis for the gold, black immortelles for the field, green boxwood for the laurel wreath and a white rose with carnation outline for a diamond, and the Greek letters worked out with the golden centers of the field daisy. Immediately over and back of the casket was a deep bay, the center of which was occupied by a large mantel on either side of which were two full length windows. This bay with its mantel and windows played an important part in the grouping of the pieces.

On either corner of the entrance to the bay stood a magnificent basket of long American Beauties. Each basket was banded by a sash of blended ribbon running from the upper corner obliquely across and tied in a large bow, the streamers hanging to the floor. The words "The Senate" were on the ribbon of the one on the right and "The House" on the left. The two groups formed a complete arch across the entrance to the bay window. In the center against the mantel rested a 4-foot emblem, a reproduction of the Ohio state seal, with its sun and mountains carefully worked out. Above this, resting on the seal and draped in smilax, was a picture of the departed governor. On the mantel itself stood two large vases filled with American Beauties and sprayed to the right and left were two casket bouquets of roses which formed a bank completely covering the space above the mantel.

On the floor and directly in front of the seal a large American flag of natural flowers rested. To the right and left, on slight inclines, were two big sprays of American Beauties. On either side of the seal was a large wreath on an easel, the line of each wreath being broken by natural cycas leaves. The wreath on the left contained lavender sweet peas, and the one on the right was made up of the Richmond rose.

Outside of the bay, and in the main room, on either side were numerous wreaths, sprays, vases and baskets, all made up in rich, but subdued tones. Many hung from the picture moulding, and all vantage points, such as the piano, etc., were completely covered with offerings too numerous to mention, giving the room a beautiful effect. In the adjoining room the most important piece was an immense vase of American Beauties being lighted by the sun rays coming through the partly opened shutters in such a manner that the bouquet caught and held the only light coming into the room, making a striking picture effect. W. J. Williams.

PRAYER-BOOK AND FLOWERS.

In a wedding ceremony, where the bride carries a prayer-book, is it the proper thing to also carry flowers?

I. H. M.

The only flowers ever carried with a prayer-book are a few delicate ones, like valley, or one spray of small orchids in a very small cluster, such as will lie upon the cover. More often none at all are used, but never a formal bouquet.

G. B.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Small Ferns.

A very important article with all city florists in winter is small ferns for filling the little dishes of many kinds for dinner-table decoration, and now is a good time to prepare a stock for that purpose. Many depend on buying little plants in pots at from $25 to $40 per thousand, and ask for their delivery in August and September. If grown in 2-inch pots you have to give them 3-inch when received, which makes them cumbersome. You can buy flats of seedling ferns at this time, which are in good order to put into 2-inch pots, and the cost will not average over $1.50 per hundred plants. These can be put into 2-inch pots and placed in a coldframe and covered with shaded sashes and will make better plants than those kept in the greenhouse.

A word about the frame. It should be where there is no danger of surface water standing even in excessive rains, and the little pots should be plunged in refuse hops, leaf-mold or some such material that will keep the small amount of soil in the pots from continual drying out. I have many times referred to the mistake of putting ferns of any kind on a bench where the heat from pipes could dry them out. This coldframe summer treatment is the very reverse. They have our summer warmth of atmosphere, which is hot enough for almost any tropical plant, while their roots will be cool and moist. Of course you will remove them to the houses on the advent of chilly nights. Last summer we had a lot of small ferns ruined with thrips in a warm house.

Azaleas.

Early in July your azaleas plunged out of doors will have completed their growth and will be setting buds. Give them more space and put on the surface of the soil a good inch of rather fresh cow manure. Don't let them become crowded or you will be troubled with thrips, red spider and mealy bug. Let them be in such order that you can reach all sides of the plant with the hose.

Hydrangeas.

Perhaps when you plunged your young hydrangeas you stood them rather close. If so, and there is not daylight between them, give them more space to prevent a weak growth, as without light the flower buds for next spring will be weak and blind. If they were small plants when put into the frame they will now take a shift. A 6-inch pot is as large as they should be in when taken into the houses in the fall. A rather stiff loam, potted firmly, suits hydrangeas. As the name implies, the hydrangea when growing fast needs an abundance of water and, Fourth of July or any other day, they must not be neglected for want of it.

Camellias.

The camellia is by no means an important plant with the great majority of florists, but if you have any you may as well treat them properly or else put them on the dump pile, and that remark is appropriate to many things we see in some greenhouses.

Camellias make their growth directly after flowering, when they enjoy a high temperature and moist atmosphere. The growth is now finished and the buds formed for next winter. Plants in pots or tubs can be plunged outside and should be never neglected for water. The sun will not hurt them and the young wood will ripen better than in a shady house. The sun shines as bright in Japan and Corea as it does in Kalamazoo, Mich., or Horseheads, N. Y., where the camellia is indigenous with its roots always moist. With our artificial treatment a severe drying out at the roots is fatal.

Gardenias.

Gardenias that have been planted on benches a few weeks should be growing freely and in our hot weather will need a daily hard syringing to keep down their greatest enemy, mealy bug. The gardenia is really a hard-wooded shrub and in Texas is treated as such. In our northern greenhouses, where our plants are mostly renewed annually, they need some pinching and during July they should have it. The more lateral growths to a plant the more flowers. There are many mixtures and decorations advertised and warranted to kill mealy bug, but I believe a good, fierce application of cold water is the best of all.

Syringing.

There is a word used in this country, which to me is misleading, and that is "spraying." You spray to keep cut flowers fresh, or possibly a batch of cuttings more to keep the surrounding atmosphere moist than to wet the sand, but spraying should not be confounded with syringing and when we mean syringing we should use the word. Syringing means that you force water against the under side of the leaf of many plants with such force that you destroy the minute web of the red spider and actually dislodge mealy bug from its resting place. I have often thought that when good old Noah was told to build the ark he might have saved himself much trouble had be left many of our small and troublesome insects and parasites to perish. We could have got along without red spider and mealy bug, likewise the skunk and rattlesnake and lots of others. However, we suspect then, as now, Mrs. Noah had the say and insisted on taking in her collection of posies, a rose geranium, a lemon verbena and oleander, and so perpetuated these nuisances. Perhaps old Noah had the snakes at the time and took in the skunk as a cheap disinfectant.

Peony Mme. Forel.

Peony Queen Victoria, the Variety most Extensively Grown for Cut Flowers.

Show Pelargoniums.

Show pelargoniums that are quite out of flower should be gradually dried off, not a sudden withdrawal of water, but less each succeeding week. They will not suffer if occasionally allowed to be very dry at the roots, for this will put them in the proper condition for propagation at the end of August, the proper time. They can be stood out of doors (not plunged) and given sufficient water to keep them from shriveling.

Calla Lilies.

Those who grew a bed or bench of calla lilies, which are now done flowering, should lift the bulbs and dry them off, not in the broad sun, but rather beneath a bench where there is no drip. The soil must be renewed in the bed and the bulbs will be all the better for the rest till the middle of September, when you replant the dormant bulbs. This calla, or properly richardia, is a most accommodating plant. It will grow during summer, if planted out or in pots, and well supplied with water, or will submit to perfect dryness of the bulb for several months, but perfect drying out during the next three months gives good results.

Heating Apparatus.

Though not cultural notes, I want to say a word about your heating apparatus. In the rush at the end of May when you cease firing, your hot water heaters and steam boilers are too often neglected. In the case of hot water cast-iron heaters the interior surfaces of the heater, all that you can get at, should be given a good coat of oil, also all doors and hinges. It need not be new linseed oil; any waste oil that has been used on journals will do. There is more abuse and wear on these heaters during the dampness of summer than in the use of them in winter. In the case of steam tubular boilers, the tubes should be oiled by running through each tube a bunch of oily rags or waste and the interior of the boiler, both the shell and the tubes, can be oiled by filling the boiler with water as full as you would if making steam; then pouring in at the top of the boiler from twenty to fifty gallons, according to size, of crude petroleum, which will remain on top of the water. Then slowly withdraw the water from the boiler and as the water sinks, followed by the oil, every part of the boiler will receive a coat of oil. The water in a steel tubular boiler should be withdrawn when not in use for any length of time. Cast-iron heaters and pipes should be kept at all times full of water. Proper care of these most important implements may save you much future expense.

WILLLIAM SCOTT.

SOME GOOD PEONIES.

One of the most attractive peonies in the Boston show was Mme. Forel. It is a very late variety, deep rose, shading to pale rose, and noticeable for its fragrance. The flower is large and full. This variety has been staged at previous exhibitions of the peony society and has never failed to attract attention. It is noticeable, however, that the exhibitors do not all have the same variety under this name and efforts to procure it from Europe have resulted in the shipment of a variety of forms, showing that the European stocks are no more closely allied than are those of America. The illustration is from a photograph of the Mme. Forel in the Cottage Gardens' collection.

Another of the varieties in the Cottage Gardens' collection which attracted favorable attention was La Tulipe, a late salmon-flesh variety, the center petals touched with deep purple spots which somewhat impair its usefulness for cut flower work. It has a large, full flower, as shown in the accompanying illustration.

Ask the average florist which is the best white peony for commercial purposes and the chances are all in favor of his naming Festiva maxima, but as a matter of fact a hundred blooms of Queen Victoria are cut for the wholesale markets for every dozen of Festiva maxima. Queen Victoria is the old Whitleyii. It is grown in enormous quantity by the large producers of cut peonies. It is pure white, early and fragrant. It is the first to reach the Chicago market, usually coming at the earlest date from the growers at Sarcoxie, Mo. Thousands of dozens are placed in cold storage each season, the keeping quality being among the desirable attributes of the modern cut flower peony. Another good feature of this sort is that stock is so plentiful that it may be had at a moderate price.

PEONY NOMENCLATURE.

[In his annual address as president of the American Peony Society, C. W. Ward had the following to say on the subject of nomenclature.]

The necessity of continuing everlastingly at the task of straightening out the nomenclature of the peony has been most emphatically impressed upon me by my experience in purchasing peonies from both foreign and American growers during the last three years.

In my last annual address I referred to the variety purchased under the name of Henry Murger, wherein I received two absolutely distinct peonies under this name from the same firm at different periods. This spring the attempt to determine whether the names attached to the various varieties growing in our peony test plot were the true names, developed a state of affairs which has caused me not a little chagrin, and I find that I have the same peony in many instances under several names.

Mons. Charles Leveque.

Some two years ago I purchased from one of the most reliable firms in Holland quite a quantity of a peony under the name of Mons. Charles Leveque, paying therefor an exceptionally large price under the impression and representation that I was getting something especially good. The plants are blooming for the first time this season and prove to be nothing less than the variety sold by French growers under the name of Mlle. Leonie Calot, introduced by Calot in 1861.

We have been purchasing this variety from the most responsible French and German growers at a few francs per hundred, and while the peony is of a very beautiful color, it is weak in the stem, the blooms fall upon the ground, and it has little value as an effective sort in the field. The color is a beautiful shade of salmon-pink, the flower is medium in size and has the merit of being a good keeper and may have some value as a cut flower variety, but if the firms who have introduced this peony under a new name, thus giving the impression that it is a new variety, have done it knowingly, they have perpetrated a fraud upon American peony buyers which will not be soon forgotten by those who have been unfortunate enough to purchase this variety at a much higher price than they could have secured it under its true name from the French and German growers.

Delachii and Other Sorts.

Two distinct sorts came to us from reputable firms under the name of Delachii, one being a deep purplish amaranth, the other much darker in color and with a decided crimson cast. The habits of the varieties are quite distinct, and one sort is much more valuable than the other. I have not as yet been able to determine which is the true sort, as either one would answer fairly well to the introducer's description of Delachii, which is "deep purple."

From one of the most responsible American peony firms we received the variety Mme. Ducel under the name of Model of Perfection. Others have the name Mons. Jules Elie attached to their stock of Mme. Ducel.

Under the name Modiste Guerin come two varieties somewhat similar in habit and similar in color, but the true variety is much better in color and a more valuable peony than the false one.

Mme. Coste comes to us under the name of Souv. de l'Exposition Universelle. Under the same name we get two dark pink varieties which are far inferior to Souv. de l'Exposition Universelle and which we have not as yet been able to identify.

Marie Stuart comes to us from one of the most prominent western peony firms under the name of Baroness Schrœder.

Under the name of Mme. de Verneville we get a mixture of Mme. de Vatry, Jeanne d'Arc and the true Verneville.

Jeanne d'Arc also comes to us under the name of Marguérite Gerard.

Agnes Marie Kelway came under the name of La Tulipe and La Tulipe comes also under the name of Multicolor.

Two common dark pink peonies come to us under the name of Mme. Camille Bancel.

Under La Tendresse we get a common flesh pink, semi-double peony which shows the seed pods prominently in the center. The true La Tendresse is creamy white, absolutely double and shows no center or seed pods and is much dwarfer grower than the false variety.

Rose d'Amour.

Some three or four years ago we purchased from a Holland firm quite a stock of a good solid pink peony under the name of Rose d'Amour. All of the stock we received from the firm the first year proved to be true to habit and color. The second order to the same firm for the same variety brought a mixed lot of pink peonies, all varying shades of dark and light pink and purple, and but eleven plants out of 100 received proved to be the same kind sold us originally by this same firm as Rose d'Amour. An investigation of the variety, and comparing it with the true Rose d'Amour which we purchased from a French firm, and which answers the originator's description, disclosed the fact that none of the peonies shipped us by the Holland firm in question was the true variety.

Many common sorts come to us under the names of well known, valuable varieties. In some instances where a quantity of a valuable sort is purchased, one or two plants in the lot will prove true to name, the balance being frequently nothing but a lot of mixed varieties running through shades of color somewhat similar to the variety ordered but of totally different habits and frequently a totally different period of blooming.

In many instances where a pink variety is ordered we receive various shades of dark and light pink, white, flesh colored and even the deep purples and amaranths. In some instances where a delicate flesh-colored pink peony was ordered, the variety received proved upon blooming to be a deep purple.

Efforts at Identification.

These experiences have been the result of five years' efforts to accumulate a stock of peonies true to name by purchasing them from Holland, French and German peony firms as well as from American firms. Our plants are now three and four years old and are developing normal blooms showing the true characteristics, so that for the first time we are able to identify the varieties in a practical way, provided the originator's description is sufficiently definite.

In Holland they have a peony association which is endeavoring to straighten peony nomenclature by holding annual exhibitions of peony blooms and thereby settling mooted questions of nomenclature. It has identified a number of varieties which the members claim to be able to furnish true to originator's name and description. Nevertheless, in many instances when we buy of them they prove to be wrong when we get them in flower here.

Our own American firms do not seem to be in much better condition, and it would seem as if we are at present almost hopelessly mixed in our peony nomenclature, which seems to be too confused even for our American firms to deal intelligently among themselves.

Take, for instance, the peony Delachii. Should we need 1,000 of this variety for massing in a large piece of landscape work, if we ordered it from two or three different American firms, we would receive possibly two or three different shades of purple that would spoil the effect of the mass of color if used together, and barring a very few sorts, if we should get an order for a thousand plants of one variety, I do not know where we could get the order properly filled. Before peonies can be used largely and effectively in landscape work the nomenclature must be straightened out so that peonies can be purchased in quantity from different firms true to name, color, height and time of blooming.

As most of you know, this society is making an effort to straighten out and identify peonies in this country by cooperating with Cornell University, at Ithaca, N. Y., in planting a test plot of several thousand varieties from different sources, and we are in hopes that by this means we shall be able to settle on a list of forty to fifty sorts sufficiently distinct and accumulate a sufficient quantity of true stock to enable us to do business with each other on a satisfactory basis.

Not Enough Stock.

There are too many varieties under name and there is not enough stock of the best sorts to supply any great demand, and as these better sorts are sold at good prices, there is a great temptation for a certain class of dealers to put in a few of the true sort ordered and then to fill up the box with roots of common kinds. We have found three or four firms in Europe who are making an honest effort to send out reliable stock, true to the originator's name, and who are willing to guarantee their stock. We have adopted the practice of requiring such guarantees and not paying for stock until it has bloomed with us and proved true, and the most reliable firms are willing to guarantee their stock in this way.

But even with such guarantees we get too great a percentage wrongly labeled, probably due to inefficient systems of keeping stock or carelessness of workmen in handling and packing shipments. As it takes three years to fully identify peonies, this receiving unreliable stock is a most serious detriment and obstacle to the commercial dealer as well as to the amateur, who is often keenly disappointed in getting something entirely different from what was expected from the catalogue description or from what was seen and noted on the exhibition table.

STORAGE OF PEONIES.

[In his annual address as president of the American Peony Society, C. W. Ward spoke as follows on the subject of the storage of peonies.]

At the Chicago exhibition we secured considerable knowledge and experience in the shipping and staging of flowers, and this knowledge has been substantially added to by the experience gained in staging this year's exhibit in Boston.

In order to secure a large display of flowers from different sections of the country, it is necessary that growers in those sections where the peony blooms early in the season, ship their flowers in the bud form for cold storage, as in the more southern sections of the country the peonies are out of bloom before any flowers can be had in the latitude of Boston, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago.

My own experience in attempting to store peonies in an ice-box for exhibition purposes has proved a signal failure this year and of several hundred blooms so held, I have been able to stage but a hundred or so in passable condition.

Removable Concrete Bench Built by Frank Garland, Des Plaines, Ill.

At the Chicago exhibition some 2,000 blooms were shipped and held in a cold-storage plant some six to fourteen days, and many of them came out in good condition and made a passable display. But at Boston no cold-storage plant could be found which would receive the peonies, and I was compelled to accept the kind offer of one of Boston's representative firms, who tendered the use of a large florist's ice-box and took excellent care of the blooms while in storage, but the blooms come out in bad shape, having been rotted at the base of the petals because of excess of moisture in the ice-box.

When placed in a regular cold-storage plant, an even temperature and a dry atmosphere can be maintained and better results will be obtained, but my experience with ice-box storage indicates that peonies cannot be successfully carried any great length of time in florists' ice-boxes and make a creditable showing on the exhibition table.

When placed in cold storage the blooms should be tied six to twelve in a bundle and the buds wrapped in waxed or oiled paper extending six inches beyond the buds but open at the ends, and the stems plunged in water one-half to two-thirds of their length. This uncertainty in storing and keeping peony blooms renders the gathering together of a representative exhibition from different points of the country at one time an exceptionally difficult task and it is a foregone conclusion that our peony displays must depend very largely upon those growers in the immediate vicinity of the locality where the annual exhibition is held.

THE GLASS MARKET.

The manufacture of glass has generally ceased throughout the United States and prices are steadily stiffening because a large number of factories have little stock on hand, and jobbers' stocks also are low. This applies especially to greenhouse sizes. In January the market was low, but there has been a steady stiffening in the last three or four months, and the market on carload lots is now 45 to 50 cents a box above the January market. On small lots there is, of course, a still greater increase. Conditions are going back to the point where Belgian window glass can again be imported at a profit. Last week's receipts at the port of New York were 5,950 boxes at 100 feet each. There was a time when greenhouse builders used large quantities of Belgian glass, and they will again use it as soon as the price of the domestic product reaches such an altitude that there will be an economy in importing.

MOVABLE CONCRETE BENCHES.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken at the establishment of Frank Garland, at Des Plaines, Ill., and shows one of his 20-foot houses equipped with a movable concrete bench of his own invention and manufacture. The house contains two side benches each two feet six inches wide and two center benches each five feet wide. In the illustration the two wide benches are shown only half completed, except at the far end of the house, where the workmen are engaged in laying the rows of cement slabs which make the benches the full width.

This bench is easily built and quickly removable, being held together purely by gravity, except for the side boards, which are clamped on. Legs, stringers and bench bottoms are all moulded on the place. The bench bottoms, as shown, are in reality in the shape of boxes turned upside down for the sake of lightness and economy of material, strength not being sacrificed.

One of the first questions asked Mr. Garland by every visitor is as to how the bench is built around the purlin posts, which are shown to go through the slabs of concrete. When one thinks of it, it is a very simple matter to determine just where the iron pipe will penetrate the concrete. A chisel is then used to cut a hole, which takes but a few moments. Then the pipe is slipped from its socket, put through the cement slab and the whole replaced.

This style of bench Mr. Garland finds to possess every desirable attribute. It is not expensive and it is permanent. It affords excellent drainage and a smooth bottom, which greatly facilitates removing old soil. He proposes to equip all his houses with it.

THE NEWER RICHARDIAS.

Richardia Elliottiana is probably the finest deep yellow in cultivation, the entire flower being deepest yellow throughout. The flower is of good size, well expanded. The plant is not as vigorous as could be desired, but will delight careful cultivators. The foliage is beautifully spotted, green and white.

R. hastata was the first yellow calla introduced. At first it sold for $5 per bulb. It is a strong, vigorous grower, light yellow, with brown throat, the yellow tinge more pronounced when grown indoors than outside. The foliage is clear green.

R. Mrs. Roosevelt, Tailby's hybrid, is a plant of extraordinary vigor, foliage deep green, covered with white dots, flowers of largest size, wide open, nearly white, a slight tinge of yellow. I believe this will become the leading spotted calla when it becomes known. Each strong bulb gives several flowers.

R. Van Fleet's yellow hybrid has foliage as distinctly spotted as the well known spotted calla, with flowers of a bright lemon color and deep, chocolate-colored throat. It is a fine bloom, and a good grower. A strong bulb will produce several flowers in succession.

Burbank's new yellow hybrid has been a disappointment to me. Stock I bought is apparently mixed. The foliage is nicely spotted, and it is a vigorous grower. Some flowers are nearly as deep yellow as is R. Elliottiana, and others are white. Plants grown from the best yellow specimens will no doubt be valuable, as it seems to be a more vigorous grower than Elliottiana.

R. Rehmanni is a dwarf plant with green foliage and bright rosy purple flowers produced in great profusion. It makes a fine house plant. E. Y. T.

SPANISH IRIS.

The value of the pretty Spanish iris, when gently forced for spring blooming, is not sufficiently well known. They are very inexpensive, of easy culture and come in bloom when such flowers are of great service. They can be grown either on benches or in flats; the latter we think are preferable. A depth of four inches is sufficient. A flat 24x12x4 will hold about 100 bulbs. As they start very quickly after planting they must not be covered with ashes or any similar material, as are the generality of Dutch bulbs. They will not stand anything like hard forcing, and nothing warmer than 50 degrees to 54 degrees at night is advisable. They may be had in flower from the end of March until outdoor-grown bulbs are in, which in this section is about June 10.

If the flats can be stood on a bench and plants allowed to root through, the spikes will be all the stronger. They are specially valuable at Memorial day for bouquet work, and vases of separate colors are extremely effective. Some growers hold a portion in coldframes and allow them to come on naturally. These come just ahead of the outdoor ones.

An impression prevails among many that this iris is not reliably hardy. We have never had any trouble with wintering it, although we have had readings as low as 25 degrees to 30 degrees below zero. Early in November is a good time to plant them and a very light coating of leaves is all the protection needed. This should be removed as soon as the frost leaves the ground. We find the bulbs last well for two years, but they are so cheap that any one can afford to plant them annually.

The following varieties are fine for cutting or for mass effects in shrubberies: Chrysolora, golden yellow; Count of Nassau, dark blue; Louise, a beautiful shade of light blue; Blanche fleur and British Queen, pure white. All these force well. W. N. Craig.

CARNATIONS

FUNGICIDE SOLUTIONS.

A number of years ago I copied a formula for killing damp or black rot on carnation cuttings. The formula was also good for stopping damp on any kind of cuttings. It consisted of sulphate of copper and ammonia, and as I have lost the formula I do not know the proportions. Can you give me this information? P. J. C.

The following is no doubt what you are looking for: Dissolve one pound of copper carbonate in two quarts of ammonia, and keep in stone jug tightly stoppered until used. When using dilute in water about one to sixty. This is a splendid fungicide, just as effective as Bordeaux mixture and much handier, as it can be kept a long time without losing its strength if kept well stoppered. Another remedy we have used with splendid results is formaline. We dilute this with water about one part to 500, and we like this even better than the copper-ammonia solution. A. F. J. Baur.

BONE MEAL.

I desire some information as to the proper way to use bone meal for carnations. I am in a town where I can get bone meal fresh from butcher shops. Any information you can give me relative to the use of bone meal will be appreciated. L. L. W.

Bone meal is more extensively used in growing greenhouse crops than any other commercial fertilizer, and when used properly in connection with animal manures very little else is needed. If the bone meal is dry when you get it, you can store it away in sacks or in a bin, but if it is green or damp you will have to arrange to dry it to prevent heating or getting moldy.

As to using it on your crops, that is largely a question of what is lacking in your soil. Bone meal is rich in phosphoric acid, lime and nitrogen, and invariably adds greatly to the productiveness of the soil. We begin using bone meal when the soil is on the benches and ready to plant. We do not use it as liberally as some growers do, as we consider that the same quantity used in two or three applications is better than all applied at one time.

We spread about twenty-five or thirty-five pounds on a bench 5x100 feet, and rake it into the soil thoroughly. This is usually enough to run the plants until towards spring, when we give them another application in the same proportion with a mulch of manure added. Pure bone meal is one of the safest fertilizers you will find, and you will soon become familiar with the quantity required by your soil. A. F. J. Baur.

ROSES

SEASONABLE CULTURE.

As soon as convenient after planting is finished, staking, tying, disbudding and cultivating should receive attention. Where grafted stock is grown, this should be done immediately after planting, so as to obviate accidents to the scion. As syringing must be practiced without delay in order to keep spider in check, the force applied is apt to detach the scion from the stock if left unsupported.

Deep planting, which is absolutely necessary to grafted stock, will support them in a measure, but as the tops get heavy with the luxuriant growth usual at this season, it cannot be depended on for long.

Own-root stock also should be supported and trained so that none of the branches are allowed to crawl over the ground, as this causes the eyes to break weak and is a sure source of an undesirable crop of blind wood.

Whatever style of support is used, let it be neatly and tastefully erected, even though the initial cost be a little more, as neatness and taste displayed in a house, by the added pleasure to the eye, more than compensate for any little extra cost and labor incurred.

Too much importance cannot be attached to cultivating during the growing season. Even though it be practiced twice a week it is not too frequent, and will soon repay the labor by the rapidity and quality of the growth.

Do not allow the benches to stand until it is absolutely necessary to cultivate them in order to get rid of the weeds. Keep the soil ruffled so frequently that weeds cannot have time to show themselves, and with all other conditions good the stock is bound to flourish.

Disbudding, as practiced by up-to-date growers, consists of something more than merely nipping off the bud and leaving all the immature eyes on the stem to break. They usually select the eye they wish to form the future stem, which is to be found near the center of the growth to be operated on. If this growth is extra strong it is best to leave an extra eye or two, but where the growth is weak they should be cut back to at most four eyes in order to balance the future bush.

If the drainage is good, give the young stock plenty of water. It is astonishing how much water healthy young stock can use with profit at this season. Unless on very cold nights, and we cannot expect many of them during the next six weeks, the ventilator can remain fully open unless when there is danger from wind or rain.

This will give the stock a hardy constitution and enable them to withstand the troubles we all expect to encounter when the days get short and the nights so cold that we cannot indulge in such free access of air. RIBES.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

The Temple show held last week in London was a record, both in quantity and quality of exhibits. It is always "the" show of the year. All expert trade growers exhibit and it may be of benefit to American growers to know the names of the trade specialists who are at the top in each particular line.

Commencing with orchids, which formed by far the greatest attraction, Sander & Sons, St. Albans, were showing the finest in all general varieties, but C. Vuylsteke, Loochristy, Ghent, Belgium, showed probably the best odontoglossums of various types. In roses Wm. Paul & Sons, Waltham Cross, still are able to hold their own as the best all-round growers. In carnations A. F. Dutton, Iver, Bucks, showed by far the finest in the American varieties and apart from the orchids no other exhibit attracted so much attention as these. John Waterer & Sons, Bagshot, Surrey, still hold the premier place as growers of rhododendrons, the finest plant in the show being their new Pink Pearl.

Sutton & Sons, Reading, showed, as they have done for many years, the finest obtainable strains of calceolarias, gloxinias and cinerarias. Carter & Co., of Holborn, in the new Eschscholzia Carmine King have the finest thing of its kind I ever have seen. In clematis G. Jackman & Co., of Woking, are undoubtedly the leading growers. Their new Jackmani rubra and Lady Northcliffe will likely be fine commercial varieties.

In tulips of course the May flowering varieties at this time of the year were heavily in evidence. At the present time I think the finest and most extensive stock is held by Hogg & Robertson, of Dublin, Ireland. Alex Wilson, of Spilsby, Lincolnshire, although not yet a very extensive grower, shows the finest individual blooms and I imagine much more will be heard from this grower in the near future. Ker & Sons, Liverpool, appear to take first place in amaryllis (hippeastrums).

In begonias no other strain excels that of T. S. Ware, Ltd., Feltham, Middlesex, especially in doubles. Henry Eckford, Wem, Shropshire, still holds the finest strains of commercial sweet peas, although some of the strains from Watkins & Simpson, of Tavistock street, London, run all other commercial strains very close. Reamsbotham & Co., Alderborough, Kings County, Ireland, had the finest collection of St. Brigid anemone, and their stock is the largest, although Messrs. Gilbert, of Bourne, Lincs., have never been beaten with their variety, King of the Scarlets.

The American fern, Nephrolepis exaltata Elegantissima, was shown by Mr. Godfry, Exmouth, who obtained a first-class certificate for it. This variety, together with Nephrolepis exaltata Scottii, will eventually make valuable commercial sorts.

Paris green is now extensively used by every class of grower, both inside and out, and when mixed in proper proportions no harm to any vegetation ever results. I have seen it used on maidenhair ferns successfully for greenfly and for the same trouble on roses, also on fruit trees and bushes. This year red spider has been exceptionally troublesome on the fruit farms, also the violet plantations and cucumber houses, but wherever I have visited growers are busy with the knapsack, spraying Paris green, and red spider now has no terrors for them as formerly. A few years ago sulphur was the great remedy for spider, especially on indoor growths, but the use of this often caused much injury to the vegetation.

The society to foster the growth of winter-flowering carnations in England is now an actual fact, a dinner and meeting to elect officers and form rules being held last week in London.

It is stated in reference to obtaining the brilliant blue coloring of Hydrangea hortensis, in addition to alum waterings, previously spoken of in these notes, if some iron filings are placed over the drainage, about one big handful, it will give the brilliant blue coloring and also make the bloom last some seven to ten days longer in perfection than when grown in the ordinary way. VEGETABLES FOR EXHIBITION.

[A paper by John Heeremans, read before the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Club, Madison, N. J., June 13, 1906.]

The culture of vegetables, at all times a most interesting study, becomes very much more so when the object is the exhibition table. As exhibitions at which vegetables figure at all prominently are held principally in the fall, I shall confine these few remarks mainly to those varieties which are in season at that time of the year. Now, we shall say that the exhibitor wishes to take a collection of twelve varieties, which I consider is ample to test the skill of any person. The following I would consider a good selection: celery, leeks, onions, potatoes, carrots, beets, cauliflower, parsnips, turnips, tomatoes, Brussels sprouts and lettuce, or, should string beans, peas, sweet corn or egg plant be available, they would give a larger selection.

Undesirable Show Varieties.

Whatever varieties are chosen, they should be good types of their respective sorts, and not included in the collection because they happened to be a poor dish of peas out of season, to the exclusion of a good dish of turnips, and so on.

Personally, I do not care much for the squash family as exhibition vegetables. They represent no extra amount of skill in their cultivation. Any one with a manure heap can grow squash. The same applies to some other varieties that do not represent much skill; the different sorts of spinach, including Swiss chard, which I do not suppose one person in a dozen will eat if anything else is available. The oyster plant and Jerusalem artichoke do not figure very high as exhibition vegetables.

Methods of Culture.

You will notice that I placed celery at the head of my list. There is no vegtable, to my mind, that calls for more skilful cultivation than first-class celery. It should be large without being pithy or hollow, have a good sized heart, be well bleached and free from rust or blemishes. A good time to sow the seed for the product to be in good shape late in October is in early May. I prefer to sow in boxes and place in a greenhouse in gentle heat. When ready, prick out into coldframes or anywhere in four or five inches of soil on a hard bottom, where water is handy, for they require lots of it. The plants will be ready for the open ground by the middle of June, and no opportunity of a showery day should be lost in getting them out. If the weather is at all dry, water must be given in abundance if good results are expected.

Large onions and leeks are very strong exhibition vegetables, and their culture is practically identical, except that the leeks require earthing up to blanch them. Onions and leeks cannot be too large for show purposes, and to produce large roots, very early sowing is indispensable. February is none too soon to sow in heat in a greenhouse. They must be pricked off into boxes when large enough to handle and kept growing on, gradually hardening off and planted out in very rich soil in the garden in May. These plants are gross feeders, and must have very high cultivation to bring them to a high state of perfection.

Potatoes for exhibition should be of medium size, clear in the skin and have shallow eyes. Very large specimens are more than likely to be hollow in the middle. Carrots and parsnips must be large and have very clean skins and uniform, tapering roots. Beets and turnips should be of medium size, inclining to small rather than large, as big specimens are useless except for feeding cattle.

Cauliflower, a splendid vegetable, but very difficult to get good in this section of the country, should be of medium size with very close and clean white heads. Tomatoes must be of medium size and very round, not corrugated, and should be ripened on the plant. Brussels sprouts, a very telling vegetable when good, should be large and solid, not open and ragged. Lettuce also must be large and very solid.

Preparation for Staging.

The whole collection should be presented on the exhibition table as fresh as possible, and no pains should be spared to have them so, for if wilted or stale in any way, it would go severely against them. Now, as to the manner of staging. The collection should be made as artistic as possible, not merely a dish of each kind, placed on a bare table in straight lines, for this method does not appeal to me at all. Instead, a background should be formed of the larger kinds, and the smaller grouped in front of them.

No receptacles, such as dishes, etc., are necessary. The whole group should be nicely trimmed with fresh parsley, and it is surprising, with the exercise of a little ingenuity in arrangement, what a beautiful effect can be produced, even with a collection of vegetables.

In conclusion, I would strongly urge young gardeners to give more attention to the cultivation of vegetables than now prevails. Gardeners are more equally matched as regards equipment in this line than in the culture of flowers and fruits under glass. No costly greenhouses are necessary to produce, in summer and autumn, at any rate, the most of the species. Good soil and some fertilizer, and doing the work that is to be done, at the right time—this is the main point that leads to success. A gardener that cannot produce good vegetables will find himself in difficulties with his employer sooner or later, as the majority of them like something good to eat as well as something pretty to admire in the way of plants and flowers.

ABOUT CUTWORMS.

One of the queries from the question box, "How can cutworms be destroyed?" gave place to a lively discussion at the meeting of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club on June 19 and quite a variety of remedial measures were suggested. Charles Sander started the ball rolling by stating that the surest way to get rid of them is "to catch them by the head and tail and separate them." C. W. Ward said he destroys them indoors by sterilizing all his compost used in carnation houses. It also destroys all aphis and he has very little red spider. Thrips, however, will come in from outdoors. Sterilization is expensive, but he finds it pays. A. E. Parsons said Paris green and fresh bran are relished by the worms and he has used it to good purpose. W. H. Elliott said they cause him a tremendous amount of labor and expense in his big asparagus houses. As his plants stay in the houses an average of ten years, sterilization cannot be used there. He spends $400 to $500 a year on a sort of Dalmation powder to sprinkle around and he also employs a man at night practically the year around catching and destroying them from the vines.

Peter Fisher said he has had one or two severe attacks of them at intervals of five years. He used Dalmatian powder and found it works well. Kenneth Finlayson said he has known gas lime to be used outdoors by C. M. Atkinson and others and it was claimed to be a very excellent preventive. Duncan Finlayson said he has found that cutworms, while they would eat onions ravenously, seemed to have a cordial dislike for Scotch soot; by sprinkling it on and about carnations and other crops he found the worms stopped there and went to other parts of his garden. We tried this latter remedy the past two seasons and it certainly saves carnations and violets from being chewed to pieces.

We used gas lime at the rate of 200 pounds per acre some years ago spread broadcast in the fall and found it practically cleared out the pests. It is certainly worthy a trial by any who are badly afflicted with cutworms. Hydrocyanic acid gas was tried by Peirce Bros., of Waltham, last winter in their large carnation houses. While it injured the carnations a good deal, the cutworms did not seem to mind it in the least. Dragging a bag soaked in kerosene through the rows of outdoor plants will keep the pests away. The bag needs soaking occasionally and, of course, should not come in contact with the plants. W. N. C.

Greenhouse Heating.

RADIATION REQUIRED.

Please tell me if two 2-inch overhead flows and eleven 1½-inch returns, using hot water, would be sufficient to heat a house 22x100 to 60 degrees in zero weather, with a twenty horse-power boiler. L. G. B.

The eleven 1½-inch returns supplied by 2-inch flows will not provide sufficient radiation for the house in question during severe weather. To maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in the house, with water at 180 degrees, fourteen 1½-inch pipes will be necessary. While the two 2-inch flows will have just about capacity enough to carry this amount of radiation, I believe that one 3-inch flow, which provides about 100 feet more capacity than the two 2-inch lines, will give better satisfaction. If for any reason the 3-inch riser cannot be used, the two 2-inch risers will undoubtedly do the work. L. C. C.

OVERHEAD PIPING.

I would like to inquire what will be the best method of heating three houses with hot water, each 100 feet long and fourteen feet six inches wide, without partition walls. Gutters are six feet above ground, ridge nine feet from ground. The south wall contains thirty-six inches of stationary glass; all gables are built of glass and have sash doors. The first house is about eight feet away from the boiler.

The houses run east and west, and are located east of another set of houses running west. These two sections of houses are connected with a shed eighteen feet wide and nine feet high, running north and south. As I intend to have this shed slightly heated, I am thinking of running the flow and return pipes through it from both new and old houses.

The houses are provided with solid beds twelve inches from the ground. A walk runs along each of the gutter posts, and the beds on both sides are to be tended from this walk, consequently I do not wish to obstruct the passages between the posts.

Would I get full benefit from the heat by putting the pipes on brackets directly under the gutters and having the flow pipes suspended from the ridge? The houses have no support outside of gutters, and have heavy wire to keep them from spreading. I wish all piping arranged so that it will not interfere with walks and doors. The walls of the houses are built of sheathing, double-ply building paper and drop siding, glass 16x18, top ventilation. I desire 50 or 52 degrees at 10 degrees below zero.

What size flows and returns do you consider best, and how should they be divided up? My idea was to start from the boiler with a 4-inch flow and reduce it to 3-inch for the third house, and supply each house with a 3-inch flow, running it to the highest point at the farthest end. I intended to use 2-inch returns in the houses, and empty them all into a 4-inch return through the shed to the boiler.

I should have stated that, as there is a walk along the south and north walls, piping may be attached to posts at any height, as far as obstruction is concerned.

My boiler is located six feet below the level of the greenhouses, and the present expansion tank will not be as high as the flow pipe at the highest point. It can't be raised without raising the roof of the shed; how would it do to connect another expansion tank to the return of the new houses in the adjacent shed? This would bring it eight feet away from the boiler. How large and high should an expansion tank be supplying eight houses each 17x85? C. C. W.

I have read with interest the plan you propose for arranging the heating pipes in your new houses. While I have never observed a plant piped in this manner, I see no reason why it should not give satisfaction. The only objection I would have to it is that the hot pipes would be near the heads of the workmen, which I fear would make it unpleasant.

To heat the houses that you propose by the use of a flow pipe under the ridge in each house and the returns arranged on arms or brackets on either side of the gutter, it will require a 2½-inch flow in each of the outside houses and a 2-inch flow in the center house. The outside houses should have seven returns, four on the outside wall and three on the brackets of the inside gutter, that is, if 2-inch pipe is used. The middle house can undoubtedly be heated with five 2-inch returns, three on the most exposed gutter and two on the other. The pipes arranged in this manner will obstruct some light, but probably not more than in any other position by the overhead system. The 4-inch main flow will be ample for the three houses and can be reduced from four to three inches after the middle house has been passed. The expansion tank should be large, connected direct to the main return near the boiler and located several feet, ten or twelve, above the highest point of the piping in the houses. If the height of the present potting shed will not suffice, place the tank on a platform supported on the roof, and box in the whole thing. The success of hot water under such conditions will be determined largely by the height of the expansion tank. A tank of fifty gallons should be sufficient for this plant.

L. C. C.

Columbus, O.—The Florists' Club has decided to hold another chrysanthemum show next fall. The members were led to this decision by the large number of requests received that they give another such as they had last fall. The show will probably be held in the city hall in November.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business the last week showed a considerable improvement over that of preceding weeks, thanks to calls for graduations, class days and weddings. At present too much stock is arriving, but the glut is less acute than a few weeks ago. Some very good outdoor roses still arrive, Jacqs, Brunners and Luizets being mostly seen. These make $2 to $6 per hundred. There is only a moderate supply of Beauties, but enough for all demands, and the same holds true of all other indoor roses. Carnations vary from 50 cents to $2 according to quality. These are now arriving very small. Sweet peas make good prices, anywhere from 25 to 75 cents per hundred. The outdoor supply is still limited to a few Mont Blanc, Sunbeam and Earliest of All, but the present week will see a big flood of other varieties.

Peonies are over. A few pink varieties at 25 cents to 35 cents per dozen are the only remnants left. Lily of the valley is in quite good demand at $2 to $3 per hundred. Lilies and gladioli are each rather scarce. Stocks, feverfew and cornflowers are abundant. Sweet williams are abundant but no one seems to want them. A few asters have arrived, but not enough, however, to be quotable.

Rose and Strawberry Exhibition.

While the dates selected for this show, June 22 and 23, were a few days too late for the immediate vicinity of Boston, there was a very nice display of roses, the hybrid perpetuals being much better than in 1905. As usual, the largest individual exhibitor was M. H. Walsh for the Miss S. B. Fay estate. He staged some 1,500 blooms, of his usual high quality, and captured many first premiums. Other prizes went to W. J. Clemson, J. O. Kristenson gardener; Mrs. E. M. Gill, John C. Chaffin estate, and Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher gardener.

The following were among the successful exhibitors in the various rose classes: Mrs. C. C. Converse, D. F. Roy gardener; Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener; Geo. F. Fabyan, James Stuart gardener; Mrs. E. M. Gill, W. J. Clemson, John C. Chaffin estate, Mrs. A. W. Blake, J. L. Smith gardener, and E. L. Lewis. There were a number of miscellaneous collections not for competition from F. L. Ames estate, W. N. Craig gardener; Mrs. A. W. Blake, W. J. Clemson, and others.

In white varieties Frau Karl Druschki was finely shown by Walsh and several others. Margaret Dickson was largely exhibited. It seems to do well with nearly every one. The following other sorts were especially well shown: Mrs. J. Laing, Duke of Teck, Ards Rover, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Paul Neyron, Prince Camille de Rohan, Baron de Bonstettin, Clio, Mrs. Sharman Crawford, Ulrich Brunner, Magna Charta, Anne de Diesbach and Baroness Rothschild.

W. Whitman had the best eighteen vases of sweet williams, Dr. C. G. Weld second, Wilfrid Wheeler third. Although no classes for peonies were provided there was a big display of these popular flowers, the blooms being much better than those seen a week previous at the regular peony show. T. C. Thurlow & Co. filled a table over fifty feet long with seventy-five varieties. Many of these were in large vases and the whole made a beautiful exhibit. Especially good were Marquis de Lory, Courrone d'Or, M. Dupont, Mme. Geissler, Venus, Mlle. Rousseau and Lady Alexandra Duff. E. J. Shaylor had an excellent stand of late varieties. Among them were Baroness Schrœder, Mlle. Emile Lemoine, and Harry Woodward. Dr. D. S. Minot had thirty varieties, including Milton Hill, a beautiful soft pink, Albatre and Albert Crouse. In George Hollis' collection were about thirty seedlings, some of much merit. Lucy E. Hollis, a large, flat bloom, deep pink in color, was one of the gems of the show. A. H. Fewkes, Mrs. E. M. Gill and others contributed peonies.

Mount Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, Me., had a large collection of German and other irises and a dozen fine spikes of eremuri. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher gardener, had a beautiful group of Canterbury bells in 10-inch pots. These showed splendid culture. Another good lot came from Mrs. A. W. Blake. Blue Hill Nurseries had an extensive display of hardy perennials. A smaller collection came from Mrs. J. B. Lawrence. Oakes Ames, Sabin Bolton gardener, received a certificate of merit for Cypripedium I'Ansoni (C. Rothschildianum x C. Morganiæ). Walter Hunnewell, T. O. Hatfield gardener, had an interesting collection of fourteen varieties of summer blooming chrysanthemums. Some of the best were: Horace Martin, Mons Nonin, Emily Grunnerwald, Robbie Burns, Ideal, Firelight, and Ralph Curtis, awarded a bronze medal. The same exhibitor showed roses Lenchstern and Rubin.

Marshall was once more invincible among the strawberries. The most promising new variety was Golden Gate, Marshall x Bubach, shown by Samuel H. Warren, of Weston. The fruit was as large and firm as Marshall, not so dark in color, but claimed to produce several times the crop of that variety. It is the most promising seedling shown for years and should be in big demand.

Various Notes.

Walter Angus, of Andover, in charge of the Stevens estate, leaves there to manage the Lyman estate in Waltham. He is succeeded by George Westland, late of Mount Auburn cemetery.

Some convention talk is now being indulged in and it looks as though Boston would send a good delegation to Dayton.

At the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club Alfred Poetsch was the exhibitor of the fine new heliotrope, Frau Lederle, receiving a report of merit. The same exhibitor showed Impatiens Holstei x Sultani, good either for culture in pots or bedding. Julius Heurlin showed Peony Jennie Lind and the Golden Acer Negundo Odessianum.

Daniel Iliffe reports business in his line as exceptionally good, he having on hand more than double the work he had a year ago. Some of his contracts are greenhouses for Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, Manchester, and Mrs. Joshua Crane, Westwood. He is supplying iron work for three houses 40x250, being built by Doburn & Shannon, at Woburn, to be used for violets and carnations, and for one 40x275 for Howard, of West Newton.

J. Walsh & Son, Melrose, furnished the decorations for the Morgan-Nevins nuptials at Methuen, and they were pronounced among the most beautiful seen in that section for a long time. They used among other stock 3,000 Richmond and Beauty roses, also quantities of Dorothy Perkins, fifty dozen peonies, 3,000 yards of laurel and a carload of palms.

Maurice Fuld succeeds H. E. Fiske as manager for W. W. Rawson & Co. He has been in the firm about three years and was formerly with R. & J. Farquhar & Co.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold another field day at the establishment of William Sim, Cliftondale, on June 30. A train leaves the North Union station at 2 p. m. Electric cars also can be taken. A large delegation is expected to attend and see this well kept and up-to-date place.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the peony garden of Dr. C. S. Minot, of Readville, on June 21. The collection embraces about 300 varieties and many of the later sorts were found in fine condition.

The next show at Horticultural hall occurs on July 7. Hardy roses, delphiniums, pentstemons, Iris Kæmpferi, campanulas and hardy herbaceous plants will be special features.

There are 254 entries for the prizes given by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society this year for children's gardens. Sixty per cent are from boys. There are also numerous entries for school gardens. An exhibition of their products will be held on July 7.

would have been plenty, for we got enough orders through it to take all the stock we had. We should have wired to head off the second issue, for we have been kept busy since returning money for orders we could not fill.

DETROIT, MICH.—Hugo Schroeter has gone east. He will be married June 30.

RICHMOND, IND.—G. R. Gause reports business the last season as good, spring plant trade especially so. Bedding plants sold well, especially geraniums. Outdoor stock is badly in need of a good rain, as it is very dry in this vicinity.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.—Local florists, among whom are C. L. Reese, Aldrich Floral Co., Springfield Floral Co., and McGregor Bros., donated stock for planting the grounds at the new city prison. The beds were made by Edward McIntire, superintendent at Snyder park.

LIKES 'EM BOTH.

A correspondent writes: "When Mr. Teufel called yesterday he said he liked me so well and the REVIEW so much better that he would subscribe for five years ahead, and handed me $5. Of course I did not refuse the money. Dollars to doughnuts you cannot beat that."

GENERAL BUSINESS.

"Trade in general merchandise wholesale and jobbing lines," says a financial review, "showed more activity the last week, in many instances, than is customary at this season. The large volume of reorders as well as the unusual amount of forward bookings caused an abnormally brisk business in many lines which as a general thing are dull at this season.

"Sales of fall goods were satisfactory in nearly all branches of business, and there was no let-up reported in the distribution of seasonable goods. Railway earnings showed a marked increase compared to the same week last year, indicating a continued heavy movement of general merchandise. Grain marketings were larger, especially corn. The movement of this cereal, both from first hands and for shipment east, was particularly heavy, and indications pointed to a still heavier business the coming week.

"The wholesale trade in provisions was active, shipments of cured meats being about fifty per cent larger than during the corresponding week of last year. Lard shipments also were large. Live stock was received in larger numbers than recently.

"The inquiry for all kinds of building supplies, glass, and paints and oils showed no abatement, the demand being almost unprecedented."

SPECIAL NOTICE FOURTH OF JULY

Because the Glorious Fourth, when every one celebrates, falls on Wednesday, the Review will go to press one day earlier than usual next week—on Tuesday instead of Wednesday.

Advertisers and correspondents will please take "Special Notice."

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

The secretary would like to procure for the use of the society, copies of the annual reports of the following years: 1885, Cincinnati; 1886, Philadelphia; 1887, Chicago; 1888, New York; 1892, Washington; 1896, Cleveland; 1900, New York. Members having spare copies of any of these will confer a great favor by sending them to

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

DUTY ON BIRCH BARK.

F. B. Vandegrift & Co. protested at the rate of duty assessed at Chicago on an importation of birch bark, and have established their contention that the rate should be ten per cent of the value.

The protest related to birch bark in bales, the bark being cut in sizes convenient for shipment. It was classified as wood unmanufactured under paragraph 198, tariff act of 1897. One of the contentions made by the importers was that it was dutiable under section 6 as an unenumerated unmanufactured article.

McClelland, general appraiser, June 15 held that "considering the common understanding which exists regarding the distinction between bark and wood, the provision distinctly made for these two materials in the wood and drug schedules of the tariff act and the board decisions that bark is not wood, we think the claim in the protest that the merchandise is dutiable at the rate of ten per cent ad valorem is well taken."

CATERPILLARS ON FERNS.

I am having trouble with caterpillars on my ferns. The worms are about an inch long, and are similar to the common cabbage worm. Most of them are light green; a few are brown or jet black. They attack the young ferns first, and then eat the tips of the young fronds. What insecticide should I use, and in what form? Should it be an arsenical solution of some kind? B. E.

It is not very often that this difficulty is met with, but these caterpillars are hungry feeders, and are liable to attack almost any kind of tender vegetation. There would be much risk of injury to the ferns in the use of arsenical preparations for this trouble; either solutions or powders containing arsenic in sufficient quantity to kill the worms would be liable to burn such tender foliage. I would suggest dusting the ferns with powdered hellebore, this being a vegetable poison that has little or no effect on the foliage, but is sure death to the currant worm. It is most likely to prove effective in this case.

W. H. TAPLIN.

LILIUM LONGIFLORUM.

What will be the right time to plant Lilium longiflorum multiflorum? I want them for cold storage, to be used at Christmas, also some for Easter. The house will be kept at 58 to 60 degrees at night. H. F.

This will depend on the temperature you give them, but as all cold-storage plants and bulbs are anxious to flower as soon as released from the arrestment, it should not take more than from ten to twelve weeks to have them in flower at Christmas. We have never tried to flower cold-storage bulbs as late as that date and believe the bulbs are not satisfactory when kept in cold storage after August. To have this popular lily in bloom in August, September and October we must depend on the cold-storage bulbs, but for December and later the new bulbs are quite satisfactory, and bulbs (the new crop) received in July will force easily for Christmas. Pot as soon as received and get them well rooted out of doors and covered with some decayed light material to keep them from continual drying out. Remove to the houses in early September and during October and November they should be given a temperature of 70 degrees, and if you want them by Thanksgiving they will bear 10 or 15 degrees higher; most of them in 70 degrees will be in flower at Christmas.

For Easter the Japan grown bulbs are now used almost exclusively. They seldom arrive too early and can be potted at once, placed in coldframes and protected from heavy rains by sashes or shutters. The first of December is soon enough to give them the heat of the greenhouse. The temperature you quote is about right for the last two months before Easter. As Easter is a movable date and varies as much as thirty days you must use judgment about temperature and condition of your plants.

W. S.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.—The annual rose and strawberry show of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society took place June 14. Most of the private estates contributed and the result was a most pleasing exhibition.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The C. C. Pollworth Co. has recently received four carloads of palms imported direct. J. E. Pollworth says that in all their experience they never have received imported stock in more satisfactory condition.

BOUND BROOK, N. J.—Anton C. Zvolanek reports a heavy hailstorm June 23, coming from the northwest. The stones were an inch and a half in diameter, and did much damage to greenhouses around Plainfield, N. J. At Bound Brook, the town is protected by mountains to the northwest, and the storm did little damage.

Beauties...

Our Beauties are easily the best in this market and we believe it will be difficult to find their equal anywhere in the United States in this warm weather. They are in every way as good as our famous crop last summer—and most Beauty buyers know what that means. Mostly long stems.

PEONIES—We handle the best stock in town—choicest varieties, cut right, bunched right, handled right—in any quantity. Will have them all through June.

KAISERINS—The Kaiserin is the only really good summer rose. We have them in large quantity—fine stock in every respect.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

In the cut flower market the total of sales has been footing up a fair figure during the last week, but there is an absence of life in the demand which is discouraging to the wholesalers. Country orders are fairly numerous, but the city buyers are listless; they do not seem to care whether or not they get the stock they ask for. They are almost unanimous in reporting the business this June as not so good as a year ago, and quite a number of the wholesalers concur. Those who are able to report an increase are the ones who are fortunate in having some special crop, as Beauties or summer roses, or an especially good lot of peonies.

The supply of Beauties has not increased to any considerable degree, but demand has fallen away so that there are now ample quantities for all and prices were weakening when, on Tuesday, a bracing was apparent. Kaiserin sells well although some good Brides are now seen. A number of houses are cutting roses from young stock and a steady if slow improvement in quality may be anticipated. Liberty continues to afford large crops for several growers.

Carnations are much less plentiful than a week ago, and quality averages a little better because the houses which were yielding poor stock have been thrown out preparatory to replanting. Prices are, therefore, averaging better than last week.

The peony is still the leading flower. Some of those in cold storage are not keeping well and are being rushed on the market, but there is every prospect for all the peonies the trade can use prior to July 15. Prices have taken a tumble, although some special fancy stock still makes 75 cents and occasionally $1 per dozen; 25 to 50 cents is the popular range.

Monday morning brought large receipts of candidum lilies, which were started off at $1 per bunch of fifty flowers. There are more longiflorums than are needed. Auratum is plentiful but not pressing for a market. Pond lilies, which have sold well, are now down to the summer price of 25 cents per bunch. The push for valley has subsided. Gladioli are seen in considerable quantity and are not brisk sellers.

There is abundance of green stock of all kinds.

Early Closing.

Beginning next Monday, July 2, all the wholesale cut flower and supply houses will close at 5 p. m. Those who want stock should bear this fact in mind and get in their orders in season.

Mail Deliveries.

Monday morning several wholesalers received mail orders for stock which should have been shipped on Sunday. Investigation shows the following condition will prevail until September 1: The post-office makes no delivery Saturday after 12 o'clock. The mail to be had by calling for it Sunday morning is only that which reached the post-office Saturday afternoon. The mail received on Sunday is not distributed until Monday morning; even that mail reaching the city Saturday afternoon is not to be had until 11:30 Sunday morning, which is almost too late for the wholesalers to do anything in the matter of supplying stock.

Cold Storage.

The cold-storage warehouse is becoming an important adjunct of the flower business. First it was only hardy ferns which were stored, but now all sorts of green stuff are kept indefinitely under cold storage. For a half dozen years the storing of peonies has been an important detail of the season's business. Last year the A. L. Randall Co. stored a large part of the season's cut of candidum lilies and found it so successful that the same operation is being done this year. Candidums are put in with the peonies, at about 34 to 36 degrees, and will keep nearly a month in salable, useable condition.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is using a cold-storage warehouse for longiflorum lilies. They do not undertake to keep them more than a few days, but whenever they get an accumulation at the store, they run them over to the warehouse until the pressure lets up. These, too, go in with the peonies.

Florists' Club's Picnic.

The Chicago Florists' Club held its most successful picnic at Joliet, Sunday, June 24. Nearly 200 people went down on the special train at 9:45 over the C. R. I. & P. The special was delayed about an hour, due to a freight wreck on the road. Finally Cherry Hill was reached and the party was met by seven large wagons especially fitted up for the occasion, which made a tour of about four miles through the Forest of Arden, and around the beautiful estate of Mr. Higinbotham. Arrived at the picnic grounds which had been especially selected for the occasion, lunch was spread, during which ice cream and various drinks were served by the committee. The sports then began and much enjoyment was derived, both by participants and spectators. Valuable prizes were provided for the winners in each event. P. J. Foley presented the prizes and tried to get a number of the ladies to make speeches, but they were too busy comparing notes on their trophies.

It was conceded by all who have attended the club outings of the past to be the most successful outing the club has ever given. Everybody enjoyed himself and much credit should be given the entertainment committee for its hard work in bringing about such a successful affair. Also the thanks of the club should be extended to Mr. Higinbotham for his kind invitation to use his grounds, and much credit is due Mr. Hartshorne for the admirable arrangements made. Just before the train started for the return trip three cheers were given for Mr. Hartshorne and they were given with a will.

The winners in the different events were as follows:

Baseball game, Wholesalers, 19; Retailers, 16; trophy, a silver cup.

Race for boys under 16, Edgar Winterson first, Leo Simon second.

Race for girls under 16, Ruth Simmons first, Florence Ferguson second.

Race for married ladies, Mrs. L. H. Winterson, Mrs. McKee, Mrs. Balluff and Mrs. Weirman each were awarded a prize, as the referee declared it a dead heat.

Race for girls over 16, Miss M. Dupree first, Miss O. A. Tonner second.

Sack race, Julius Haskins first, James McKeand second.

Men's 100-yard dash, J. Haskins first, A. E. Ebeling second.

Fat men's race, John Poehlmann first, Mr. Heinlein second.

Broad jump, Mr. Koropp first, Mr. Hirsch second.

Special event, babies' race, Beatrice Asmus first; prize, a gold ring.

Various Notes.

The superior court has reversed a judgment of $1,500 against the Mount Greenwood Cemetery. July 12, 1901, a lady walking across-lots in the cemetery stepped into an open pipe and sustained injuries for which she sued for damages. The lower court found for her, but the higher court sustained Mr. Rudd's contention that any one departing from the beaten paths does so at his own risk.

J. E. Jensen has received word that his partner, J. S. Dekema, has arrived safely at his old home in Europe where he will visit for a couple of months.

Three local wholesalers and at least three local growers ride in their own automobiles. One of the gentlemen says he never has had the throttle on his machine more than half open, which is rather surprising in view of the fact that he is a commission man, and commission men may generally be counted on to run things at full pressure. However, it may be said that at half speed the machine is capable of doing a number of things to the legal limit.

We have taken for seven months and many times have found things in it that pay for it over and over. We can say that we wouldn't get along without it now.

MASON BROS.

Salem, Ore.

June 8, 1906.

Sharp, Partridge & Co. have been doing a fine business in greenhouse glass this season and have been compelled to seek larger quarters. They have removed their warehouse to 2264 and 2272 Lumber street, where they have exceptional facilities for handling their trade. They make a specialty of greenhouse glass and Lester E. Partridge, who is widely known to the trade, says he is more than satisfied with the season's business. Glass factories have gone out of blast for the season and Sharp, Partridge & Co. take much pleasure in the fact that they have 4,000 boxes of greenhouse sizes still in the warehouse.

Wietor Bros. are planting quite a number of a new pink chrysanthemum named Cash. It speaks for ready money in October.

Will Kyle of the J. B. Deamud Co., says that they have as yet felt no let-up in the demand.

F. C. Struvy returned a fortnight ago from his trip to California. His daughter's wedding took place last week.

E. E. Pieser says that although the Kennicott Bros. Co. has more peonies in storage than ever before at so late a date, he never felt more confident of a satisfactory clean-up.

A. L. Randall Co. is receiving its annual crop of candidum lilies from L. M. McClave, St. Joseph, Mich. The quality is superior.

Ranson Kennicott fell down the elevator shaft at the Western Cold Storage warehouse one day last week. Fortunately the fall was only a few feet, but he has been laid up ever since.

A. Kennicott & Son expect to be sold out of peonies before the end of this week.

Matt Mann is sending some superior Lawson carnations to Zech & Mann. His crop of red gladioli was unsatisfactory again this year, about half coming blind.

Stollery Bros. are sending a large crop of candidum lilies to the Chicago Rose Co.

John Sinner and N. J. Wietor started Tuesday evening for their fortnight's piscatorial expedition.

George Wagner, in speaking of the falling off in the local retail trade, says that people who formerly used flowers for dinners, receptions, etc., are now spending their time automobiling.

Bassett & Washburn report an exceptionally good June, due to their large cut of summer roses.

Weiland & Risch are cutting some fine Brides and Maids for summer. Mr. Risch, Sr., has been laid up with rheumatism for a week.

KENNICOTT BROS. CO., 40-42-44 RANDOLPH STREET, Chicago

E. H. Hunt's are showing the silver cup won by the wholesalers at Sunday's ball game. They had two men on the team. The retailers already have asked for a return match.

Vaughan & Sperry say that next year they will have more peonies. For a month the peony is king of this market.

E. F. Winterson Co. reports quite satisfactory results with peonies. Two late crops totaled 116,000 buds. All had to be rebunched and it made a lot of work.

Jens Jensen, superintendent of the west parks, has recommended John Algots to succeed P. H. Rapp as superintendent of small parks, and he has a temporary appointment. Mr. Algots was formerly gardener for Mrs. Pullman, but resigned about four years ago to go into the hardware business.

"Please omit flowers" is the funereal message that once more has been sent out by the board of education to the principals of the public high schools where commencement exercises are to be held today and Friday. If flowers are sent to "sweet girl graduates," they must be sent to their homes.

THE REVIEW has done more than I can tell to help me to a working knowledge of the flower business.—H. C. SMITH, Roseland, B. C.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade last week was fairly busy in retail circles, with work for the last of the school closings and a few late weddings. This week we expect to see midsummer conditions fully established among the retailers all over the city. From reports around the wholesale houses Monday morning there was practically nothing going on, and funeral work is about all that any of us expect.

The receipts of flowers at the wholesale houses have fallen off, especially in first-class roses, and enough of the others come in to supply the light demand. With the exception of a few special Beauties there is practically no fixed value on roses. Ammann is still sending some extra fine Ivory, which find ready sale.

There are still a fair lot of carnations coming in, white and Enchantress. Lawson is coming in poor, very much off in color and doesn't bring over $1 per hundred. Sweet peas are many and in all varieties, and are selling very low in large lots. Fancy long in lavender and white find ready sale, while short mixed colors are jobbed off cheap. Lily of the valley is selling slowly. A few asters are coming in and sell well. Other outdoor stock is slow. Fancy ferns are scarce with a good demand.

Various Notes.

George Windler, who has been very sick for the last six weeks, is out again and his many friends in the trade are pleased to see him.

W. J. Pilcher has sold his place in Kirkwood to August P. Schiedegger, who was formerly employed by Venneman at Kirkwood. Mr. Schiedegger will continue growing carnations, violets and sweet peas for the local trade.

C. C. Sanders, Frank A. Weber and J. H. Schuette, our nurserymen who attended the Dallas convention, returned home Thursday morning much pleased with their trip. What pleased them most was the badger game, as played by Col. S. E. Moss. Frank Weber was seen to take notes of the game and it may be that it will be played at the club's outing next month.

William Bouche, the landscape gardener, has the Park View place on Delmar in fine shape. The results show Mr. Bouche to be one of the best men in the city for that kind of work.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, was over on Saturday buying a big lot of sweet peas for a wedding order.

ing two new houses 30x100 near his home in Kirkwood, to be planted in carnations and violets for the local market.

The Ellison Floral Co., at Grand and Olive, is moving this week to its new location, 4511 Olive street, which is being specially built for them.

Martin Malen is no longer connected with the Mrs. M. M. Ayers establishment. Martin is looking for a location to start in for himself.

Kalisch & Sons, at Taylor and Delmar avenues, will rebuild one of their show houses this summer. The boys report a good plant trade this season.

A. G. Greiner will hold a grand opening this week at his place, 4419 Natural Bridge road. He has a large number of new cactus plants to show the public.

William C. Smith & Co., brokers, are having a nice run on Boston ferns, flower pots and cut flower boxes with the local trade. They report a nice general business in all lines.

It has been reported that the Florists' Club's annual outing next month will be held on this side of the river this year. Now that Frank Weber has returned home the trustees will hold a meeting and arrange a program, so as to make a full report of it at the club meeting July 12. This meeting is to take place in Edwardsville, Ill.

OBITUARY.

J. P. Coen, Jr., Lexington, Mo.

John Peter Coen, Jr., aged nearly 50 years, died June 24. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Coen and was born in Albany, N. Y., November 4, 1856. The family came to Lafayette county a few years later. In 1888 Mr. Coen was married to Miss Charlotte Johanna Voigt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Voigt, of Houstonia, Missouri.

In 1888 Mr. Coen engaged in the business of florist, his first place of business being on Twenty-fourth street near South. About twelve years ago he built a home on South Eighteenth street and greatly enlarged his business, which he has conducted with eminent success. Close application to his work began to tell on his health several years ago, and though he sought every available means of relief, he grew steadily worse. For nearly a year he has entertained but little hope of his recovery. Mr. Coen was highly esteemed in the community as a man of fraternal spirit and as a business man of integrity and ability.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held Wednesday evening, June 13, with President Harrison in the chair. The meeting was well attended. Two new members were elected and one nominated to active membership. In this respect the society is most progressive, as at every monthly meeting since its formation new members have been elected.

The floral exhibits this month were confined chiefly to roses, of which some grand blooms were staged. The prize for twelve varieties of outdoor grown roses was awarded to H. F. Meyers. In the scale of points class, A. Mackenzie scored ninety-eight points with a vase of delphiniums, collection of strawberries and dish of peaches; L. Trepess, ninety-six and two-thirds for vases of carnations, Canterbury bells and roses; I. Swen, eighty-three for lettuce; and C. Lenker, seventy-eight for peonies and roses.

C. Bertanzel gave some interesting and practical remarks on growing American Beauty roses, which were attentively heard. They will be followed at the next meeting by a more exhaustive paper on the same subject.

A box of cigars for sweet peas in three varieties, twenty-five of each, will be competed for at the next meeting.

SCARBORO, N. Y.

The F. R. Pierson Co. plant at Scarboro is well worth a visit nowadays and, with its addition of over thirty acres of nursery and the cleaning up and planting of these, combined with the erection of two enormous greenhouses containing some 50,000 square feet of glass, the busy scene is a revelation. The purchase of the real estate was a most profitable enterprise, its value literally doubling in a night. The view up and down the Hudson from its elevation is entrancing. The new houses will make a plant of nearly a quarter of a million square feet under glass. The Winsor carnation will be extensively grown and the White Lawson and Helen Gould largely, with Mr. Pierson's other specialties, but Winsor will get the lion's share.

In the nursery are grand specimens of retinospora, Japanese maples, blue spruce and everything else of value in the ornamental line. Mr. Pierson will have a fine exhibit at Dayton. His work with the schools and philharmonic and other societies make him one of the busiest men in Tarrytown. Samuel Murray, of Kansas City, was a visitor here June 22.

SCRANTON, PA.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed June 18 against F. W. Wilson, trading at 411 Spruce street, as the Reliable Seed and Floral Co. The petition was filed by Attorney A. V. Bower, who represents J. L. Dillon, the Roseville Pottery Co., the Foote & Shear Co., and others. Wilson admits his insolvency and declares that he will not oppose the petition.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There is a fair amount of business at times, but the tendency is towards dullness. The supply is falling off rather faster than the demand. These ideas sum up briefly the conditions as seen in the wholesale centers. Compared with past years there is rather more business than usual during the last of June. While the quality of stock coming in is below that of two weeks ago, there is still a fair amount of flowers of good grade. Among the roses, Kaiserin, Bridesmaid, Liberty and Beauty are best. Among the carnations, Ethel Crocker, Mrs. Lawson, Prosperity, Gov. Wolcott, Boston Market, and Flora Hill are the leading sorts. Cattleyas are fine. Valley is also good. Sweet peas, from late sown seed, are at their best, the colors being very fine. Irises can be had in quantity. There are some candidum lilies about. Shipping business is fairly good.

Various Notes.

D. Fuerstenberg, president of the Floral Exchange, heartily endorses Phil's use of the word "profession," as applied to florists. Mr. Fuerstenberg believes that ours is a profession, the various branches requiring knowledge of art, literature, science, chemistry, entomology, etc., as applied to the growth and disposal of plants and flowers.

D. T. Connor has secured for the Lord & Burnham Co. an order from the Wilmington and Brandywine Cemetery Co. to build a greenhouse 20x50 feet, and also to heat their present plant. As Mr. Connor aptly says, he is very much alive.

The steamers Polanza and Manitou have reached port this week with large consignments of fall novelties for H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

The advance in the price of ice is quite an item of increased expense to florists during the summer.

The wholesale price of tin-foil and wire is advancing, owing to the conditions in the metal market.

Arthur A. Niessen has been appointed trustee for the estate of Charles P. Poryzees, bankrupt.

M. Rice reports that there is a general awakening abroad and that the cost of merchandise is continually advancing, but owing to the large orders he placed, he succeeded in buying goods at attractive prices and getting control of some exclusive novelties.

The Florists' Club is planning a reception to Hugh Dickson, of Belfast, Ireland, who is the guest of Robert Scott & Son.

Herbert G. Tull, treasurer of the Henry A. Dreer Co., met with a sad loss last week, in the death of his son, a lad of 16 years. A shocking railroad accident was the cause.

John Lucas & Co. advise intending purchasers of glass to secure at once what may be needed during the summer. The conditions in the glass market point to further advances.

Through a clerical error last week, the price of cattleyas in Samuel S. Pennock's card appeared as 40 cents per dozen instead of 40 cents each.

Charles Henry Fox has experienced an excellent demand for choice stock at his artistic Sign of the Rose. His manager, William Harry, states that business has lasted longer this season than usual.

Florists generally believed that their coal bills would be much smaller during the season of 1905 and 1906 than for many years previous. A very cold spring made the saving less than was anticipated.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving choice Spanish irises, blue, white and yellow, and large white irises.

Charles E. Meehan moved his family to Ocean City, N. J., last Thursday.

Frank Ely, manager of the seed department for the Henry F. Michell Co., is arranging more commodious quarters on the second floor of the company's store at 1018 Market street, where his department will have increased facilities, made necessary by the growth of the business.

Everybody has been asking William J. Muth whether he is any relation to Freddie.

M. Rice & Co. close at 5 p. m. on weekdays and 1 p. m. on Saturdays during the summer.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Robert Craig Co. was held Monday afternoon, June 25. The report showed the business to be in a healthy condition and a semiannual dividend of three per cent was declared, payable June 30. The following officers and directors were elected: President, Robert Craig; vice-president, George Craig; secretary and treasurer, Robert A. Craig; directors, H. F. Michell, Charles Keller, Samuel C. NEW YORK.

The Market.

Business was pretty fair last week, especially towards the end. All good stock brought fair prices. There wasn't much of it. The weddings were abundant and will be this week. One retailer said it was the best June he ever had, and all the retailers have been busy. This week should be the banner one of the month. All the schools are closing. The steamer travel is enormous. All the big boats are crowded and every one of them has oceans of flowers when it sails away.

Beauties hold well, all things considered, the shipments being large and the demand from out of town stronger than usual. There must be some weddings in Baltimore, Philadelphia, Buffalo and other villages. Orchids, too, are called for continually. Arthur Newell says the bon tons out Kansas City way are beginning to ask for them.

New York's orchid market will be none too well supplied for the call as the months roll on. In a year I predict the use of double the quantity grown today. There never will be a surplus of good orchids. Carrillo & Baldwin, over in Secaucus, have had some fine importations and are moving along rapidly at their new place there. McManus handles daily the fine shipments of Lager & Hurrell.

Brides and Maids were firm and scarce. On Saturday, $4 per hundred was easily obtained for good stock. Carnations, too, advanced quite a little, good flowers touching $1.50 readily. The supply is decreasing. Plenty of branches of Crimson Ramblers are here and only sell when well flowered and brilliant in color.

The south is again in evidence with gladioli in fine condition. They go rapidly and at fair prices. Soon the local growers will have their innings. The water lilies are expected daily.

Lilies are in every window, superb stock generally, some, however, showing the effects of the heat and too soft for endurance. The price is below expectations.

Everybody must be growing sweet peas. They are very abundant and prices have retrograded fifty per cent. Peonies have departed. All the popular ferns are largely used for window dressing, Elegantissima, Whitmanii and Scottii being most favored. Some beautiful banks of these are on exhibition.

Various Notes.

Small's window is fitted up as a water lily display, with fountain effect and a beautiful collection of all the best varieties in many colors that prove a constant attraction to the passing crowd.

Van Praag has introduced combination baskets of flowers and fruit that sell very rapidly and are most temptingly arranged.

Donohoe reports a great demand for steamer baskets and boxes, from out of town as well as locally, and has had some busy weeks in this department since the exodus to Europe began.

J. M. Keller and family, of Bay Ridge, arrive this week from their European tour by the steamer Frederick der Grosse.

Frank H. Traendly, of Traendly & Schenck, has purchased a beautiful home at 991 Ocean avenue, Brooklyn, where he and his family are now residing.

J. M. Thorburn & Co. are busy moving into their big store on Barclay street, next door to the Yokohama Nursery Co. and Rhotert & Sons, and across the way from H. Frank Darrow, successor to Aug. Rhotert, and not far from H. H. Berger & Co., Stumpp & Walter Co. and Ralph M. Ward & Co. Concentration seems to be the watchword here.

J. J. Perkins & Son have their big ice-box established at 50 West Twenty-eighth street and will be ready for business there on July 1. Geo. Cotsonas & Co. say the move to this address has already proved most satisfactory. Close at hand is A. J. Fellouris & Co., and across the street N. Lecakes & Co. Here, too, the fern and galax men demonstrate the value of concentration.

the wholesalers and retailers materializes slowly. Perhaps July 1 may see a general progress in this direction. It is time and if the majority will have the courage of its opinions the recalcitrants will soon follow.

Nearly everybody is going to the outing Monday. Those who fail, young or old, will miss "the time of their lives." The program of sports is large and the prizes are liberal. All the children are to be especially remembered. The ladies' bowling experts, fifteen of them, will win mementoes worth preserving. Some $250 altogether will be distributed during the afternoon. Tugs of war, baseball games and every kind of race will be pulled off. Music and dancing, swimming and a big dinner with a delightful sail up the sound leave nothing to be desired. Be at the boat, foot of East Thirty-first street, before 10 o'clock Monday morning. Don't miss it.

Among the travelers to the old country last week and this were Mr. Mellstrom, of Sander & Sons, and J. H. Taylor and Mrs. Taylor, of Bayside, L. I.

Committeeman John B. Nugent reports no decision as to the route for the Dayton special. The interest in the S. A. F. convention is growing daily, and there is no doubt a carload will maintain the reputation of New York. The bowling representation is still an enigma. Never was so little interest taken in the sport as this season. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

STEVENS POINT, WIS.—W. E. Macklin has announced that his greenhouse will be closed on Sunday afternoons during the summer months, and only funeral orders will be filled.

DAVENPORT, IA.

The members of the Tri-City Florists' Association were entertained June 14, afternoon and evening, by Adolph Arp and H. G. Bryant, the new proprietors of the Davenport Nursery. The florists spent several hours going over the 100 acres of land occupied by the establishment and were greatly surprised at its magnitude. Supper was served at Mr. Bryant's home and in the evening a regular meeting was held. A greater portion of the time was taken up by the members in telling of the sunny sides of their business. Sam Horton and several others entertained the members by relating humorous incidents they had encountered during their experience and the evening was very much enjoyed. Further plans for the picnic which the association will hold at the Watch Tower June 28 were also made.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

Weather conditions are much better than earlier in the season. The elements seem to be getting down to their regular habits. Carnations in the field are in fine condition, and young roses are coming along nicely. Sweet peas are nearly all in, while asters are just coming in. Vincas, the staple crop here for funeral work, are commencing to bloom, as are also tuberoses and gladioli. Sufficient rain has fallen to keep things growing nicely.

Mr. Goree, of Whitewright, is busily engaged in harvesting his immense berry crop, and reports things in his town as very satisfactory. Mr. Goree is arranging matters with the view of increasing his glass, intending to grow more extensively. A visit to his place is a great pleasure.

The Byrne Floral Co. is a new firm, organized at Sherman May 21. They will engage in the growing of general greenhouse stock for retail trade, and in landscape work. The officers of the new firm are: F. A. Byrne, president and manager; F. R. Grant, treasurer. Contracts have been let for three houses 22x100, and this equipment will be increased to three times as many next spring. The office building is already nearly completed and the firm is only waiting for the greenhouse material to arrive before commencing work in earnest. NARCISSUS.

NOT NEMATODES.

The center beds in my greenhouses are solid, about four feet in depth. Nematodes have taken possession of them and up to this time defy all attempts to dislodge them. I have sterilized them to no effect. As a last resort I took out the dirt to a depth of twenty-four inches and covered the old soil with several thicknesses of newspaper. In two months' time the worms appeared on the surface of the new soil. What can I put on the old soil remaining in the beds after two feet of soil has been removed to kill the worms? W. F. P.

I am afraid you are a little mixed on the nematode question. The nematode is a very minute insect which can only be seen under a powerful microscope. They attack the roots of plants, causing the growth of small galls, which form an obstruction to the flow of sap, the supply of which being cut off soon causes the plants to assume an unhealthy appearance. The first indication of their presence is the appearance of yellow foliage, followed by weakness of the young growth, and finally the general debility of the plant.

The worm you have on the surface of the soil must belong to another family. Just what it is, or what harm it may cause the plants, I am unable to say, unless I have a minute description of it. A good many kinds of so-called worms are conveyed to the soil through manure. With others, the eggs are in the soil, where they have been deposited by the mother insect previous to its being taken into the greenhouse. If the soil were left outdoors they would naturally lie dormant through the winter and hatch out when the warm summer weather arrives. Under the congenial atmosphere of the greenhouse they will, of course, hatch out through the winter months. Few of these insects, however, prove very destructive to plant life, though the presence of some are not at all desirable in the greenhouse. Usually a sprinkling of air-slaked lime well mixed through the soil will destroy them in the more tender stages of their growth and it would be a good thing to apply the lime just before taking the soil into the greenhouse. A good sprinkling over the surface of the old soil will, no doubt, be also beneficial. W. S. Croydon.

STORMS on Long Island June 23 did quite some damage to crops.

TURNIPS are lagging. The prospect is not favorable for a good clean-up.

THE latest word from California is not reassuring on the question of onion seed.

HEAVY rains in Michigan have added to the worries of the bean and pea growers.

RAIN June 27 was very welcome to some of the growers of onion sets in the Chicago territory.

THUS far, which is not a great way in the season, everything is lovely with the Nebraska vine-seed growers.

THE Connecticut growers of sweet corn and onion report themselves as well pleased with present conditions.

E. L. HESS has charge of a Chicago branch recently established by the Pure Culture Spawn Co., Pacific, Mo.

THE radish crops for seed in southern Michigan are looking well and give promise of good yields. The acreage slowly increases.

SPINACH seed for midseason planting promises to be equal to all demands of the gardeners in spite of last autumn's reports of a probable scarcity.

J. M. THORBURN & Co., New York, list Watsonia Ardernei in their 1906 catalogue and, referring to the article on this plant in the REVIEW of June 14, say they expect to make a considerable reduction in price for 1907.

BY act of the French minister of justice, on May 26, Jacques Hasslach, native of Switzerland, was appointed a French citizen. Mr. Hasslach, founder and partner in the firm of Hasslach & Roumanille, has, during his twenty-three years' residence in France, constantly occupied his time with the growing and improvement of seeds, and has taken an active part in developing the exports of southern grown products to other countries and to the expansion of the cultivation of vegetable and agricultural seeds in the south of France.

by some weeks of drought and east wind, with occasional frosts, and now when at last the rains have descended and milder weather has supervened we have had such an overdose that the work has been rather hindered than helped thereby.

Of biennial vegetable crops, cabbages are looking well, but kohl rabi has suffered considerably from frost and dry weather in early spring. Carrots and beets are standing well in some parts and in others only middling. Leeks look healthy so far, but onions are not up to the mark, owing to the imperfect ripening of the bulbs last summer. Of mangels many of the young plants were frozen and the plantations will be much more limited than was expected.

Among spring sown articles peas, spinach and lettuce are coming along all right, while French beans are only just pushing through. Radishes have suffered a good deal through drought and

SEEDSMEN'S CONVENTION.

Toledo, O., June 27.—The twenty-fourth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association opened in the Boody House yesterday morning. The meeting was called to order by President W. H. Grenell, of Saginaw, who complimented the association on the unusually large attendance. More than 100 members were present. Besides these there are several present whose business is allied in some way to the seed trade. Many of the members have their families and the number of visitors present ranges from 175 to 225.

The opening session, after an address of welcome by Mayor Whitlock, was devoted to routine matters, the hearing of reports of officers and committees. A number of new members were elected. The members enrolled with Stenographer Brown and were each given numbered badges. By referring to the roster one can ascertain the identity of the wearer of any number. The scheme works so well that doubtless a numbered badge book will be published, similar to that of the nurserymen. The S. A. F. is to try the same plan in August.

"The convention promises to be a most successful affair," said Secretary C. E. Kendel. "There are more delegates present on the opening day than at any previous gathering."

On Tuesday W. W. Tracy, of the department of agriculture, read his paper on "Varietal Description of Garden Vegetables." The afternoon session was held on the floor of the Produce Exchange, adjournment having been taken from the Boody House, where the parlor was too small.

The entertainment committee, consisting of C. S. Burge, W. T. Phillips and F. W. Jeager, took the visitors for a ride on the steamer Greyhound Tuesday evening. Refreshments were served. The entertainment, in fact, began on Monday evening, when an informal reception was held for the early arrivals.

Today's program consists of a paper by Burnet Landreth, one by Henry Nungesser, and one by J. H. McFarland. The press agent of the National Council of Horticulture has a report, in brief that which was recently published in the Review. Finley Acker, of Philadelphia, is not present, but sent his paper, one originally delivered before the retail branch of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce.

This evening there is to be a banquet at the Zenobia. Thursday afternoon the delegates will attend the Louisville-Toledo baseball game and Thursday evening the vaudeville performance at the Farm theater.

Next year will be celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organizing of the association, and as New York was the birthplace of the society, it is proposed to have the quarter-centennial celebration held there.

Notes from Erfurt.

There is nothing of a phenomenal nature to report from this section. The snowy weather of March was followed insect pests, but the present rainfall, if not excessive, will it is hoped work a considerable improvement in this crop. It is too early to say anything about cauliflowers.

winter stocks and double wallflowers now on the stages are looking strong, but in the fields the single wallflowers might look better. Forget-me-nots have also not developed as they should and only half a crop is expected. Of pansies a large proportion of the summer-sown plants have perished, and the spring plantations will require exceptionally favorable weather to make up for the deficiency, as they are by no means such certain seed bearers as the former. Hollyhocks are not in very promising shape, but campanulas, sweet williams and primulaceous plants have on the other hand come through well.

Perennials in general have done better and mostly look in good condition, though a little backward. Annuals, both from autumn and spring sowings, are coming up nicely, and sweet peas have made a satisfactory start. Planting-out operations have been sadly delayed by the weather, quite ten or twelve days, asters being hardly yet in the ground, as little can be done when our soil is in a sodden condition.

The persistent moist and cloudy weather is also somewhat affecting the foundation of the greenhouse plants, such as cinerarias. For calceolarias, coleuses and large-flowering petunias, too, a return of drier and warmer weather is quite a desideratum at the present moment.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

Business in Mark Lane, London, is now chiefly on turnip and swedes. A few late parcels of clovers and grasses are on offer and prices are still high. Warehouses are cleaner of stock, both in England and all over the continent, than they have been for some years. Certainly no surplus is reported and in some cases a heavy shortage is spoken of.

A journey through Lincolnshire and Cambridgeshire, principal turnip and swede growing counties in England, was somewhat of a surprise; these crops have improved wonderfully and are now looking first-class. If the acreage were not so exceptionally small the supply of these articles would be above the average next harvest. In Essex the pea crops also have improved marvelously. The acreage of peas is smaller than usual, though fields are running fine and bid fair to yield a heavy crop, but of peas more than anything else nothing can be depended on until the seed is in the sack.

Windsor and longpod beans all over England are wretchedly short and weak and probably a very short harvest will result.

Germany reports a much improved appearance in nearly all crops, although the articles which have had to go through the winter in the open can never recover the losses caused by weather, and all such must give a very light return.

Beet and mangel in France are still reported as being weak and very gappy, and in some instances continue to fail. Crops in these two lines look likely to be short all over Europe. The few fields I have seen of mangels in England are very weak and thin; in fact, I never saw them looking so poor.

Germany has placed a high tax on cabbages imported from Holland. The district to the north of Haarlem grows many hundreds of acres for this German trade and I understand the whole cultivation is stopped; the land is to be planted with Dutch bulbs in most instances, and the former cabbage growers are buying stock, principally tulips. This appears to be one of the causes of Dutch bulbs being so high in price this year.

Further reports are to hand of the terrible destruction wrought by Vesuvius. Most of the begonia, stocks, aster, balsam, etc., are partially or wholly destroyed. Cauliflower seed growers in some cases are almost ruined. The lettuce, bean and radish fields were hard hit, while onions are in an even worse plight. J. B.

FRENCH SEED CROPS.

In the last issue of his Bulletin, Mr. Gorgeot states that the retail trade has been very difficult this season, in consequence of the extraordinary fluctuations of the weather. The seed sowing season, which may be ordinarily said to last three months, was this year contracted to two, by the fact that the condition of the soil absolutely prohibited sowing during quite four weeks of the time.

Vegetation is, as a whole, about a fortnight behind the calendar; but so far, no really serious injury has been caused, and with a genial summer to follow, the prospects would not be unfavorable. Of course, no one looks for a record crop, and this is probably strengthening the hands of those growers who are standing out for better contract prices, many items having, according to their account, been grown at a loss for some years past.—Horticultural Advertiser.

JAPANESE BULB CROP.

London, England.—I have just received a crop report from Yokohama, of Japan lilies. I should think on reading same the supply will be even shorter than last year and prices, if anything, higher. The demand also in England seems to be double the extent of last year, and all growers, especially for longiflorum multiflorum, are making their arrangements for supplies fully three months earlier than previous years. This is no doubt caused by so many buyers not getting delivery of half the quantity they arranged for last year, but it has the effect of very considerably stiffening the price of stocks held by the dealers. Such prices as £10 per thousand for 7x9 longiflorum multiflorum are being freely obtained in and around London. J. B.

WESTERN NEW YORK.

The seed merchants have cleaned out, with almost the single exception of corn. Why this should be such a good stayer, except on account of luxuriant crops last year, is a conundrum. Crosman, Briggs, Vick and Cushman, at Rochester, are contented with the results of the season, and when seedsmen feel satisfied and do not fail to say so, there must be some bottom to the story. James Vick's Sons filled one order for 9,000 dahlia roots for one house, their own raising at Despatch, where their growing and trial grounds are situated. They are busy at Despatch, planting asters, and nearly twenty-five per cent more acreage has been set aside for these plants. Besides the branching sorts, Mikado, Violet King (novelty), Lavender Gem, Daybreak and others of their own origination have been allotted large swaths. F. S. P.

NEW CUMBERLAND, PA.

John A. Kepner, who has a range of seven greenhouses here, and who does a general retail business, is contemplating an addition of five new houses to his present equipment. In addition to his business here, Mr. Kepner has floral bazaars at 116 South Second street, Harrisburg, Pa., and at 159 South Front street, Steelton, Pa. He is also interested in the Louella hotel at Atlantic City, N. J.

FORT WORTH, TEX.

Greenhouse owners were heavy losers in the hail storm which visited this section June 20. L. Cowell, of McAdams & Cowell, who own a large plant near Fairmount Hill, said that one-third the glass in their houses was broken and considerable damage done to the stock inside. He estimated the loss at $350 to $400 on glass and $50 on stock.

George Ellison, whose greenhouses are at Magnolia and Henderson streets, places his loss at $400. His plants, both inside and outside, were badly damaged. Mr. Ellison says that this storm was the worst since about 1880.

At Riverside the nurseries and greenhouses suffered much less severely. Robert Baker, of Baker Bros., said that 694 panes were broken from their houses. Mr. Baker said the storm was much less severe there than in the city. Some fruit was knocked off and a few trees twisted and broken, but the damage to the plant would not exceed $50. Roses and other flowers outside the houses were but little hurt.

At the plant of the Drumm Seed and Floral Co. the damage seems to have been more, Mr. Drumm saying that his loss would be nearly $250. Much glass was broken on their houses and the fruit trees badly beaten.

MADISON, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its regular monthly meeting June 13. President John Heeremans read a paper on "Vegetables for Exhibition." It was fully appreciated, the speaker receiving a rising vote of thanks. Mr. Heeremans' remarks were timely and the fact that he is one of our prominent exhibitors added weight to his words. Thirty-four members besides the officers were present. The secretary was ordered to write a letter of protest, in the name of the society, to the U. S. Express Co. against their exorbitant rates on flowers. Proofs of the flower show schedule were on hand. Cash prizes to the amount of $450 are offered. The boys are getting in line. Several changes are made and the prospects are the best we ever had. It is to be held in Madison, November 1 and 2. A. Herrington exhibited six varieties of the newer sweet peas, and Lemoine peony, an excellent late variety. He received the society's cultural certificate for the display.

Our treasurer, William Charlton, who is confined to his home by sickness, is to be visited by a special committee of sympathizing brothers.

The society adjourned its meetings until next September, as has been the custom for the last few years. E. R.

PACIFIC COAST.

Long Beach, Cal.—Rees & Compere find themselves compelled to remove from their present ranch. A new location has not yet been decided upon.

Tacoma, Wash.—H. W. Manike has donated about 5,000 bedding plants to replace some of those destroyed recently in the fire at Point Defiance park.

PACIFIC COAST PROSPECTS,

We are in the midst of the most peculiar season that has visited this portion of California in many years. As I write—we are now in the middle of the month—it is raining merrily, with prospects of continuing. This is entirely out of the ordinary state of affairs, for it is very seldom that we have any moisture at all during the summer or fall. The fact that since the heavy rainfall in February and March the soil at no time has needed any artificial moisture is also considered phenomenal.

This has been of great advantage to the nurserymen and all growers of ornamental trees, and this season's growth on ornamental stock, as well as young fruit trees, will be a record-breaker. Thousands of dollars have been saved to the dealers by the irrigation system provided by Jupiter Pluvius, and were it not that many hundred thousands of dollars' worth of fruit and grain are spoiled the conditions would be of value.

Grain crops have suffered badly. Most of the hay has been practically spoiled, either from rust or from the crops being beaten down. Cherries, of which there was but a fair crop in any event, are cracked and molded by the excessive moisture. The same holds true of apricots, early peaches and plums, and what promised to be an abundant harvest of first quality fruit has turned out to be a poor lot of swollen and split culls, fit only for cheap preserved cannery use.

This condition does not extend all over California, but it covers many counties in the central portion of the state. It is yet too early to know whether it will have a damaging effect or not on grapes; from present indications they are all right. Berries have been badly injured also, and the growers are losing great quantities of their best stock.

The chaotic state of this portion of the coast, due to the disaster which befell San Francisco, is likely to interfere to a considerable extent with large plantings. Many of our finest country places are owned by San Francisco capitalists, and as retrenchments are greatly in order there will undoubtedly be a big difference between demand and supply. Many large tracts of land, which were to have been planted and divided up into building lots, and on which it was expected that the San Francisco banks would loan money, will have nothing done with them. Outside of San Francisco and the immediate vicinity there will in all probability be a very fair demand for ornamental stock, of which there is an abundance on hand in the various nurseries.

I have yet to hear of any wholesale flower grower who is putting up houses this season in this vicinity. Not over fifty per cent of the houses are now in operation. Many thousands of carnations and roses have been allowed to dry out and will not be replanted until late in the fall. The prospects in this line are not very bright just now; everything depends on how quickly Frisco gets down to rebuilding. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We have had extremely warm weather for a few days and the prospects are for more of it. Business is quieter, both in town and in Oakland, than it has been since the first part of May, and flowers are being received in large quantities. The prices are away down for all classes of stock. In comparison with last year at this time, they do not average over half as much, with much greater trouble in disposing of stock. Sweet peas are the most popular at present, and the demand for them has been good all season. They net the growers about 50 cents per dozen bunches. Carnations can be bought at from 10 cents per dozen upwards, although the best stock does not average more than 15 cents. Roses run from $1 per hundred, and average about $2 for good stock. Maidenhair fern and asparagus are plentiful and of good quality.

Various Notes.

Antone Garibaldi, florist formerly in business in San Francisco, was drowned in Alameda bay June 19. He was a native of Italy and was 32 years old.

Wilbur David Cook, Jr., the landscape architect, is now located in Oakland.

P. J. Hauswirth, of Chicago, is on a several weeks' visit to San Francisco.

W. H. Mann, of Pinole, Cal., is in town.

It is rumored that a well known firm

HYDRANGEAS We have a magnificent lot of Otaksa, nice plants coming into bud and bloom, which will be in perfection during July and August, when they are in great demand at watering places and other summer resorts. There is nothing showier or more satisfactory for lawn decoration. We make a specialty of these, and find an increasing demand for them from year to year. They can be shipped anywhere safely by freight. Large plants in tubs, $2.00 and $3.00 each; very large specimens in half barrels, $5.00 and $7.50 each.

VENTURA, CAL.

George W. Oliver, of the agricultural department at Washington, is making his yearly visit to California and spent June 22 and 23 with the T. B. Shepherd Co.

Mr. Oliver was enthusiastic in his admiration of the begonias, and thinks Mrs. Shepherd's tree begonias and the climber Marjorie Daw valuable additions.

Mrs. Shepherd's new dahlia, Pericles, a cross between imperialis and the Mexican dahlia Maximilian, he considers a superb thing; but what interested him even more was the new everblooming rose Oriole. This rose is a seedling from La Jonquille and the stock is so limited that it has not been sold in the east and is not known to rosarians.

It is a very vigorous rose, attaining a height of six feet in a few years, of rather slender habit, medium foliage, and bears its buds on long, strong stems. It is perfectly healthy, never having mildew or any imperfections of that kind, but what makes it so wonderfully attractive is its unusual color, pure orange, much the shade of the Richardson, but better form and entirely unlike the Richardson, which is a climber with very bad habit of growth, short stemmed roses, and rarely does well any length of time. The Oriole is a most persistent and perpetual bloomer, and a large bunch of its splendid flowers would attract a crowd any place it was exhibited.

Mr. Oliver told Mrs. Shepherd that she should have this rose introduced in the east; that it would be enthusiastically received and too much cannot be said in its praise.

It would be hardy in the east, south of New York, and very beautiful for cut flowers under glass, if it would preserve its fine rich color.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE imports of trees and plants at the port of New York last week had an invoice value of $1,872.

JAMES C. MURRAY says that Peoria, Ill., offers an exceptional opportunity for a nurseryman with capital and ability to push the business.

ROCHESTER newspapers report that on one day this season the local post-office cashed 2,310 money orders drawn in favor of Rochester nurserymen for a total of $6,506.

THE executive board of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society has decided to maintain a permanent office at the state capital. At the recent meeting at Lincoln, to prepare for the convention at Omaha in July, among those present were Peter Youngers, Geneva; H. S. Harrison, York, and C. H. Greene, Fremont.

TEXAS NURSERYMEN.

The seventh annual convention of the Texas Nurserymen's Association will be held at College Station July 10 to 12. The executive committee, E. W. Kirkpatrick, B. L. Adams and J. S. Kerr, has prepared the following program:

Annual address, President E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney.

"The Importance of Ornamental Stock Propagation, and Best Classes and Best Methods." J. F. Sneed, of Tyler, and C. L. Yates, of Brenham.

"The Nurseryman's Relation to the Civic Improvement Movement," F. T. Ramsey, of Austin, and E. W. Knox, of San Antonio.

"The Best Type of Apple Tree for Texas Orchards," B. L. Adams, of Bonham, and F. K. McGinnis, of Terrell.

"Echoes from the Dallas Convention," F. W. Mally, of Garrison, and Stanley H. Watson, of Houston.

"Tree Growing on the Plains," L. P. Landrum, of Hereford, and D. J. Muncy, of Lockney.

SOUTHERN NURSERYMEN.

The meeting of the Southern Nurserymen's Association at Lookout Mountain August 15 and 16 will be somewhat in the nature of a felicitation for Orlando Harrison, president of that association, who has just been chosen for the presidency of the American Association of Nurserymen. The program partly has been prepared. The following will take part in a five minutes' talk, or paper, and no more time will be allowed unless by a vote of the convention:

"Remedy for Slow Collections," B. S. Borne, Pomona, N. C.

"The Retail Nurserymen's Success or Failure," John A. Young, Greensboro, N. C.

"How Nurserymen Can Realize More Money for Their Trees," C. M. Griffith, Jacksonville, Fla.

"Better Business Methods in Extending Credit to Smaller Nurserymen and Dealers," W. F. Heikes, Huntsville, Ala.

"Practical Lessons by Failures," E. W. Chattin, Winchester, Tenn.

"Uniform Standard of Grading Nursery Stock the World Over," W. A. Easterly, Cleveland, Tenn.

"Preparation and Planting Nursery Stock and Early Care," A. W. Newsom, Knoxville, Tenn.

"Spraying the Nursery with What, When and Why," H. A. Morgan, Knoxville, Tenn.

"Pruning Apples, Peaches, and Other Stock in the Nursery," W. T. Hood, Richmond, Va.

"Should the Large Orchardists Get the Benefit of the Wholesale Prices on Trees?" R. C. Berckman, Augusta, Ga.

"Best Plan for Grading, Packing, Shipping and Caring for Trees," Herbert Chase, Huntsville, Ala.

"Growing Pear and Cherry Trees: On What Kind of Soil," J. W. Shaddow, Winchester, Tenn.

"Who Is Making Money in the Nursery Business?" Mr. Harrison, of Fletcher & Harrison, Cleveland, Tenn.

"Is Inspection of Nursery Stock of Advantage or Disadvantage?" J. Van Lindley, Pomona, N. C.

"Apple Blight Through the Middle South," A. W. Newsom, Huntsville, Ala.

"Objections to the Present State Inspection Laws," R. J. Bagby, New Haven, Mo.

"The Bad Habit of Replacing Trees to the Planters," G. M. Black, Mt. Pleasant, Texas.

"Why Nurserymen Should Be Good Citizens," Chas. T. Smith, Concord, Ga.

"How to Prevent Aphis from Damaging Nursery Stock and How to Prevent Twig Blight in the Apple Orchard," F. N. Downer, Bowling Green, Ky.

"Should the Immigration Law of Alabama Be Adopted by Our Southern States?" N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.

"Upon What Reasonings Depends the Determination of a Nurseryman to Plant and Bud One Million Apple Seedlings?" G. A. Harrison, Berlin, Md.

"The Spirit That Overcomes Difficulties, with Example," S. A. Farris, Winchester, Tenn.

"Are Nurserymen Planting Too Many Peach Seed?" J. C. Hale, Winchester, Tenn.

"A Commercial Peach Orchard as an Investment," S. W. Peek, Hartwell, Ga.

A large number of other equally interesting topics will be assigned, and it is expected that a large portion of those present will be provided with an opportunity to tell as much of what they know as is possible in five minutes.

OLD FIRM SELLS.

As reported briefly at the time the deal was first considered, the well known nursery of Nichols & Lorton, Davenport, Ia., established in 1848, and the leading and largest one in the state, has changed hands, the new purchasers being Adolph Arp, superintendent of parks for Davenport, and H. G. Bryant, an experienced nurseryman. The business of Nicholas & Lorton, which was established fifty-eight years ago, is located on the Middle road, a short distance east of the city limits and is known as the Davenport Nurseries. Mr. Arp has resigned his position as superintendent of parks, the resignation to take effect August 1, after which he will devote his entire time with Mr. Bryant to the management of the business.

BUD AND SCION SUPPLY.

In discussing "The Importance and Best Methods of the Bud and Scion Supply in Propagating" at the Dallas convention, C. C. Mayhew said in part:

"Of the many important matters for the consideration of every grower of nursery stock, there is none of more vital importance than his bud and scion supply. I know that every member of this association wishes to produce his very best; wishes to deliver to his customers healthy, well-grown stock which is true to name. To do this we can not be too careful as to our buds and scions.

"If we are absolutely certain that our stock is exactly what we wish it, where are our scions and buds to come from? It is not practical to cut great quantities of buds and grafts from fruiting orchards for the reason that the buds are inferior, expensive to cut and give poor stands. In addition to this we are decidedly more liable to spread disease than where we cut from younger and thriftier stock. It is not safe to cut from the nursery row because every handling adds risk and uncertainty that we all dislike. I believe the most practical and profitable way for securing an abundance of the very best buds and scions is to grow trees strictly for the buds and scions.

"To do this in the safest and best manner I suggest the following method, taking the peach for example:

"Procure the best seed that can be found. Go over them carefully and select the ones which seem to be perfect, small and well matured. Soak them in some preparation that will destroy all disease germs. Plant them on land suited to peach. When seedlings are ready to bud go over them and pull out all weaklings. For buds for stock blocks select orchard trees to cut from while fruit is ripening. Do not be satisfied with knowing that trees selected are true to name. Select a vigorous, fruitful tree that is of the very best strain. There is always the best tree in the orchard. Select it and cut the buds with care, budding them into your prepared stock. Let these trees stand as long as they produce satisfactory buds, and no longer. Then renew your blocks.

"The same method will apply to all other classes of trees which are grown from bud or graft, except that it may be necessary to begin with seedlings or cuttings.

"I believe that if this simple method is followed out minutely and all trees grown from buds and scions produced this way, we would eliminate all possibility of mixed sorts and would reduce diseased stocks to a minimum. In addition to this our strains will be very materially improved. When we consider the rapidity with which a single tree can be multiplied there is no excuse for the growing of trees of questionable worth."

The Market.

Business last week was fair for this time of the year, and receipts were large. This was not unexpected, as the season is at hand when such conditions usually prevail. Outdoor roses are coming in and are now plentiful. There are large cuts of carnations, and the quality in general is good, although there are many of inferior quality. The selects retail at 75 cents per dozen, while the common price is 50 cents. There is a good supply of sweet peas and good stock sells well. Lavender, pink and white have first call, and all growers have them at 50 cents per hundred. Peonies have been plentiful and will be for a few days longer, although the flush of the crop is marketed. Roses are getting smaller and the quality is not so good. Beauties still hold their own and have been called for more than usual. The short and medium stems come in large quantities, prices continuing satisfactory.

The usual number of June weddings have taken place, with more to follow. Counter sales have kept up remarkably the last ten days, owing to the demand for flowers for commencement exercises. The sale of bedding plants is about at an end, as everybody is nearly sold out.

Various Notes.

A number of social affairs took place last week, among which was the University Club ball. The decorations were very good and were along the same lines as last year, the work being done by A. H. Bush, of the Daniels & Fisher Stores Co. The opening of the Overland

Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was well attended, and some important business was transacted. The first discussion was concerning next fall's flower show. A communication was read from the lady members of the New Orleans Floral Association. Their proposition was discussed by the members and almost accepted in full. When taking a final vote, however, the idea of holding a show was defeated, and it was postponed to a later date. C. W. Eichling gave a full account of his trip to Chattanooga, in the interests of organizing the Interstate Southern Florists' Society. Treasurer Joseph Steckler collected the initiation fee of $1 from the members who have joined the new society.

It has been decided that the first convention will take place in New Orleans, and will likely be some time around our carnival season. New Pink Rose Minneapolis Floral Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

The committee on outing reported several propositions, but the trip to Grand Isle, on the Gulf of Mexico, where the society has been many past summers, seemed to offer the best attraction and it was decided to go there again. The trip will take three days, July 7, 8 and 9.

R. Eichling, with W. Rehm, had a pot of Lilium auratum on exhibition. This plant is not cultivated much here and as a pot plant will have little value, coming at a time when the market is nearly over. As a cut flower, however, it is certainly good. A bunch of Shasta daisies of different varieties was good proof that this flower can also be grown to advantage during our summer months when flowers are very scarce. Mr. Eichling reported his crop of asters in fine growing condition.

B. M. Wichers had an Epidendrum venosum. This orchid is not very showy, but the abundance of the blooms and the facility of growing it under glass or outside make it quite an acquisition as a summer blooming plant.

Various Notes.

The dull season is thoroughly settled and florists have ample time to repair their houses and build new ones.

U. J. Virgin is very busy moving to his new quarters and erecting greenhouses on Canal street.

Louis Richard dropped dead in his yard June 22. He was a sufferer with heart disease. T. Russo, an employe, was arrested, charged with robbing the body before he gave the alarm.

George Mann tendered his resignation as a member of the Horticultural Society. He is going to move to Biloxi, Miss., where he will start in the flower business. M. M. L.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business the last week has been very quiet with all of the trade. Planting is all done, and the cut flower trade is light. Prices keep up well.

Outdoor flowers are coming in nicely and peonies are being used considerably in decorations of all descriptions; the quality is much inferior to that of previous seasons. Those that are purchased on the market can be bought at $2 per hundred. Outdoor valley is also gone.

Roses are coming in nicely and the present crop will in all probability be the last one on the old plants. The growers are about ready to throw out the old ones, so that there is a possible shortage to look forward to. Carnations are small, particularly those from local growers, no doubt on account of the heat. Prices vary to a large extent. Smilax has been scarce, and a great many common ferns are being used.

The greenhouse owners are all doing some repairing, but building of new houses is slow.

The florists' picnic will in all probability be held at Lake Minnetonka, although the exact date and location has not been decided on as yet. It has been held for the past two or three seasons in the vicinity of St. Paul, and Minneapolis wants it this year.

St. Paul.

L. L. May and family left Sunday evening to attend the seedsmen's convention, to be held in Toledo.

Charles Vogt says business is quiet, but he has turned out quite a number of funeral designs, which help considerably. The profit on them at this time of the year is good.

The Swanson Floral Co. continues to put up very attractive windows, which are greatly admired.

L. L. May & Co. report a fair trade, but principally in the funeral work line. They are also greatly pleased at the heavy increase in their retail department over previous seasons. A large amount of it is no doubt due to the efforts of their manager, J. W. Hoffman.

Gus Colberg says business is very fair.

Minneapolis.

Oscar Amundson, of the Rosary, says that trade is keeping up nicely, and thinks the success of the business from now on till fall will depend to a large extent on the caution exercised in buying.

Carl Johannsen, of the Powers Mercantile Co., says trade is fair. They handle a good stock, which from all appearances sells well.

Donaldson's glass block is undoubtedly doing a good business. Saturday afternoon finds this firm all as busy as bees. They handle good stock, which is of course sold at just a little below the legitimate florists' prices.

The New York Floral Co. seems to have them all beaten when it comes to the number of carnations carried in stock. They must have in the neighborhood of 5,000 carnations in their windows on a Saturday afternoon. These they offer at 25 and 35 cents per dozen.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

June is winding up the season in good shape. All good stock finds ready sale, and the last week took much of the poorer with it. There is still considerable business in sight for this week. The retailers are managing to keep fairly busy, but the wholesale houses wind up their day's work with about three hours in the morning.

Various Notes.

A. W. Smith is handling some fine white phlox, which comes in good shape for benches in the large decorations which he has been handling.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is handling fine Beauties and lilies, as well as peonies, which are as good as at any time during their season.

Last Monday a severe storm, with heavy hail, visited this vicinity, and while it did much damage to gardens, cutting everything to pieces, it fortunately managed to miss all the greenhouses. The only broken glass heard of was in hotbed sashes here and there.

A. T. Vick, of Albion, N. Y., has been a visitor here for several days. It was his first visit to Pittsburg, and he was interested in everything we have in the manufacuring line, as well as the railroads, which seem to stand on end in getting to the tops of our mountains.

The Florists' Club picnic committee has not decided on a spot for the picnic up to this time. Hoo-Hoo.

KANSAS CITY.

Lawrence M. Schwager, who has conducted a flower store at 1300 Grand avenue for a number of years and was apparently doing a prosperous business, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. He places his liabilities at $2,000 and assets at $400.

Ballston Spa, N. Y.—John Schafer died June 12. The business will be continued without change, his nephew, Chas. Schafer, having acquired an interest.

Lancaster, Pa.—Albert M. Herr, secretary of the American Carnation Society, has mailed to members the annual report, including the proceedings of the Boston Convention of January 24-25. Mr. Herr has much difficulty in securing a stenographer who can report the proceedings to his satisfaction.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS
FLORAL PARK, L. I., N. Y.

ROCHESTER.

Storm at Canandaigua.

What the hail storm of June 10 failed to accomplish, the rain June 16 put the finishing touch to, making the desolation complete. Mrs. Thompson's estate at Canandaigua suffered most. The houses are wrecks and the outside plants, not only the bedding plants, but the shrubs and herbaceous stock, now are merely poor suggestions of their former beauty. The oldest trees on the place were also torn apart, and were it not for the netting inside of the glass on the aviary, the feathered tribe would be minus today. Burnham has a dozen men at work, fixing up the houses, but all the specimen palms are destroyed, mums and carnations are a total loss and Mr. Ballantine will have to start over again to bring the estate up to the high level it had attained before the hail devastated it. The Italian garden is ruined. We noticed in one house, which had evidently escaped the brunt of the storm, a few extra choice specimens of Cattleya gigas, some in flower and others showing fine spikes, also some good types of single and double tuberous begonias.

The florists of Canandaigua were badly hit and their houses are practically glassless. The rain completed a disastrous week. The stream flowing through the town flooded the surrounding land and practically put the market gardeners out of business.

Trade Good.

This week has not been so bad in Rochester, considering the weather and season, as might have been expected. Roses have sold for $3 to $8, carnations $2.50, while Asparagus plumosus has moved quietly and gladioli have been in fair demand. The florists are looking forward to the Fourth, after which a general "redding" up in the houses will be in order. This has been a good spring to the fraternity here and no one seems to grudge it to them.

A small delegation will go from this city to the convention at Dayton.

The farmers around this part of the country are taking an absorbing interest in asters, and with an average season, there ought to be sufficient to go around. George Hart, our commission florist, already has made arrangements for handling asters in quantity. Last summer he disposed of large quantities, but the demand had hardly been sufficiently anticipated. This season he has taken time by the forelock. F. S. P.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business for the last week has been fine. Every one is well satisfied with the way it has been going, and the month of June will be a good one this year. The demand is general and for all kinds of stock. As a consequence, the prices of all grades have been advancing until now they are as high as one ever sees them at this season of the year. Everything points to a continuation of the good run for the balance of this month at least, as many advance orders have been booked.

The supply of stock is but medium, and perhaps this is one reason for the good demand. There is just about enough to fill all orders. This leaves the wholesale market well cleared out every evening and in good condition to keep up prices the next day.

Owing to good weather, both roses and carnations have improved in quality. American Beauties are in good demand, and they also have improved greatly. The best grade readily brings $3 per dozen. Sweet peas continue in good demand and more of the better varieties could be disposed of to advantage. Lilies of all kinds are selling well, with but few on the market. Gladioli are selling first-class. Green goods are fairly plentiful and there are plenty of good eastern ferns.

Various Notes.

A meeting of the picnic committee was held June 16, and it was decided to hold the florists' annual outing on Thursday, July 19, at Norwood Inn park, Oakley, O. There will be music and dancing, bowling for both ladies and gentlemen, also a ball game. There will probably be running races and other sports. This is to be an old-fashioned basket picnic, and every one is expected to bring a well filled basket. Ben George was appointed to look after printing and music, George Murphy to look after the baseball. Tom Jackson has charge of the quoits and Henry Schwarz the bowling.

The committee in charge of the Cincinnati delegation to the S. A. F. convention has been busily engaged in looking up rates and is rapidly getting things into shape. Every one seems to be so enthusiastic on the subject that there ought to be at least 100 in the party. As soon as the committee decides which way we will go, every florist in this city and vicinity will be notified of all particulars. Those out-of-town florists who care to join the Cincinnati delegation can obtain full information by addressing C. J. Ohmer, 113 East Third street, Cincinnati. We will be glad to have all who can possibly do so go with us.

J. W. Rodgers and wife have just returned from a visit to the east.

C. J. Ohmer.

Superior Boilers Are Good Boilers

Read what our customers say about them:

South Bend, Ind., April 4, 1904.

"Superior to any Hot Water Boiler we have ever used. You certainly have placed the right name to your Boilers; no effort at all to keep the temperature at desired points when zero weather comes. Night after night the past severe winter weather gave your Boiler a good test. We are more than pleased with the Superior Boiler." Yours truly, Treanor & Rettic.

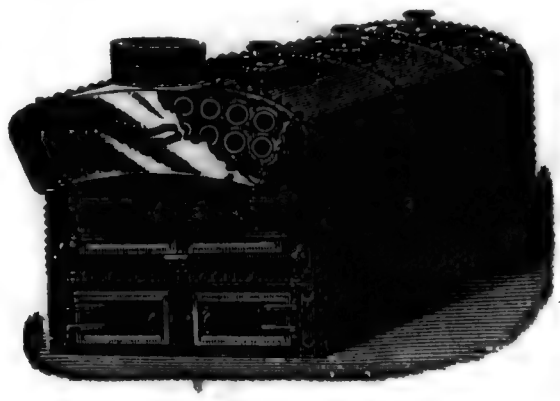
Our Customers Talk For Us.

CHRIST MUNO, Evanston, Ill.

"We have had four of your boilers. The first gave us thirteen years' service, the second one eleven years, and the other two were put in in the last two seasons.

"We used the first two boilers nine years before we had to put in new flues. We have not used any other boilers, but our neighbors have other makes, and the life of their boilers is from three to four years shorter than ours.



"We are satisfied with the boilers in every possible way."

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

"I bought a No. 2 boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7,000 sq. ft. of glass; would take care of 2,000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down December 29, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell boilers, and do not worry about their breaking down."

JACOB PHILLIP, Rogers Park, Ill.

"I bought a No. 10 boiler in 1901. Have 20,000 sq. ft. of glass. We keep temperature at 60 degrees in the coldest weather. I have had one Kroeschell boiler 15 years, and the only repairs were a set of flues. Your boiler is so satisfactory to me that I do not care to try any other. Please enter my order for another No. 8, delivered in July."

We sell direct to consumers; have NO AGENTS; NO COMMISSION TO PAY; you get that advantage.

The Market.

During the last week business has been good, flowers of all kinds being used in abundance. The store men were all busy with receptions, weddings and funerals. Considering the lateness of the season the plant trade has been above the average.

Various Notes.

Mr. Langstaff, of the State Deaf and Dumb Institute, is looking forward to a busy time for the next two years. The new grounds of about forty acres have to be laid out, and roads and walks made. All this comes under Mr. Langstaff's supervision, as does also the erection of two greenhouses, each 20x125 feet.

Arthur Smith, who has been with Baur & Smith, has taken a position with E. A. Nelson.

The greenhouses at Noblesville formerly run by R. E. Farley, are now rented by Harvey Smith, who expects to put in a full line of plants, etc. Mr. Farley is now in Texas preaching the gospel for the benefit of the cowboys and "broncho busters."

Several of the greenhouse men have commenced improvements to their plants since the rush is over, and by fall there will be quite an additional growing space available. S.

MILFORD, MASS.

A. J. Howard & Son, who operate the Morningside Greenhouses, and have 12,000 feet of glass, are planning to build an addition of 15,000 feet during the summer. This firm makes a specialty of carnations and bedding plants. The business was established in 1894.

Miss Evelyn B. Taylor, the lady florist of Milford, now has 4,700 feet of glass in use. She makes a specialty of violets and carnations in the spring, and grows chrysanthemums in the fall. Home demand takes her entire output.

E. G. Moore was the first florist in Milford, having established his business in 1883. He pays special attention to cut flowers and bedding plants. Mr. Moore has lived in Milford for forty years, and is a veteran of the civil war.

Dickson City, Pa.—Mrs. Thos. Rolles has bought out Matthew Horrocks and will continue in the business.

The Test of Quality

Cypress is conceded by all authorities to be the best wood for greenhouse construction and quite a little has been said about the "right kind of cypress." What way have you of knowing the "right kind of cypress?" Can you tell by looking at a cypress plank just where the sap lies and what kind it is?

One way to be sure that you get the "right kind" of cypress, is to place your order with a firm that makes a test of every piece before shipping and employs an expert to detect cypress defects. Send for "Why Use Cypress" and "The Mummy's Case."

JUST AS WE TORE IT OUT

At Cottage Gardens.

At Cottage Gardens it is hard to realize what has been accomplished during the past year. A new house 46x300 is just completed and the tile benches are now being installed. Here Alma Ward will reign supreme. The new style of bench, with its three walls and ventilation spaces, instead of the solid beds, seems much more desirable and apparently everlasting. This great white carnation will bloom until July. From one house the average cut now is 250 daily. The wholesale price is $6 per hundred in the New York market. Another large house completed in February, 22x140, is filled with young stock of Alma Ward, and the last of the large houses, 46x235, will be finished by June 1 and is to be planted to Robert Craig and Beacon. These are all built by the Lord & Burnham Co. About 3,000 carnations are shipped daily. The varieties are Alma Ward, Craig, [illegible] Mrs. Patten, President [illegible]

Of the Review a week or so ago—and as Henrie Beemus says, "it only goes to show" how once a man has one of our iron frame houses, he keeps on having them—

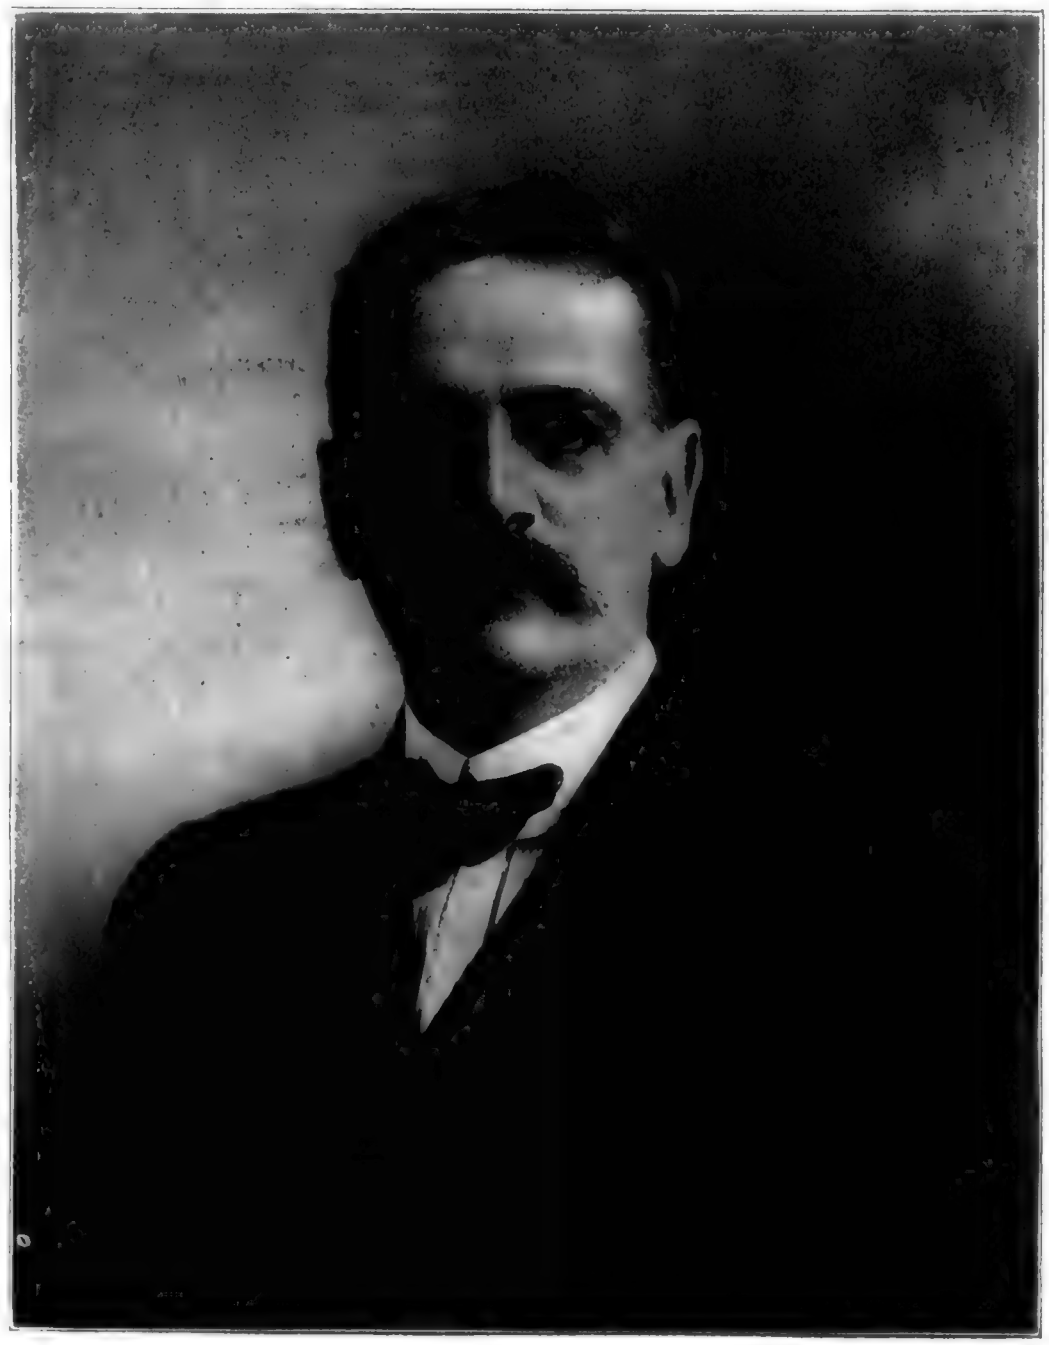
THE MEN WE MEET



HENRY BRUCE BEATTY.

Henry Bruce Beatty, the treasurer of the Society of American Florists, is one of those fortunate folk who follow floriculture purely for their personal predilection toward the pursuit as a pastime. Mr. Beatty is an oil man who turned to natural gas as offering a field more open to individual effort, ability and industry combining to place him at the head of the world's largest exclusive gas company, for he is, and has been for some years, president of the Manufacturers' Light and Heat Co., of Pittsburg. He is a recognized authority on all questions concerning gas.

Mr. Beatty was born August 16, 1857, in Mercer county, Pennsylvania. He is the second son of Ebenezer S. Beatty, a pioneer in the oil business at Oil City. He came of a Scotch family which came to America by way of Ireland before the Revolution and has the distinction of having had a representative in every war of the United States. After a careful schooling Henry Bruce Beatty began business life associated with his father at Oil City. It was in 1879 that his thoughts were first turned to natural gas, then going to waste, but capital was not to be had until some years later. In 1881 he removed to Bradford, where he bore a not inactive part in the exciting days of the oil business, when speculation was at its height. In 1889, in addition to oil interests in various fields, he acquired an interest in the Pittsburg corporation of which he in 1896 became the head. At the later date its capital was $600,000; today it is $25,000,000, for Mr. Beatty has succeeded, by purchase, merger or consolidation, in acquiring thirty-five gas, water and electric companies, the stock of which is owned by the Manufacturers' Light and Heat Co. The ability with which these operations have been carried on is perhaps best shown by the fact that a recent estimate put a premium of $4,810,000 on the properties controlled by him.

In 1879 Mr. Beatty married Mary L. Strong, the daughter of H. O. Strong, the well-known capitalist with whom, in 1887, he returned to Oil City and established the Oakwood Rose Gardens, building and conducting what was at that time the largest exclusive rose-growing establishment in the United States. Throwing the same energy into this that he had put into his other activities he soon made it one of the famous places of the day, and, indeed, there are not now many places where a better grade of stock is produced. Mr. Beatty is still the secretary and treasurer of the Oakwood company. In the years he devoted his time to the florists' business he gained a wide acquaintance in the trade and at the S. A. F. convention at Atlantic City in 1894, where Edwin Lonsdale was elected president, Mr. Beatty became treasurer, succeeding the late M. A. Hunt. He is a never failing attendant at the convention and the warmth with which he annually greets his old friends shows the pleasure it affords him to get back for a few days among the associates of the period which he frequently refers to as the best of his busy life. So great is his popularity that he has year after year been continued as treasurer and at Washington last summer some of his friends insisted on nominating him for the presidency in spite of his earnest protests.

Mr. Beatty has an interesting family and a beautiful home at Pittsburg, with a summer residence at Oil City. Both dwellings are full of treasures of art and literature, the collection of which has been one of his chief pleasures. He is a member of the American Rose Society and of half a dozen clubs in Pittsburg and Oil City. In all his relations, both business and social, his quiet dignity, his unassuming ways and substantial worth impress favorably, aside from the fact that he is recognized as a strong factor in the great financial and industrial interests of western Pennsylvania.

H. B. Beatty.

LARGE OR SMALL BULBS.

In forcing lilies, more especially Harrisii, do the larger sizes of bulbs force more easily? In the experiments with ether for forcing purposes tried at Cornell, were the bulbs dormant or had growth commenced before the trial? I have had trouble in getting my lilies to bloom for Easter and thought perhaps it might be caused by using the smaller sizes of bulbs. M. E.

For years we have used and advocated the use of 5x7 Harrisii lily bulbs for early forcing, those we wanted to cut from December 1 to February 1 principally, because there was less waste in using the flowers. If they were used singly in designs there would be no waste in a plant with five or six flowers, because the single flower would be cut as it developed, but the great majority of these early lilies are used in bunches, or sprays as they are called, and a plant with two open flowers and one bud is very little waste and can be more gracefully arranged. Yet I find from observing the experience of a very large firm, which makes a specialty of lilies for Thanksgiving and the holidays, that the 7x9 bulbs are always used. They are stronger and will endure a higher temperature, and I am convinced from this firm's success that the 7x9 bulbs should be used. For Easter use, when the plants are mostly sold in pots, the 7x9 bulbs, both of the Bermuda and Japan grown, are always used, and some 9x11 bulbs are grown for extra fine plants.

We know nothing about the ether experiments at Cornell university. There have been some very interesting experiments at Cornell with plants grown under the influence of the light of acetylene gas. By applying to the horticultural department of the university you could doubtless obtain their latest bulletins on both subjects.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Lancifolium Lilies.

The lancifolium type of Japan lilies that were potted in midwinter will now be opening their flowers, and very useful they are to the commercial florist for the next two months. They should not be subjected to the glare of the sun under unshaded glass or their season will be short, the flowers of poor quality, and they will need so much water that the entire plants get exhausted. A shaded, cool house is the place for them, or a sheltered place outside under the shade of trees. I will just mention here that these lilies, if the stem and foliage are not cut, and after flowering are gradually dried off, are just as good for forcing the second and third or fourth year as the new bulbs you buy. All they want is two or three months' rest after the foliage is ripe, and new soil before you start them up.

Poinsettias.

You now will be propagating poinsettias about as fast as you get the young growth. We have seen a large percentage of these cuttings shrivel up and perish in the sand, as we have chrysanthemum cuttings in midsummer. In fact, years ago we believed it was necessary to build a hotbed and keep it well shaded to root these plants. It was a mistake. There is no need of it; neither is it at all necessary that you should lose fifty per cent of either. Water is the secret, if it's worth calling a secret, and plenty of it. Never let them wilt for want of it, or from sunshine. Keep the sand saturated and guard against sun and draughts and you will root ninety-five per cent.

Begonias.

The shrubby section of the begonias also root very easily at this time of the year, although rather late to make good plants for winter flowering, but the begonia being more of a succulent plant does not need so much shade or water.

While speaking of begonias of this type, such as incarnata and its improved forms, President Carnot and others, it is a mistake to keep them in summer in a shaded greenhouse. What with shade and the moisture that is necessary, a disease which is a rust will often appear in August and ruin all your plants. Those you propagated in the spring months and which now are in 4-inch pots, as well as old plants that you wish to carry over, should now be plunged outdoors in partial shade. An ideal situation would be plunged in a frame where a light shade could be used in the brightest hours and dispensed with on dull days and hours. The begonias, with this treatment, will assume a robustness that you never can get on a plant kept all summer in a moisture-charged, stuffy greenhouse. This class of begonias, of which there are so many species and varieties, is in good demand with the amateur and there are few more satisfactory house plants.

Gloire de Lorraine, which belongs to the semi-tuberous section, is best managed indoors. As I am promised some hints on the management of this important plant for next week's issue by an expert, I will only say that young plants in 3-inch and 4-inch pots should have a shaded bench and an abundance of air at all times, day and night.

Primulas.

Primulas of the various species that were sown in May should be pricked off from seed pans into flats, or into 2-inch pots, and they will do well in a frame with the shaded sash raised back and front so that they will receive the freest circulation of air.

Obconica has so many good qualities that it has put Sinensis in the shade. For an Easter plant you can still sow obconica and you should procure only the finest strains of size and color you can hear of. Fifty cents or $1 is no consideration on a packet of seed if you get the right quality.

Pruning Hedges.

If you have charge of any hedges, July is the time to do the summer pruning. The privet hedges are the most abundant. If rather severely pruned before starting to grow in spring they now will have made a strong growth and should be shortened back a few inches only to induce the present year's growth to break into lateral growth, which makes the hedge compact and dense, which is the condition you are after. An evergreen hedge, spruce, hemlock or arbor-vitæ, should also be trimmed this month, but not with the shears. An evergreen hedge sheared off looks like a Southdown sheep just out of the hands of the shearer. Use a knife on evergreen hedges. They only need the cutting back of strong growths that are taking the lead of others.

The writer is no friend of hedges, especially where there is no need of them. Where planted purely as an ornament they are unsightly and absurd, but if planted keep them compact and trim. You can't help their being stiff and formal, but this trimness and uniform height, width, and density is their only beauty, and if ragged, irregular in size and neglected they are only an eyesore.

Cultivate.

We have been blessed with frequent showers of late and have to hoe and cultivate continually to keep down the many little plants we call weeds, yet many localities in this large country, even the eastern half of it, may be suffering for want of rain and I say unto you dearly beloved brethren and sisters, keep the hoe at work. The hoe is often a curse. The constant use of the hoe is a blessing.

William Scott.

THE UBIQUITOUS SPIRAEA.

The spiraea is a plant which knows no one locality. All it wants is a fairly good soil and a chance to grow. The plant illustrated is one on the grounds of H. E. Bolinger, Afton, Ia. It is about seven years old and has attained a height of about eleven feet and is thirty-five feet in circumference. How well the plant flowers is shown by the photograph, which was taken a few weeks ago.

Spirara Van Houttei is one of the principal items of stock wherever shrubs are grown, and deserves its popularity.

SYRINGA JAPONICA.

Please tell me the name of a large shrub or tree, not unlike a lilac, only a larger tree. The top of the tree is in full bloom now, and is very handsome and fragrant. W. A. L.

The plant is Syringa Japonica, sometimes called Ligustrina Amurensis, one of our tall growing or tree lilacs. This makes one of the most handsome of our large shrubs for blooming late in June or in early July. The flowers, unfortunately, possess a strange fascination for rose bugs, which usually descend upon them in hordes as soon as they are open, and soon give them a brown appearance.

W. N. CRAIG.

THE FIRST BREAK.

This is a term applied to the condition of the plant when after making a growth of a foot or so it produces a bud and then several growths around the bud, which will run on to produce the future flowers. This bud is similar to the later ones in that it would if it were retained and conditions were favorable produce a flower, but conditions in our climate are unfavorable for these early buds and they never develop properly. Some of the types that will flower early in August in Europe will not come here till six weeks later, as the early buds all rot or produce distorted flowers. It is these different buds that prove the stumbling block to the novice in chrysanthemum growing, but it may safely be set down that any bud that shows for the next four weeks is too early and will not produce a good flower.

The grower, if he wants to produce two flowers to a plant, can now run two shoots in place of one, in fact some prefer to grow them this way, as the plants are not nearly so crowded in the benches. If the plants are kept to one shoot again pinch all the superfluous shoots off close to the stem. This operation can be done with the thumb and finger so neatly that the "break" can hardly be seen in a few weeks. The shoot that is retained sometimes shoots out at right angles before it goes on up; in such a case it should be tied up in such a manner that it will be coaxed into growing straight. A crooked stem impairs the value of the flower, and that is the chief reason why I much prefer wire stakes to string, as the plants can then more readily be trained in the way they should go.

The weather in this section has been very warm during the last week, and to prevent the plants from scalding it is necessary to keep the atmosphere full of moisture. Turn the hose loose in the house four or five times during the day, spraying the plants and paths and all parts of the house. This will pull down the temperature to a reasonable point again and keep the tips from getting burned. The wonderful foliage seen on some of the best exhibitors' stock is due to nothing else than the constant, intelligent, frequent use of the hose. Once in a while one runs across a man who still sticks to the old idea that it is dangerous to water or syringe plants with the sun shining on them, but that kind of fellow is getting scarce and much better stock is grown than formerly as a consequence. Evaporation is so rapid in our climate that no harm can possibly result from spraying at midday.

Plants intended for 6-inch pots should be got out of the sand and potted as soon as they are rooted. Don't leave them too long, to make a weak growth, but pot into good soil and encourage them in every way possible. Greenfly is very apt to be troublesome on late cuttings, and if this is your case, give the plants a good dusting with tobacco dust, because delicate little plants will not grow unless they are clean and free from insects. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Prizes for the Chicago Show.

W. Wells, of Merstham, Surrey, England, offers gold, silver gilt and silver medals for six varieties of chrysanthemums, two of each on 12-inch stems. The following varieties are eligible in this competition: Mrs. H. Partridge, Mrs. D. Willis James, Merstham Crimson, Mary Ann Pockett, Beatrice May, T. Richardson, Mrs. Heaume, E. J. Brooks, Mrs. F. F. Thompson, Mrs. William Knott, Mrs. J. E. Dunn and Miss May Siddon.

Prizes of $50, $25, and $10 are offered for twelve blooms on 24-inch stems for the best seedlings or sports not yet in commerce, the color to be white, pink or yellow, the names to be given by the donor of the prize.

Charles H. Totty offers prizes of $12, $8 and $5 for twelve blooms in twelve varieties, stems not over twelve inches long, introductions of 1906; open to all.

F. R. Pierson offers a silver cup for thirty-six chrysanthemums, six varieties, six blooms of each, introduced in America in 1905 and 1906.

Nathan Smith & Son offer $25 for the best twenty-four blooms of American origin, introductions of 1904, 1905 and 1906. Three varieties, white, pink and yellow; eight blooms of each shown in separate vases.

Vaughan's Seed Store offers a silver cup, value $15, for best specimen bush chrysanthemum plant which has not received any other award; open to private gardeners only.

DAVID FRASER, Sec'y.

FORT WORTH, TEX.—McCart & Anderson say business for the spring of 1906 was double what it was in 1905.

BEAUTIES.

During the first two months after benching is the period to lay a good foundation for winter blooming stock. During this growing season their wants require careful studying and close observation, and no hard and fast cultural rules can be strictly adhered to. The attending conditions, such as soil, water, aspect, situation of the house and climatic changes all have to be taken into consideration and duly weighed. The sudden changes to which our climate is subject make one of the most annoying phases of Beauty growing.

During very hot weather, which we may now expect, young Beauty stock, if in a healthy condition, will require copious supplies of water, and if the drainage is as perfect as it ought to be there is little danger of overwatering. Syringing will also have to be practiced frequently, the young, tender leaves at this season being very subject to the attacks of red spider.

Because of these frequent drenchings the soil will require frequent stirring to keep the surface in good condition, and if the weather becomes cloudy and unsettled, great care will be needed not to get the foliage too soft, as this may lead to an attack of black spot, which can in a great measure be prevented by increasing care in ventilating and watering. Care in watering consists in a thorough examination of the soil in the benches, using accurate judgment as to weather conditions before applying the hose, and watering those spots which are dry before the general watering, so that the whole of the bench may be uniformly moist.

After the bench is satisfactorily watered the syringe should be applied. Any effort to perform both of these operations at one and the same time, as is frequently attempted by the inexperienced, can result in nothing but disaster, as neither can be performed satisfactorily in this manner.

If black spot makes its appearance, the benches should be gone over daily and all affected leaves picked off and destroyed. Neglect or carelessness in this matter, especially during dark weather, when the disease spreads most rapidly, will soon result in a lot of damage, if it does not entirely ruin the stock. RIBES.

THE ROSE BEETLE.

From several sections of the country, but especially from the eastern section of New Jersey, comes a report of the great and unusual havoc wrought by the myriads of rose beetles brought out in sudden response to the heat wave of the middle of June. The larvæ in the meadows appear to do little harm, but a few days of extreme heat cause their development into the beetle stage, whereupon the march of destruction begins. In a bad season, like the present, uncountable thousands of the beetles swarm upon vegetation, not only denuding rose bushes but ravaging gardens, vineyards and orchards. The beetles have a predilection for white and it is reported as an actuality that in certain localities in Jersey, possibly the same whence came the original big mosquito stories, the interference of the rose beetles was such that outdoor laundry operations had to be suspended; so quickly did they cover and mar white clothing that it was impracticable to expose it to dry or bleach.

Great as is the damage to flowers and fruits, no practicable way has been found for combating the pest when it appears in large numbers. There seems no way of destroying the eggs or larvæ except to prevent their existence by vigilantly destroying the beetles, which requires a greater rousing of public interest than has yet been possible. The beetles are slow of movement so that their destruction easily is possible, once a community is aroused.

BUGS ON ROSES.

My rose bushes are full of buds that do not open. I looked at one of them and I found it full of bugs. The bugs resemble a red ant. Please let me know if you have a remedy for them. The buds rot before they open. W. G.

I know of no insect that looks like "a red ant" that troubles outdoor roses, which I presume are those in trouble. If you had copiously and strongly syringed your rose beds daily you would not be troubled with red spider, thrips or aphis of any kind. That we have proved. But if you neglect syringing you will be troubled with all these minute enemies. All you can do now is to syringe leaf, bud and flower with some nicotine solution. Cover every particle of the plant possible. A 2-inch flower pot of the nicotine in one and a half gallons of water is about the right strength. It is expensive stuff, unless you consider the result, but most effective against troublesome insects, both outdoors and under glass. Especially valuable is it against the black chrysanthemum aphis. At the strength quoted it will not stain the fairest flower.

It is easier to give you advice for another season, and that it is to give your rose bushes a syringing with this nicotine as they are breaking into leaf, when every unfolding leaf can be reached, and again once or twice before the flowers open.

If these roses are under glass the greatest enemy at this time of year is thrips, a creature with abnormal powers of locomotion, but so small that it takes good sight to see them run. They are the bane of the Beauty growers. A fumigation of red pepper will destroy them.

It should be impossible to find any gardener who does not know that all insects that live on plants, whether wild or cultivated, are found on the underside of the leaf. There are, perhaps, two reason for this. The epidermis of the leaf on the underside is more soft and tender and easier to puncture than the sunburned, storm-beaten surface of the upper side, but a better reason is that the instinct of self-preservation, strong in all animal nature, has taught them that if they do their sparking and hold their banquets on the sunny side of the leaf a rain-storm may come and wash them off. A heavy shower would be a Johnstown flood to these little creatures, and so they have profited from the experiences of countless floods. And yet there are many so-called gardeners who will not learn that it is the underside of the foliage that must be attacked when syringing.

There is a curious fact semewhat in relation to this that I have never seen quoted, the work of nature and the evolution of man. If you will roll up your shirtsleeve as near your shoulder as you can, you will immediately observe that the hair on your arm from your wrist to the elbow points to the elbow, but from the elbow to the shoulder it points to the ground. This fact, for it's not a theory, I heard explained by a Chicago philosopher, I think it was Mr. Foley. Briefly this curious fact is accounted for thus: When primitive man first began to walk upright he found it unpleasant when rain fell on his unprotected head, for he had not yet learned to cover his pate with hat or bonnet (and very disagreeable would it be for heads so poorly adorned with wool as those of Mr. Marquisee, of Syracuse, or W. S.), so when Mr. Nude Savage was caught in a storm he ran for his cave and as he ran he locked his hands over the top of his head, and so the storms of centuries beat the hair or wool downward from the wrist to the elbow, and while in the dim past there was no historian or naturalist to record this phenomenon, nature has recorded it most indelibly. THE RAMBLER ROSES.

During the past few weeks we have had many opportunities of comparing the different varieties, both in the London market and at flower shows, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser. It is surprising how well they have taken for market work, the only question is—will they be overdone? We are certainly getting too many in the market, yet up to the present they have sold fairly well. Some have gone out to those who hawk in the streets, and this in time may materially reduce their value for choicer work. I can recall the time when Aimee Vibert was a favorite, but when it became a common object in cottage gardens, though very beautiful, it lost value; the same thing is bound to come with Crimson Rambler and others. To keep up their value as pot plants for decorations, growers should do them in limited quantities, and grow them well.

It is rather strange that though the first Crimson Rambler was an English variety, all the best subsequent sorts have come from America. Dorothy Perkins is a grand variety, but Lady Gay is likely to entirely supersede it. The Farquhar is another of the same type, which, as recently shown by Messrs. W. Paul & Son, was grand, the flowers being of better form, and produced equally freely. Debutante, a pale blush, is a promising variety; Philadelphia has been fairly well shown, yet it does not seem quite so free as most, but the flowers are certainly better than the Crimson Miltonia Vexillaria Exhibited at a Recent Boston Show by W. N. Craig.

Rambler and appear of a deeper shade of color. In the singles, Hiawatha will certainly have a good run. All who have seen it shown pronounce the same opinion; it is most remarkable how well the flowers last, and the bright color shows at a distance; it is one which does not require comparisons to distinguish its value, it stands out by itself.

The ramblers adapt themselves so well to floral decorations that they should always remain popular; yet when they were first grown it was difficult to get florists to use them. I remember that when I first recommended them I could not sell; and it was only on leaving plants on approval that any business was done, but this was quite sufficient. Instead of having them returned, orders came by wire day after day. There is nothing more difficult than to get a florist to take up a new thing, but if of any value, when once started, it is sure to go; but one thing is certain—our best florists like to keep to such things as are not common in the streets. And it may be with the ramblers, that once they become too plentiful, they will never be of further value for choice work.

A UNIQUE STORE SUCCUMBS.

The illustration on page 402 shows the store of the Kapsalis Floral Co., Milwaukee. Mr. Kapsalis built this establishment, completing it about January 1, the construction being entirely of large plate glass with iron framework. This place was built alongside of Gimbel Bros.' department store, abutting the river. The entrance was off the west end of Grand avenue bridge, one of the most prominent locations in the city. People crossing the bridge could see the entire display in his store.

Unfortunately, however, after Mr. Kapsalis had established a fine trade and was doing a large business Gimbel Bros. decided to build on the space and served notice on him to vacate, consequently Mr. Kapsalis had to tear down the store on short notice, as he had no lease on the ground. Besides being a unique store, it was one of the most attractive of its kind in the country. The photograph was taken shortly before the place was removed, therefore Mr. Kapsalis' stock was reduced considerably.

Mr. Kapsalis was a heavy buyer in his market and always carried a large stock. At present he is negotiating for space inside Gimbel's store, but the opportunity for business inside is not so favorable by far as it was at the old stand. Mr. Kapsalis' enterprising nature will not keep him long from making good connections to continue the business.

MILTONIA VEXILLARIA.

Miltonia vexillaria is one of the most beautiful orchids in cultivation, but one which is not often found in good condition. Commercially it is hardly grown at all and only a few private estates seem able to handle it successfully. There are several large batches in Massachusetts and probably it is better grown in that state than elsewhere.

Miltonia vexillaria was at one time called an odontoglossum. The genus miltonia botanically is quite nearly related to that of odontoglossum, but cultural requirements are a good deal different.

Our plants are grown in a north house, the floor of which is two feet below the level of the ground. A blind is used for shading during the hot months, but this is not pulled down until the plants have had an hour's sunning. A minimum temperature of 55 degrees to 58 degrees in winter seems to suit them. A close, stuffy atmosphere is ruinous to Miltonia vexillaria. They love a constant circulation of top and bottom air and this should be admitted, even in winter, on all possible occasions. One season we tried the experiment of wintering them on the side stage of a cattleya house. While they looked green and vigorous, they flowered but sparsely. We therefore hold them in a north house the year around, a particular portion of which appears to be just to their liking.

Pots or pans may be used to grow them in. We half fill these with broken crocks and lumpy charcoal. For compost osmunda fern fiber mixed with a little moss is used, the surface being covered with fresh sphagnum. A good supply of water while growing, and drier conditions later, are essential. We have not used any liquid stimulant with the exception of weak doses of soot water during the growing season. This appeared to be beneficial.

We once tried our plants in leaf-mold. One year's trial was sufficient and we were fortunate in not losing the whole batch. In the way of insect pests, thrips is one to be feared. It has a special fondness for this orchid. Overhead syringing, frequent fumigations and sponging with, or dipping in, tobacco water will ward it off. If used in house decorations care must be taken not to leave the plants in more than two or three days at a time or they will suffer injury. For dinner-table, mantel and other decorations, this orchid is unexcelled.

It is unfortunate that very few collected plants reach here alive, it being a difficult orchid to ship. Could it be secured in quantity it would be in big demand for June weddings in preference to the bigger, showier, but less refined-looking cattleyas. The flowers are extremely variable in size and color. Some are pure white, but the general shade is from light to deep rose.

There are a good number of named forms of M. vexillaria. Some of the best we have are Fairy Queen, pure white; rubella, H. E. Milner, stupenda, Amesiana, Joseph Godseff and Leopoldi.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Plants in the Field.

The plants in the field should be making strong growth by this time and topping should be looked after closely. By a strong growth I do not mean a rank, soft growth, but rather short jointed, well matured, and the eyes developed ready to break as soon as the top of the shoot is taken off. You can top a little closer at this time out of doors than you do in the house early in the spring, in fact, you should do so to keep the plants dwarf and shapely. The eyes are more developed in proportion to the growth and will break more readily.

Then there is a great difference in varieties. Some will naturally make bushy plants full of shoots, and such need perhaps not more than two stops during their entire stay in the field. Mrs. Joost, Flora Hill and Crane are fair examples, while White Cloud and Harlowarden are just the opposite. These latter kinds must be topped close and often to keep them from getting straggly and topheavy. Top them every time they make a couple of joints; that is the only way you can get bushy plants of these varieties. Keep on topping your plants right up to the time you put them in the house unless you plant very late, and even then there should be no buds on them.

Treatment in the House.

If you plant before August 15, there should not be any shoots on the plants that have begun to run up. You don't want them to go right to blooming if you plant early. There will be little call for the blooms and it will be a needless tax on the plants. The plants will be much better if allowed to become established on the bench before they go to blooming, and the first crop of blooms will be much better if the entire shoot is made after the plant is established. So give your plants an opportunity to catch their breath before you set them to work again. Often we see plants dug and brought in with three or four buds on them and a number of half grown shoots, and before setting them in the benches, these will all be cut back. That is a very wrong method. There should be no buds on them when you dig the plants, and if there are you had better leave them until the plants take hold again. Then, if you deem it advisable you can remove them and any other shoots you think necessary.

We sometimes keep up the topping for some time after housing. Varieties that make poor flowers during warm weather should not be allowed to develop any blooms until cool weather, and by topping them carefully you will help them materially later in the season. This subject of topping is a very important one and merits your closest attention from beginning to end. Your success during the winter depends largely on your judgment along this line. If you do not top properly you will have poor plants, and poor plants cannot be expected to produce profitable crops. On the other hand, if you top too late in the season many varieties will run to grass and refuse to come into crop until late in the season, and much of your profit will be lost. Some varieties will break and run into bud much quicker than others, especially late in the fall, and you must study each variety separately and top accordingly. It is safe, however, to remove every shoot that begins to run up as late as August 10 on all varieties. The plants that were planted inside from pots must be topped, too, until they have formed enough shoots to insure a succession of blooms after blooming commences. If you can use the blooms to advantage, you can let them come along as soon as you have plants of a fair size. They will make better blooms early than the plants lifted from the field. In most cases, however, it pays better to keep off all buds until the middle of August at least. The extra growth that will produce many more extra blooms in the early winter will bring much more than the few blooms you will cut.

Fertilizers and Watering.

Have you put on that mulch of loose material yet? If you have not, then do it as soon as practicable, and if you did not mix any bone meal with the soil when you planted, then apply a liberal dressing before you put on the mulch. The plants will soon be in shape to take up larger quantities of food, and bone meal is a great growing fertilizer. After you apply the mulch be careful about the watering. Not nearly so much water will be required to keep the soil moist, and unless you examine it occasionally you will be apt to overwater. While the soil has few roots running through it, it is quick to sour if kept too wet; you want to keep it just fairly moist and allow it to get on the dry side about once each week. It will do the plants no harm, and will do the soil lots of good.

Look out for red spider, and syringe frequently enough to keep them off. This is not very difficult if you planted the whole house, but if there is a bench or two of old ones blooming in the same house there may be a little spider on them, and they do spread rapidly during this hot weather. Dampen the walks a couple of times during the middle of the day and keep the ventilators open, but remember that no shade should be over these plants. A. F. J. Baur.

THE YOUNGEST FLORIST.

Many items have been published with regard to "the youngest florist," a distinction which has been claimed for many persons. Illinois' youngest florist probably is Claude Wisely, of Murphysboro, who is now 18 years of age and has been in the business for four years. His greenhouse establishment was started as a diversion, upon the rear of the lot on which stood his parents' residence. Having a natural inclination for the business, he rapidly enlarged. The illustration shows the two houses which he has operated successfully the past couple of seasons. Another house is now in course of erection at the right of those shown in the picture. It is 22x40 and at the street end is to be an office and salesroom. The walls of the new house are of 8-inch concrete.

D'ALCORN ON PEONIES.

I have read the report of the peony show at Boston. Now, I have recently come from the old country and what surprises me most of all is the way that beautiful variety, Duchess de Nemours, is ignored. I will not believe it was not shown, and being shown, how is it that it was not among those favorably mentioned?

This peerless flower won the gold cup at London in 1903, for Veitch, of Chelsea. I traveled all over France and bought the available stocks, as I think one that will beat Festiva maxima is good enough for the trade. For those who do not know it, I may say it is not so white as Festiva maxima, but is a flat, very pale cream, with a slight showing of green in the center, which adds to the beauty, making a refreshing contrast to the white. Whereas Festiva maxima soon falls, Duchess de Nemours is stiffer and lasts double as long, and this is a very great desideratum.

The Hollanders bought this up a few years ago and sent the roots to America from England. I quite agree with the president's remarks as to nomenclature. Personally I have quite 100 varieties and I think fifteen more than enough. I suggest the two I have mentioned, also Couronne d'Or, Marie Lemoine and Canarie. This latter is a beauty when grown well, but so far I have not struck soil good enough for growing peonies at all. One has to make it and it is a strong order. It is almost an impossibility to grow them without a very deep soil, and not only deep but rich, the richer the better. This will keep them dry in a wet time and wet in a dry time, but in this climate they must be mulched well every year. I would also suggest shading, and of course, disbudding. These hints must not be taken as sufficient to the novice, and if a would-be grower is wise he will employ some one to plant them who understands the proper method to pursue. The peonies I have seen in this country look dreadful after seeing them abroad and I conclude the conditions are not favorable, but with care they can be grown and flowered well. Abroad, where the sun does not shine all the time, one has but to dig a hole and drop the root in, and all is as well as can be.

As to peony fungus, this is rather rare abroad and it is partly caused through lifting the roots annually to propagate the stock. I never saw it on any roots three years or more of age, and I make a point of getting any roots so infected right off the farm altogether. O. W. D'ALCORN.

GAILLARDIAS.

Gaillardias have been so materially improved within the past few years that they now constitute one of the most valuable of the several groups of plants available for the summer months. The more recent of the varieties possess a robust habit, are free in blooming, and the flowers are of large size and rich color. They have the additional advantage of being nearly, if not quite, hardy. They will pass through the winter safely when left in the beds and borders; but, according to my experience, the best results are obtained when they are regarded as half-hardy, and treated accordingly.

The perennial gaillardias, which alone will be referred to in these notes, may be raised from seed, which should be sown early in the spring, and placed where it can have the assistance of a little artificial heat. The raising of seedlings is a very simple and inexpensive method of obtaining a stock of plants, but, speaking in a general way, it is not the best. Seedlings of gaillardias, as of most other plants, differ materially in habit, and in the form and color of their flowers, and also in merit. The best of the gaillardias that may be obtained under name are certainly not expensive. Moreover, it is most desirable that the planter should know the character of the growth and the color of the flowers of the plants with which he is filling beds and borders.

The beginning of March is the best time for sowing, and a house in which a temperature of about 60 degrees is maintained is the best place for the seed pans. The seedlings should be pricked off into shallow boxes when an inch or so high. They should be put about two inches apart each way, and when they are becoming crowded be potted singly, 3-inch pots being used. It is a good rule to keep them in the structure in which the seed pans were placed until they are established in the shallow boxes, and then remove them to an unheated house.

Gaillardias are readily raised from cuttings of the young growths in the autumn or in the spring, and by division of the roots in the spring. Cuttings rooted early in the autumn should be placed in a frame where they can be kept rather close, and be shaded from the direct rays of the sun. They should remain in the cutting pots, with protection from frost, during the winter, and be potted off singly some time in March. Spring-struck cuttings should have the assistance of a little artificial heat from the time of their insertion until struck, and be potted off singly as soon as they are nicely rooted.

A Good Form of Single Gaillardia.

Some growers leave gaillardias in the beds through the winter, and the practice is frequently recommended. When wintered in the open ground ashes are heaped over them to a depth of seven or eight inches, this covering being necessary for protecting the roots from frost during the winter, and the tender growth from the ravages of slugs in spring. The practice is admirably adapted to the requirements of many cultivators, but it is not free from objections. My practice for many years, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine, has been to lift the roots late in the autumn and to put them in large boxes, about ten inches in depth, with plenty of soil about them. One variety is put in each box to avoid the risk of their being mixed. The boxes are placed in unheated frames and covered to a depth of several inches with partly-decayed leaves. The lights remain off until the approach of frosts of sufficient severity to pass through the leaves and reach the roots. In the spring, when new growth has commenced, the roots are taken out of the boxes and divided, each portion being put in a 3-inch pot.

The planting of gaillardias should be done early and in the preparation of the soil it should receive a moderate dressing of old hotbed or decayed farmyard manure, or, to be more definite, the manure should be sufficient to form a layer of about four inches in thickness. Plant about fifteen inches apart.

The following varieties are remarkable for their high quality and effectiveness, and can be strongly recommended to those who require a few of the most distinct: Banquo, deep orange with red center; Captain Alwyne Oliver, bright yellow; Captain Percy Scott, deep red with yellow margin; Glory, brilliant red, the florets tipped yellow; Gold Standard, deep yellow; Isabella Louch, orange-yellow, with brown disc; James Kelway, brilliant red with yellow margin, the blooms exceptionally large; Langport, rich crimson, with broad margin of gold; Leonard Kelway, rich crimson with narrow margin of gold; Madame Patti, rich yellow with maroon zone to the disc; Primrose Dame, a pleasing variety with primrose-yellow blooms; Splendidissima plena, a handsome double form, the flowers large, the color crimson with golden margin; Vivian Grey, rich yellow; W. B. Child, deep yellow with red base to each floret; William Kelway, bright crimson with golden margin.

LEAF BLIGHT ON GERANIUMS.

Would you kindly tell me the cause and cure for leaf blight on geraniums in the houses? We had no end of trouble with blight this spring. S. C. C.

We do not know that this trouble is any specific disease; it is merely a condition brought on by improper management, mostly want of light and too much water. I quoted a few weeks ago an instance of a batch of the semi-double pink ivy-leaved geranium that became badly affected with diseased foliage. The circumstances were these: They were in a house that was kept at 55 degrees at night and quite light. Although in only 2¼-inch pots they were growing most vigorously and had made a long growth. Then they were cut half-way back, shifted into 3-inch pots and placed on a shady bench in a temperature at least 10 degrees cooler. Here was a combination of circumstances that was found to bring trouble. The leaves at once became curled and puckered and little growth followed. I believe the tissue of the whole plant simply became overcharged with water, and little evaporation took place.

If it is the rusty, puckered leaf you are troubled with, then a severe drying out for ten days is the only remedy I know of. Too much water and too little sun is the principal cause. Zonal geraniums often lose their leaves or they turn yellow towards bedding out time. Leaves turning yellow is nothing but exhaustion due to watering them two or three times a day. W. S.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

Spanish iris is taking a more important place in British floriculture than ever before, and the Hollanders report some very heavy sales, both for outdoor planting and forcing. This forcing business is of recent development, and although big quantities are being done, not more than one out of ten growers seems to make really a success of the details of the cultivation. There are four main points to observe: First, commence with extra selected bulbs, if possible one size larger than what are usually received from Holland for first size; second, be very careful to let the bulbs make ample root before putting them under glass; third, always see that the boxes are deep enough (eight inches is not too deep) to give ample soil for the roots to feed in; fourth, never subject them to any extremes of temperature, and never attempt to force too rapidly. Do not let the frost get through the boxes when standing outside and do not be afraid of giving plenty of air when they are inside. The following are the varieties used for forcing in England in preference to nearly all other sorts: Alex Van Humboldt, light blue; British Queen, a tall white; Cajanus, golden yellow, gold cup; Thunderbold, bronze; Darling, dark blue; Louise, porcelain and yellow; Belle Chinoise, light yellow.

Quite a sensation is now being experienced in high priced orchid sales. Protheroe & Morris have lately held three more record sales, £4,000 being realized at one sale for less than ninety plants.

The Royal Garden, Kew, was visited on Whit Monday by nearly 100,000 people in the one day, nearly double the number of last year. This is a big increase in the public popularity of floral life in one year.

The importance of getting early delivery of forcing bulbs, and more especially narcissi, is at last being fully recognized by English nurserymen. Many are booking orders for narcissi subject to delivery during July. Formerly it has been thought quite early enough if the bulbs reach our shores the first week in September. This may be all right for bulbs that are not wanted to bloom before February, but such sorts as Golden Spur, ornatus and Double Von Sion that are wanted in bloom Christmas week and during January, to attain perfect success must be boxed up by the end of July and first week in August. The essential point of early forcing is that the bulbs should have as long a time as possible to make roots. Tulips do not appear to suffer so much from late planting, as to a greater extent their bloom is already formed in the dry bulb.

Palms of all sorts have suddenly advanced enormously in price in all English markets and also Belgium. Nurserymen in Covent Garden and elsewhere report better business and at higher prices than for the last five or six years. Probably an advance of an all-round average of fully 100 per cent has taken place. What has caused this big advance is not quite clear to growers and dealers here. Probably the corner in kentia seed in Lord Howe Island, Australia, arranged by Sander & Sons, has affected the situation somewhat, and also the destruction of many thousands of aspidistras, araucarias and palms growing outside on the slopes of Vesuvius, has a lot to do with it. Certainly importation of all foliage stuff from Naples has practically stopped for the time being. For some years, owing to the unprofitable prices, less and less has been raised both in England and Belgium, and stocks were getting very low indeed in all sizes, with the result that if a demand exists prices are bound sooner or later to be forced up.

ORIENTAL POPPY.

I want to grow some oriental poppies and am in search of information. Can you give me the desired information, or put me in correspondence with some one posted on the subject? It is my idea to buy them from the jobbers, and sell them for fall planting. Is such a plan feasible? P. G.

It is possible to buy young seedling plants now, and by giving them the best of care this summer they would be salable this fall. A better plan would be to sow seed at once and grow on in frames and not attempt to sell this fall, but take good care of them during winter and make sales in the spring. The oriental poppy propagates by divisions or seed. Of the many species of this showy genus it is the only long-lived perennial. Most of them are annuals, some are biennials. The Iceland poppy lives only two or three years. As we have experienced, the oriental species is not very easily transplanted, but on your own place where good attention can be given there should be no trouble. I should endorse seed sowing at once in preference to buying plants at this late season. W. S.

THE EAST AND THE WEST.

As a horticulturist I have spent much time both in the east and the west. I went to Boston to attend the national peony show, which was a grand affair, supplemented by the rose show a week later, when another splendid peony exhibit was made.

Aside from these gatherings I visited Mr. Shaylor, of Wellesley Hills, and saw his choice collection and then spent ten days with T. C. Thurlow, the father of the peony business of New England. He must have nearly 100,000 plants. He also has a large collection of seedlings. I spent some time with his sons in marking those of great promise for further testing. This is what we need. Mr. Hollis, of Weymouth, also has some very choice seedlings.

In Nebraska, too, we are doing much along this line and two of our favorites, east and west, are Nebraska born. The writer has 50,000 seedlings under way and hopes that among them there will be many of superior merit, so that in the future the lovers of this glorious flower will look to America instead of Europe. Those originated by John Richardson, of Boston, some years ago I notice now stand well at the head of the list and it is hard to supply the demand. After comparing notes for years and closely observing those growing in both sections, I am convinced we can raise as fine ones in Nebraska as in Massachusetts. Phloxes are much healthier in the west. They are not so much subject to mildew. I saw some fields last week that were white with fungus, a condition I never saw in the west. Delphiniums do equally well in both sections, but now for a word of warning:

Most of our books or gardening and horticulture are published in the east and are sent to westerners, and millions of dollars have been lost in the prairie states by following eastern directions. The broad-leaved evergreens, the azaleas, kalmias, rhododendrons and others of that class cannot live in Nebraska and many of the western states. There is no use in trying them. They are aristocratic easterners and will die rather than live in the wild west. You might as well try to transplant a Boston bred lady from her palatial surroundings to a lonely sod house in western Nebraska. I was determined these shrubs should live, and planted 1,000 under a screen and took the best care of them, but every one of them died.

It does not pay to try the deutzia family. They seem doomed to failure, dying from the winter drought. One of the most conspicuous and attractive trees in the east is Rivers' birch. It is a glory, but you cannot raise it in Kansas and Nebraska. Five hundred died under a screen in York, of the latter state. There are many other things as sensitive to climatic conditions. Years ago the writer sent many thousands of choice mountain trees into the vicinity of Boston and now he rejoices that they are among the finest on earth. They welcome him on every hand, clothed in their royal robes of silver and sapphire. They are standing as sentinels on dress parade in some of the finest grounds of all the land. These do well also in the west, while some kinds do better in the drier air of the prairies than near the sea coast.

The limitations mentioned, however, need not discourage western people. A wave of progress is sweeping that way. Forty kinds of trees are natives of Nebraska. Some are fine ones. Three varieties of the Norway purple maple seem to do well. The great family of 150 kinds of lilacs we can depend upon. Most of the viburnums are a success. We can count on twenty kinds of spiræas and as many of the syringas, or philadelphuses, so in the west there is plenty to do with. Only spend your money for things that will live and be sure to plant successes and not failures.

BEST SWEET PEAS.

I would like to know what are the best four sweet peas, pink, white, lavender and purple, to grow for the market in the vicinity of Chicago.

T. M. A.

I would advise T. M. A. to try several of each and find out which varieties will do best with him. Let him try the following:

White: Emily Henderson, Dorothy Eckford.

Pink: Katherine Tracy, Prima Donna.

Lavender: Lady Grisel Hamilton, Mrs. Walter Wright.

Purple: Navy Blue, Captain of the Blues.

LILIES FOR NOVEMBER.

We would like to have a few lilies in bloom about the middle of November, say lily of the valley, auratum and longiflorum. Can they be had from cold storage to bloom at that time and when should they be planted? B. F.

It is possible to have lilies every day in the year, but November is the most unfavorable time of the whole year for the true lilies, because it is too early for the current year's Bermuda crop and the cold-storage bulbs as late as that are in poor condition. Yet Harrisii and the lancifolium section, including auratum, album and rubrum, are successfully flowered in November and on to Christmas. We have never handled these lilies to flower as late as November, but believe they should be potted and started growing ten to twelve weeks before they are expected to flower. Mind, there is no forcing about the process, rather the reverse. Start in as cool a place as you have and let them come along naturally, with increased sunlight as they approach the flowering time, but never exposed to very bright sun. You want good root growth before the top growth starts. Several eastern firms make a specialty of handling cold-storage lilies.

As for lily of the valley (which is not a lily at all) it is grown in abundance every day in the year. We have found it better to buy weekly of a firm which makes a specialty of this business than storing in our local cold-storage houses, which handle fish, game or embalmed beef, which may not be injured by a variation from zero to the freezing point, but such changes will not do for bulbs or roots. They are not dead, only sleeping. Development is arrested and they are anxious to grow, so start the valley in sand and in a cool, shaded house and let no sun or draught reach them, but water daily until the bells are turning white and then continue watering the sand without wetting the flower spikes.

If the editor will allow its printing, I can tell a little story about the use of ice and what a luxury it is in some circumstances. The story is not new and that's no matter, for the longer you live the more truth you see in the saying that "there is nothing new under the sun."

Three Chicago gentlemen were traveling through the hot desert of Arizona. They had Bass's pale ale, but nothing to cool it, and at last one of the three burst out with the exclamation, "I would give a dollar for a little piece of ice." A Hebrew gentleman who was in the same compartment of the Pullman said, "I think I can accommodate you" and quickly retired to the baggage car, returning with a piece of ice enveloped by his handkerchief. A second gentleman offered the same reward and again Mr. Cohen was a dollar in pocket. After a reasonable lapse of time Chicago No. 3, having hauled in a jack pot, opened his heart and Mr. Cohen tried to respond but returned empty-handed with the information that the baggageman says, "If I take any more ice my brother won't keep." MOLES.

Will some one help me out of serious trouble? The moles are destroying my rose garden. The runs are almost all over it. I have tried everything that I can hear of, but have not succeeded in killing a single one. Have watched all day, but they work at night and the beds look like they worked all night. I have tried to poison them, but they don't touch the corn that I put in. Would castor oil beans do any good, and if so do you pull them up when they begin to grow? Would not want them in my rose beds, of course. Have not put any manure on the beds this spring because I thought it had a tendency to cause moles to frequently run through the beds. Does it? J. S.

This amusing inquiry is from a lady. We can sympathize with her on the mole question. We have been troubled with them in violet beds, solid beds and also in some plantings of hollyhocks and dahlias. They make the beds very unsightly, but we never noticed that injury was done to the plants. Our mole is not the true mole of Europe. It is not so broad but has the same broad feet and hog-like snout, and has the national character for activity and what it lacks in size it makes up for in energy. Miss J. S. wasted time in watching for it while the sun was above the horizon. It is nocturnal in habit, like some of the Chicago florists. It may not be generally known that the mole is carnivorous and does not eat the roots of plants. He is blindly pushing his way through the soil to discover worms and the larvæ of insects that are found in the earth. There is little doubt that while his eyes are only rudimentary, his sense of smell must be wonderfully developed. So it is little use to put poisoned vegetable matter in the ground. He will pass it by and prefer a piece of Chicago canned corn-beef and, without a joke, small pieces of fresh meat that have been dipped in a solution of strychnine or arsenic and then buried in the soil where the moles are busy is likely to bring their Waterloo. The only thing we have found of use to destroy them is a trap advertised in the Review. We caught two of the rodents in short order and that seemed all the crop. One mole is so energetic it would lead you to think there were a score.

I never have heard of ricinus beans being of any use to destroy moles. They are not vegetarians and if they do eat the beans the worst results would be a violent and an acute attack of summer complaint, which is not always fatal, even in higher mammals. Try the poisoned flesh and do not bury it more than three inches beneath the surface. If it were embalmed beef they might reject it, so use fresh beef that has been inspected before and after killing.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business the last week has been slightly better than is to be expected at this time of the year. It appears that the majority of the June weddings came in the latter part of the month, and without exception all of the trade had considerable work in that line. Stock has been scarce with the growers, and the dealers who grow none themselves were able to keep their stock up, as they could purchase from a great many different places, getting enough from all. The growers with stores had some trouble in getting enough of certain varieties to fill orders.

Prices have kept up remarkably well. Roses are still selling at $1.50 per dozen, carnations at 50 cents and 75 cents per dozen. We have had a heavy demand for peonies, but they have been very scarce and of inferior quality. White ones have been held at premium prices. White sweet peas have helped out wonderfully for weddings and funeral work. Large quantities of wild ferns have been brought in, and we have been favored with a variety very similar to the Farleyense which was a great help.

St. Paul.

C. F. Vogt says that he has had a good trade and is now checking up to ascertain the amount of the profit for the last year. He claims the best plant trade he has had in many seasons.

L. L. May & Co.'s force is now busy taking stock, both in the retail department and the wholesale seed department. Trade has been good the last year, their retail sales showing a material increase. Straggling plant orders still continue to come in, but not in large numbers.

The Ramaley Floral Co. has done a nice business, and is still enjoying a small plant trade.

August Vogt reports a good trade in his new store and is much pleased with his move. His present location for resident trade is undoubtedly a good one, and being on the best car line in the city, trade will undoubtedly be brisk.

The plant growers, including Haugen & Swanson, Henry Puvogel and Christ Bussjaeger, are pretty well cleaned out of plants, and all report a good trade.

Minneapolis.

O. G. Swanson still continues to have the bon ton trade and reports a good June business.

A meeting of the Twin City florists to discuss their annual picnic was held at Nagel's greenhouses. The following officers were reëlected: O. J. Olson, chairman; E. Nagel, treasurer; Ralph Latham, secretary. Arrangements were made to start a subscription list among the florists to defray expenses. It was also arranged to hold another meeting to decide what they would do, have a picnic or enjoy a steamboat ride down the Mississippi. Last season St. Paul florists contributed $80, while Minneapolis florists contributed but $40. Come up, boys, and look pleasant.

Oscar Amundson is doing a good business; his location is a good one, although he is bothered to some extent by the Greeks.

Felix.

The Minnesota Rose society held its annual show at Plymouth church, St. Paul, June 30. Eighteen awards were made for roses, and Mrs. D. W. C. Ruff, of St. Paul, took first, which was given for the best collection of roses exhibited by an amateur. Mrs. Ruff was also winner of first in the second class, nearly all of the prizes in the third and in the fourth classes for roses. She won the prize for the best collection of sweet peas.

The best sweepstakes and largest collection of roses grown by the exhibitor was secured by J. P. Brown, of Eureka, with the Rosehill Nursery second. The second prize for the best floral display also went to J. P. Brown, while the Rosehill Nursery captured first.

Mrs. H. B. Tillotson, of Eureka, was successful in several classes, winning the prize for roses in the largest and best display of any one variety, the best collection of peonies by an amateur, etc. The best floral display for an exhibitor outside of the Twin Cities went to J. P. Brown. The premium for the most beautiful rose on exhibition went to the Rosehill Nursery, which also secured a prize for the largest rose on exhibition. Seven prizes in peonies went to the Rosehill Nursery.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business slackened as the end of June approached and Saturday found the market dull. This week opened with receipts somewhat decreased and demand inactive. There is a general report that the shipping trade for the month of June was below the average. The condition still maintains, although there are a fair amount of orders in special lines, Beauties being one of the items generally not in large supply. Kaiserin roses are also selling well, although the reappearance of one or two crops of Bride of quality good for the season has in a measure detracted from the special value of Kaiserins. Maids are of poor color and realizing only moderate prices. Liberty and Richmond are giving good crops and sell better than sorts of other colors. Uncle John is in good shape, but Chatenay is not often seen.

It was thought that the carnation crops were passing off, as receipts were lighter last week in spite of two or three days of scorching hot weather, but Monday morning brought in very heavy cuts, especially of colored sorts. Prices vary widely, but $1 to $1.50 per hundred may be said to be the market on ordinary grades. Occasionally a few bunches are sold at the rate of from $2 to $3 per hundred, but more often the price is 10 cents to 15 cents per bunch.

Practically all the peonies are cleaned up except three lots, which promise to hold out for a week or so. Contrary to expectations the stock is keeping excellently. The early cuts dropped badly when brought from cold storage, but the bunches now coming out leave nothing to be desired. Prices have stiffened slightly, even in these days of the decreasing demand.

Sweet peas are among the most plentiful items in the market and they are also of excellent quality. All colors are offered, but light pink is the best seller. Candidum lilies continue plentiful and there are all the auratums the market can consume. Harrisii have been abundant all along. Pond lilies are plentiful and other items of outdoor stock are beginning to cut considerable figure.

Green goods are equal to all requirements.

John Degnan Resigns.

John P. Degnan has severed his connection with the Chicago Rose Co., handing in his resignation as secretary and manager on June 30 to take immediate effect. The management will hereafter be entirely in the hands of the Ziskas, father and son. Joseph Ziska, as the principal stockholder, is president of the corporation and John J. Ziska has been its treasurer, and to his cares will now be added the duties of the manager. Mr. Degnan contemplates a vacation trip west prior to entering upon any new undertaking.

Matthias Schillo Dies.

Matthias C. Schillo, the junior partner in the Schillo Lumber Co., died quite suddenly on Monday at the age of 30 years. Mrs. Schillo survives, with a daughter of 5 years. She is a cousin of Leonard Kill. The Schillos are known to practically every grower north of town and the news of the young man's untimely demise will be received with much regret.

Dining Car Flowers.

The C. B. & Q. was the first road running out of Chicago to decorate with flowers the tables of its dining cars, but now most of the roads have followed suit. The use of flowers was doubtless due to the suggestion of Bassett & Washburn, who were given, and have for years had, the order for the bouquets, using up in this way their short, open and otherwise unsalable flowers. As the demand grew the Burlington built greenhouses of its own to supply the flowers, and other roads did likewise, but in the last year or two they have found that the bouquets can be bought cheaper than the flowers can be grown. To avoid paying high prices in times of scarcity large ranges of glass are required. Therefore the roads are turning the greenhouses over to the men who grow plants to decorate station grounds and are giving florists standing orders for the dining cars. The George Wittbold Co. now supplies a part of the needs of the Northwestern, while J. F. Wilcox, at Council Bluffs, has the other end of the order.

Meteorological Summary.

June was warmer than the average by quite a bit. The mean temperature was 68 degrees, as against 66 degrees in the thirty-six years since the weather bureau has been keeping records, and as against 65 degrees last year. The highest was 93 degrees June 8 and 28, the lowest 51 degrees June 11. Since January 1 the accumulated excess is 472 degrees. The rainfall was 1.87 inches, as against 3.27 inches last year, and an average in thirty-six years of 3.57 inches. Since January 1 we have had six inches less than the normal rainfall. In June we had eleven clear days, twelve partly cloudy and seven cloudy.

Various Notes.

The Wells Fargo Express Co. on July 1 took over the business of the American and United States companies on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Evansville & Indianapolis, and Evansville & Terre Haute railroads.

A. L. Randall went to his fruit farm in Michigan on Saturday to remain until after the Fourth.

Sam Graff has returned from a visit to the establishment of Graff Bros., at Columbus, O. He spends his leisure with his friend, Kid Hermann, whose fortunes many follow.

E. S. Perryman was in town this week. He is the proprietor of the Southern Floral Co., having bought the greenhouse establishment of the Texas Seed and Floral Co., Dallas, Tex.

John Poehlmann went home June 27 complaining that he had injured his back in handling some heavy boxes of stock. Nothing more was seen of him for several days and word came from his residence that he was confined to his bed.

Peter Reinberg reports an excellent June business, ahead of last year's record.

P. F. Rentfrew, of St. Joseph, Mich., a grower of candidum lilies, was in town Monday.

C. W. McKellar is getting in fine cattleyas, but says the demand has fallen away noticeably in the last week.

There has been so much agitation against the unsightly billboards that the Gunning Co. is to sod in front of its boards wherever possible, plant flower beds, shrubs, etc.

E. C. Amling says he is fairly well satisfied with the volume of business in June, but that if prices had averaged as good as a year ago it would have been much better.

F. F. Benthey looks for a good July trade. The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. is now cutting 6,000 to 8,000 roses a day and the market for good stock nearly always is good while growers are replanting.

E. F. Winterson considers this his most successful year with peonies. He will clean up in good shape some time next week.

Vaughan & Sperry are handling considerable quantities of bone meal, just now in considerable request among the growers.

E. H. Hunt is preparing for an active fall campaign in the supply department.

Wietor Bros. are still cutting heavily of carnations of good quality.

Shasta daisies again are plentiful. Kennicott Bros. Co. is receiving some of exceptional size.

Chas. N. Page, of the Iowa Floral Co., Des Moines, was in town Saturday.

George Reinberg is propagating poinsettias. He did quite well with this crop last Christmas and proposes to duplicate his success this year.

All the big growers report that the call for young rose stock has fallen off and it is reported that several will likely be left with considerable quantities on hand when all the growers are planted up. The proportion of stock now carried over from one year to another without replanting has cut down the demand.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Stock continues poor, but there is enough of good quality coming in for the demand, which was reported light the last week, as the florists' business has now reached summer dullness. This condition is expected to remain with us for the next two months. Some of the retailers reported quite a lot of funeral work the last week, and this is about all they can boast of just now.

The weather has been very hot of late and a good soaking rain would do a world of good to outdoor stock of all kinds. Most of the growers around here are busy replanting and rebuilding.

Looking in at the wholesale houses, one can readily see that really first-class stock in almost everything is scarce, but second-class stock is more than enough and is not so easy to dispose of. Brides and Maids are still badly mildewed. Kaiserins, Richmonds and Carnots have fine clean foliage and sell well. Perles, too, are looking good in flower and foliage.

Carnations are not any too good just now. Prosperity and Enchantress are the best of the lot. Lawson is very poor. Sweet peas are a glut and good long were selling at $1 per thousand with shorts at 50 cents. Feverfew, cornflowers, hollyhocks and tuberoses are among the outdoor stock that comes in. Fancy ferns are easy.

Various Notes.

H. M. Schisler, of the Schisler-Cornelli Seed Co., and Mr. Pommer, of D. I. Bushnell & Co., attended the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the American Seed Trade Association at Toledo, O., last week. Mr. Nichols, of the St. Louis Seed Co., owing to a busy week, could not spare the time to attend.

Miss Belle Miller, of Springfield, Ill., is sending a fine lot of Carnot, Perle

Walter Retzer, formerly of Chicago, and late of Seattle, is in town visiting his mother. Mr. Retzer was a student at Shaw's Garden.

J. M. Page, who was formerly at Shaw's Garden, is back from San Francisco. He was there during the shake-up. Mr. Page is undecided as to his return to 'Frisco.

State Vice-president F. H. Meinhardt, of the S. A. F., will be on hand at the club meeting with blanks for membership. Any one wishing to join should see him.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, was in town on Saturday celebrating his thirty-sixth birthday with the boys in the wholesale district. Smoking good cigars was in order.

There is a movement on foot whereby all the four wholesale houses will close at 5 p. m. during July and August, which would be much enjoyed by the employees.

A foot race to be run at the club's annual outing this month, has been arranged for the young lightweights and six footers. In this class will be found W. C. Smith, George Angermueller, George Frow, Rude Windt, Eddie Gerlach, Young Jablonsky, Walter Sanders and Will Ossic.

Next Thursday afternoon, July 12, the Florists' Club meeting will take place at the home of President Ammann, in Edwardsville, Ill. The members are requested to meet at bridge entrance, Third and Washington avenue, at 12:30, and take a car marked Alton, Edwardsville and Granite City connections. A car of this kind leaves every twenty minutes. After the last change at Mitchell, ask the conductor to let you off at the greenhouses. There are two changes, one at East St. Louis and the other at Mitchell. President Ammann is making great preparations and expects every member of the club to attend. Ladies are especially invited. A general good time is in store for those who attend.

A florists' summer league has been formed to bowl once a week. Two teams have already been made up as follows: C. A. Kuehn, Ed. Gerlach, George Schriefer, Henry Lohrenz, W. C. Smith, James Arata, Otto Bruenig, A. Gieger, Wm. Adels and J. J. Beneke. We would like to hear from other florists who wish to join to make up the third team. The list of prizes for the summer bowling will be made known later

BOSTON.

The Market.

We have experienced some of the hottest weather of the season of late, but business on the whole has remained fairly good. The quantity of really good flowers now coming in is comparatively small and those possessing the necessary quality have brought good summer prices. On the other hand, a number of roses and carnations have brought little, scarcely enough to pay the expense of carrying them in. As many rose houses are now being replanted and others rested the supply of indoor roses is not heavy. However, some good Beauty, Killarney, Carnot and Kaiserin are seen. Hybrids from outdoors are less plentiful and the present week will end them.

Carnations sell at a rather wide range, those at the lowest prices are, however, poor. Sweet peas sell quite well. A good many outdoor ones now come in. The white, lavender, pink and orange shades are in best demand. Peonies are over. Gladioli and lilies are scarce. Valley continues in good supply and fine

Club Field Day.

In spite of the oppressive heat and the threatening weather there was a good attendance of members on the occasion of the field day at William Sim's, Clifftondale, June 30. Some made the journey on steam cars and others on the cooler electrics. Altogether forty were there. An inspection of the large and up-to-date greenhouse plant was first in order. With the exception of one house devoted to a selection of English melons and two to White Spine cucumbers, all the glass is at present devoted to tomato culture, over 25,000 plants being now fruiting. These are planted in the ground, trained to a single stem and carry a tremendous crop of fruit. Comet is the variety grown entirely indoors. Some five tons per week are now being picked and this will be increased very soon. The pick July 2 was 120 bushels, all first quality.

Chrysanthemums were last year largely planted here, some 75,000 being grown to single stems. These are now entirely discarded and the whole establishment the coming winter will be given up to violets and sweet peas, the latter being grown for early spring flowering, not winter. Over 100,000 Princess of Wales violets were noted in the fields and looked well. This, in Mr. Sim's opinion, is the queen of violets and the coming season he will undoubtedly be the largest grower of it in America. Outdoors some 25,000 tomatoes were growing trained in a variety of ways. A good many fruits had already been picked from these. Everything on the place was scrupulously clean and reflected the greatest credit on Mr. Sim.

The company was generously entertained by Mr. Sim after making a tour of his place and speeches were made by Messrs. Gill, Duncan, Finlayson, Westwood, Wheeler and others, all of whom praised the high culture seen. The afternoon proved a most instructive and profitable one for the large company who attended.

Various Notes.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club's picnic to be held July 25 at Caledonian grove, is being looked forward to by many. As usual there will be a full line of athletic contests for both sexes and all ages. The committee in charge includes Messrs. Palmer, Heurlin, Duncan, Finlayson and Riggs.

The demand for Disparene, a form of arsenate of lead, is so great at present that firms can with difficulty fill their orders. It is used for spraying for the gypsy and brown tail moths, elm beetle, canker worm and other caterpillars; also for clearing out the potato bug and quite a few other pests.

H. H. Barrows & Son are experiencing a heavy call for their new Nephrolepis Whitmanni. They state that they are unable to deliver plants quite as fast as they would like. W. N. Craig.

BUFFALO.

Hot Weather.

At last we have had some really hot weather, which has shrivelled up carnations and roses. In defense of our climate I wish to say that the mercury in the thermometer seldom goes high, always much lower than other great lake cities, yet the humidity was awful. For instance, last Thursday 78 degrees was the highest mark reached, while Chicago went up to 95 degrees, yet here it was a perfect Turkish bath from sunrise to long after sunset. The primitive and inexpensive attire of our first parents in the famous garden was all that was needed for comfort. Perhaps Adam believed that the fig tree was evolved to provide wearing apparel and little thought it would become the essential food of the silk worm and hence the introduction of the beautiful fabric that would cover the lovely forms of the future daughters of Miss Clara Louise Eve Adam.

Heavy Hail.

A violent hailstorm visited the northern part of Erie county Sunday afternoon. Chunks of ice as large as the proverbial hen's egg are reported to have fallen. It was severest in the towns of Tonawanda, Amherst and Genesee, but we have not yet heard of any florist losing glass, and hope that Secretary Esler will never hear of it. We don't believe in any such nonsense as a hail belt. There is a pie belt, and a divorce belt, also a murder belt at present located in southeastern New York state. These are all the result of the vicious actions of man. The hail is the result of the forces of nature, and all florists who fail to carry hail insurance make a big financial error. If you have a million feet of glass and think you can carry your own insurance, you are making an economic mistake, and if you have only 100,000 feet of glass, or less, and all your capital is invested in your houses, you are making a much bigger mistake. You are facing the chance of utter ruin. We know the sensation, when not insured, of seeing the dark clouds come up against the wind, the fitful flash, the crack of the atmosphere closing where it was separated by the mysterious juice called electricity, and then occurs to you "we are not insured." You offer up a prayer of repentance and promise that you will send in your application as soon as the storm has blown over. The hail insurance is a most excellent institution, ably and honestly run. It has saved many a man from ruin and it should be supported and encouraged from loyalty to our business and brother florists at large, and we deeply regret that some near relatives of the writer unwisely think they can get along without this insurance. It's not my fault, John.

The Albright Place.

All florists or gardeners who have occasion to drop off in this slow but beautiful city should visit the model garden and houses of J. J. Albright, presided over by Charles Sandiford, who will be found on Cleveland avenue. I have no right to invite the public to visit another man's private property, but Mr. Albright is such a broad-minded philanthropist and his gardener, Mr. Sandiford, is so kind and good-natured, that neither of them would think a half hour spent with a sympathetic brother anything but a fraction of life well spent. Only a few of the pleasures of this life can be enjoyed without the help of your friends. The greatest achievement will fall flat without the approbation of your friends.

We consider a well conducted private establishment a great boon in any locality. Here we can see how the newest and most popular plants can be grown to perfection. We can learn much, among other things the possibilities of plants where time and expense are not too strictly observed, and what a joy a well-ordered garden is where order and cleanliness are observed and dirt, untidiness, slovenliness and general disorder are banished. Some pin-headed or pig-headed men of all ages will say, "Oh, that is all very well; he has all the help he wants and all the means he wants." That has little to do with it. It's the man at the helm who must be given the credit.

The new range of glass only finished about New Year's is very complete. Steel and cement are used everywhere; nothing to rot. The houses are 20x100. They are models of the best work of the Lord & Burnham Co. A narrow, equal-span house is very interesting, for it contains in one compartment Telegraph cucumbers hanging from the roof by the hundreds. Next is a house of Rocky Ford melons looking like green swans' eggs, a very interesting sight and one that took me back over fifty years, to the days of short clothes and dirty paws. Roses, carnations, orchids; in fact, everything that is attempted, is done to perfection. Just now there is a grand lot of gloxinias and a house full of cattleyas looking as vigorous as healthy cabbages.

The old range, where Mr. Sandiford achieved such marked success with flowering plants, has been converted into fruit houses. Here you will see thrifty young espalier peaches, nectarines, apricots and farther on two compartments of grapes of half a dozen of the most approved varieties, including a large portion of that most delicious grape, Muscat of Alexandria, and the good old Black Hamburg. The vine borders, all inside, are three feet deep and thoroughly drained and the young vines are growing as only plants can where all their desires are supplied.

I could mention many things of interest about this model garden, but my remarks are long, so I will go no further and conclude by saying that it is a place that not only is a delight to a florist but still more so to the gardener. Success in every department and splendid arrangement in lawn and trees, vegetables, fruit and flowers are all due to the executive ability and thorough gardening knowledge of Charles Sandiford. Just one remark will show the man: "Why, Mr. S., I don't consider attending to these grapevines work; it is only a pleasure. I love to be with them." That is the spirit that makes a gardener.

RICHMOND, IND.—Chas. Knopf has been trying Louis Wittbold's rose nozzle and thinks highly of it. With it he finds the operator is able to get any kind of spray he needs to do best work. Mr. Knopf says he thinks there is hardly a place where some man on the force does not get the benches too wet while syringing, but with this nozzle he finds this difficulty overcome.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The improvement in the cut flower market during the last ten days of June held encouragingly until Saturday, when the bottom fell out with a thud. Immense shipments arrived; prices receded; the market was flooded and the ice-boxes felt the strain. But there was no complaint up to that time and wholesaler and retailer shared alike in the general satisfaction. Commencements, weddings and steamer sailings passed all previous records. Stock up to Friday was at no time overabundant. From now on the yearly summer depression will continue. Nothing out of the ordinary stagnation of July and August need be expected.

As an evidence of this the wholesale cut flower establishments all will close at 3 p. m. until September 1. An agreement to this effect had been signed by every wholesale florist and supply man with the exception of two at 3 o'clock on Saturday and these can be depended upon to support the humanitarian decision. It is a wise movement, worthy of the generous employers, and will add without a doubt to the host of faithful employees who in busy times know no stated hours and often work through the night when necessity demands it.

Grand Japanese irises are in the market. Several of the leading wholesalers have stock on exhibition that has never been excelled. Lilies are still abundant. Immense quantities are used in some of the big wedding decorations. Donohoe had one in Jersey last week that utilized many hundreds of them and with home and tent embellishments dozens of cases of smilax, asparagus and large palms and thousands of roses, the services of half a dozen decorators in addition to his own supervision were employed for three days. Mr. Geraghty, formerly of Thos. Young, Jr., force, is now with Mr. Donohoe.

Various Notes.

Messrs. Hanft and Bridgman are no longer with Mr. Young.

The holidays of the lieutenants and book-keepers, ladies and gentlemen, in the wholesale section have begun. To specify would, before the summer is over, include every faithful employee, for the liberal recognition of service by the cut flower merchants is well known. There is no limit to their generosity.

L. C. Bobbink, of Bobbink & Atkins, sailed on Tuesday for his annual European trip.

John J. Perkins has taken Mr. Schumann into partnership, the new firm to be known as Perkins & Schumann, and they are already established at their new address, 50 West Twenty-eighth street. The new ice-box just installed by the firm is a fine one and ample for the anticipated increase in business.

Siebrecht & Son have moved into the store now being completed at the back of their former "palace," with offices on the first floor of the building. Ultimately they will move into the big store adjoining their former beautiful establishment. Some conception of its value may be realized when it is known the annual yearly rental to be paid by the trust company which has taken it is $27,000 a year. Henry Siebrecht, Sr., and Mrs. Siebrecht, are spending part of the summer with relatives in Colorado.

Bonnet & Blake are now settled in their fine new wholesale store on Lexington street, Brooklyn. They have leased the whole building and now have abundant facilities for a business of large proportions. Many of their shippers have been with them since the opening of their old place years ago.

Hicks & Crawbuck, Inc., have added a fine new outfit to their many conveniences, a horse and wagon equal to any in the trade. They are preparing for a big supply business as soon as the season opens and have abundance of room. Mr. Crawbuck is spending the summer at his Long Island residence.

An enormous quantity of flowers were used at the funeral of the notorious architect, Stanford White, nearly all of the Fifth avenue retailers having large orders and expensive designs.

The nurserymen and seedsmen who attended the annual conventions at Dallas and Toledo are back with reports of cordial welcome and much enjoyment. One of them, C. L. Allen, of Floral Park, has made an extensive visit through several western states, lecturing in many places, and since his return has celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday. He is a fine illustration of the results of right living and bids fair to cross the century. Four generations joined with him in appropriate felicitation.

J. B. Ezechel, in addition to his wholesale work in New York, is conducting a successful retail store at Long Branch, N. J., this summer.

Some idea of the telephone facilities of the city, which are now used by every progressive florist, may be had when you realize that the quarterly directory just delivered to subscribers here filled twenty-five freight cars and weighed 400 tons. It takes 200 men four weeks to distribute them. Over a quarter million names of New York's progressive men are in the book. Every four months 365,000 books are distributed. Some of the florists here do nine-tenths of their retail business by telephone. The new rate of 5 cents a message, now in force, makes the service very popular.

The boom in Long Island real estate continues and is playing havoc with the market gardeners' profession. If it continues we will have to resort to canned vegetable supply centers, and canned goods of any kind are not very seductive since the Packingtown exposures. Some cities seem to think the inflation in values of land within fifty miles of New York city is artificial. Time will demonstrate the error of this opinion. We will have a population of six millions before 1910. Where will they live, if not within a radius of twenty-five miles which now covers the field of apparent abnormal land increase in values? Every piece of land that has been sold will be occupied by homes for our citizens within the time suggested.

Western florist visitors who spent a few days with us lately remarked upon the beautiful displays in all the windows of our leading florists and the attractive arrangement, novelty and artistic blending of colors that characterize them universally. I am glad to be able to substantiate this just comment. There never is a day, even in the heat of summer, when this important necessity of all flower shops worthy of the name is neglected. To specify would take up too much space and to describe would make individualization necessary. Each decorator has his style and none fails in ability to make his windows attractive to the passing throng.

The Picnic.

The sixth annual outing of the New York Florists' Club on Monday was a great success. A big storm came on Saturday night after the hottest June 30 ever known. But in this changeable climate a single hour brought a flood and a drop in temperature of 30 degrees, so that the longed-for agreeable weather for the outing did not disappoint us. The attendance was far ahead of previous years, the sail delightful, and the program was carried out without a break and most harmoniously. Early printing of the REVIEW this week makes a complete list of the prize winners impossible.

The committee worked hard and deserves especial credit. Prizes to the value of about $250 were distributed. The donors of the prizes included President Scott, B. Suzuki, H. J. Hoffmeir, John Birnie, C. S. Weber, John I. Raynor, A. J. Guttman, Ford Bros., L. B. Craw, Julius Roehrs, Jr., Phil Kessler, Charles Millang, Lager & Hurrell, John Young, Charles Schenck, J. K. Allen, Vaughan's Seed Store, F. R. Pierson Co., Arthur T. Boddington, E. C. Horan, Moore, Hentz & Nash, F. H. Traendly, A. L. Miller, Geller Supply Co., Patrick O'Mara, Chas. Lenker, Jos. S. Fenrich, Alex. McConnell, Schloss Bros., Leonard Barron, E. W. Holt, Johnston Heating Co., Alfred Zeller, J. G. Esler, and others. The greatest interest centered in the ladies' bowling contest and ladies' racing, the fat men's race, the tug of war, the children's running and the ball game. The day was one long to be remembered. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market conditions last week were fair, with a number of small weddings and entertainments requiring flowers. This week conditions may be briefly summed up by saying that there is business in the morning and dullness in the afternoon. A moderate demand exists for funeral flowers, valley, sweet peas, Kaiserin roses and Beauties being the principal factors. Early asters have appeared in limited quantity.

At the Close of the Year.

Last Sunday marks the natural close of the florists' year. It was the end of the half year, a time when business conditions are best suited for taking account of stock, to be promptly followed by plans for the next twelve months.

There is no question that the year just closed has been one of prosperity to most of us. Our products, from luxuries, are fast becoming necessities to a country of wonderful resources. Our city is becoming more and more powerful as a great center of every branch of our industry; flowers, plants, seeds and supplies arrive and depart in steadily increasing volume. The public has shown as keen appreciation of quality, of originality, of artistic arrangement in flowers as in water colors and in oil paintings. This taste every man and woman in our profession can cultivate and improve. The marked features of the last year are the increase in the use of flowers for special occasions, as of joy and sorrow, for plants at Easter, and to a lesser extent at Christmas, and for the wherewithal to garden in every branch.

Various Notes.

Bayersdorfer & Co. have received a shipment of unfinished or natural tone ware, the first seen in this market. It is of artistic design, the direct antithesis of the Pompeian tone ware. Mr. Berkowitz thinks it will have a great run.

M. Rice & Co. report that they are now in a position to take care of orders from their new importations, which are arriving on every incoming steamer.

The Johnson Seed Co. opened for business last Monday at 217 Market street. The officers of the company are: President, Herbert W. Johnson; secretary and treasurer, Clifford Phillips; manager flower seed, bulb and mail order departments, Wm. J. Sherry, and manager garden and grass seed and poultry supply departments, Joseph W. Bradley. All these gentlemen were for over eighteen years with the old firm of Johnson & Stokes.

Walter P. Stokes opened his seed store at 219 Market street last Monday. Mr. Stokes has contracted with the King Construction Co. for three truss houses which will double his plant at Moorestown, N. J.

Miss Verner, daughter of James Verner, of Garrettsford, was married on Wednesday of last week. Phil was not there, alas, and cannot tell you about the bridegroom and other necessary details. You must ask Edward Reid all about it.

The Michell window is a beautiful illustration of the advisability of using paper bags to protect grapes.

The floor space at S. S. Pennock's has been further increased by improvements this week.

Eugene Bernheimer handles choice cornflowers.

Hope you had a jolly Fourth.

George A. Strohlein sailed for Europe this week to personally inspect the Dreer azaleas.

Robert Crawford, Jr., well known as a leading retailer, is one of our most enthusiastic growers. His new house is said to be for asparagus.

The July meeting of the club was held in Horticultural hall last Tuesday. Japanese irises were discussed.

Victor Grossans has sailed for Europe. It is rumored he, too, is after azaleas.

Phil thanks J. Austin Shaw for his kind invitation to the New York Florists' Club outing and regrets extremely that he had to stay at home and work.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—Announcement has been made that William Clark, the original owner of the Clark greenhouses, will resume charge of the greenhouses, nurseries and gardens, which for the last year and a half have been under the management of J. B. Braidwood, Mr. Clark having taken over this part of the business from Mr. Braidwood. The store has been sold to Miss Flora Kennedy, formerly of Cripple Creek, and she will manage this part of the business. The Clark greenhouses are the oldest in the city, and up to about a year and a half ago were managed directly by Mr. Clark, until the business was transferred to Mr. Braidwood.

MICHIGAN bean growers report a good stand and the outlook for the coming crop satisfactory.

IT is reported that S. D. Dysinger has resigned his position in the seed department of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and that another manager has been installed in his place.

THERE were seventeen cases of Harrisii on the Pretorian from Bermuda, arriving at New York June 30. The principal shipment is due on the next boat, arriving July 6 or 7.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—It is expected that the onion set growers will begin to harvest their crop within a day or two. The crop is not expected to be more than two-thirds of an average one.

THE pea crops of Wisconsin are reported to be in good shape at present. The weather has been favorable right along and the prospect at this time of the year for a good crop has seldom been better.

ONE Chicago onion set grower started to harvest June 25, the earliest date on record. It should be stated that these sets were of the Pearl variety, which usually mature two weeks earlier than the regular kinds.

C. C. MORSE & Co. have re-established headquarters at San Francisco, at 171 and 173 Clay street, only sixty days after the destruction of their building by the fire following the earthquake. Before another season they again will be in first-class shape to handle their Pacific coast catalogue trade. The disaster has had no effect on the contract growing and wholesale end of the business.

RECENT rains in the Chicago onion set section north of the city have made things look better. It was doubtful, a week or two ago, whether some of the pieces would not have been more profitable if plowed up and something else planted in the place. Such pieces at this time look as though they may make half a crop. South of the city the crop averages well and on the whole two-thirds of last year's crop, which it will be remembered was not a full one, is likely to be the result when the harvest is completed.

PHILADELPHIA.—The firm of Johnson & Stokes, as per previous announcements, dissolved by expiration of a twenty-five years' partnership agreement on June 30, and on July 2 opened as two separate concerns, the Johnson Seed Co., at 217 Market street, and Walter P. Stokes at 219 Market. The Johnson Co. retains most of the old organization.

THE agricultural appropriation bill, with the provision for free seeds for 1907, finally passed both branches of congress in the closing hours last Saturday and immediately received the President's signature. From the moment the house adopted the amendment for free seeds, there was really no chance of defeating the appropriation; the delay of nearly two months was entirely due to the meat inspection amendment added to the bill when it reached the senate.

SEEDSMEN ADJOURN.

Henry W. Wood, of T. W. Wood & Sons, Richmond, Va., was elected president of the American Seed Trade Association at Toledo June 28. The other officers chosen are: First vice-president, Charles Burge, Toledo; second vice-president, G. B. McVey, Birmingham, Ala.; secretary and treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland; assistant secretary, J. H. Ford, Ravenna, O. As forecasted in last week's Review, the expression was for meeting in New York City next year. The decision rests with the executive committee.

The by-laws were amended to admit individuals as well as concerns to membership, and the membership fee was raised to $25. New members elected were: W. P. Stokes, Philadelphia; W. H. Morehouse & Co., Toledo; W. H. May & Son, Alexandria, Va.; Alex. Forbes, of Henderson & Co., New York; Rudy & Gartner, Paola, Kan.; J. A. Dunlap, Nashua, N. H.; J. J. Buffington & Co., Baltimore; Cockley Milling Co., Lexington, O.

Following the paper of James Burdette and the report of Secretary Kendel, delegate to the National Council of Horticulture, an appropriation of $200 was made to further the press work of the council.

J. Chas. McCullough, for the committee on seed adulteration, reported that in the committee's view the simplest and most practicable way of preventing the adulteration of clover seed is to place a prohibitive duty on trefoil. No action was taken.

W. S. Powell, of Boston, spoke for the credit and collections department of the Wholesale Seedmen's League.

F. W. Bolgiano, for the committee on customs, related a conference with the authorities at Washington as to the proposed penalties for undervaluation, with no results of consequence, but was able to state what forms of evidence would be considered as establishing the correctness of invoices. The committee also said a word for the parcels post, supplementing the report of Charles N. Page, who went in detail into the subject of postal laws and needed reforms. It was asserted that the opposition of the express companies and the country merchants makes the parcels post difficult of attainment.

The committee on government free seeds reported on the effort made this spring to end this abuse, but it was a subject of little interest, as all are familiar with the failure.

George S. Green, for the transportation committee, reported on the rate legislation, but said that of greater consequence to the seed trade is the proposed uniform bill of lading.

He called attention to a recent important decision of the supreme court of Alabama that makes a bank responsible for the grade of seed when the bank collects a draft attached to a bill of lading.

The cental system was urged by the committee on weights and measures, presented by Charles Burge. The committee showed the advantages of this compared with the system of bushel measure.

In the absence of the chairman, W. D. Ross, the report of the committee on experiment stations was read by J. T. Buckbee. He proposed that the laws preventing seed adulteration be made more comprehensive.

The committee on president's address consisted of S. F. Willard, W. Atlee Burpee, H. W. Wood and C. Cropp. Their report paid high compliment to the document and urged upon the association the desirability of several of the president's recommendations, especially that which relates to the compilation, with a view to ultimate publication, of a descriptive list of all the different varieties of vegetables at present in the trade. The desirability of such authoritative description also was pointed out in the address by W. W. Tracy.

Membership in the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, to which G. B. McVey was last year's delegate, was retained.

H. W. Wood, for the committee on legislation, reported on the year's legislation as affecting the seed trade.

The program of essays was interesting. The paper of Henry Nungesser was read by Albert McCullough. It was authoritative on the subject of "Desirable Imported Natural Grasses." Floyd Brallier's paper on "The Seed Catalogue from the Customer's Standpoint," was read by P. H. Gage. Evidently the customer's standpoint and that of the scientific seedsman as represented by Prof. Tracy are not far apart. W. S. Woodruff read Mr. Burdette's paper on the press work of the Council of Horticulture. J. H. McFarland spoke for Niagara Falls and civic improvement. Burnett Landreth gave an interesting history of the seed trade, and Finley Acker's paper related to retail conditions in general merchandising.

Just before final adjournment, the retiring president, W. H. Grenell, was presented a handsome cut glass punch bowl, a dozen glasses and a silver server, in recognition of his efficient services as executive during the last year. The presentation was made by W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia, with brief congratulatory remarks. Mr. Grenell responded feelingly, expressing his appreciation of the testimonial of the regard in which he is held.

The hospitalities were more openhanded than ever. There was amusement for the ladies every day, trolley rides, luncheons, etc. Wednesday evening the entire party was entertained at the theater, the vaudeville artists having been well coached on bits of trade gossip and personal peculiarities. One afternoon was spent at a ball game. But the chief effort of the committee was the banquet at the Zenobia Club on Wednesday evening, when covers were laid for 250. The tables were decorated with clover blossoms and stalks of wheat and timothy. The boutonnieres were clover blossoms.

William H. Morehouse, of the Toledo Produce Exchange, acted as toast-master. With a few well received remarks he introduced the first speaker, Mayor Brand Whitlock. The mayor took for his theme, "High Ideals."

George B. McVey, of Birmingham, complimented Toledo on its numerous industries. He also boomed his own town, which is one of the leading producers of iron of the United States. He advised the seedsmen to become

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The radish crops are having a bad time, both with adverse weather and insect troubles, and the yield promises to be much below the average. I have had no personal observation of these troubles, excepting some few crops in Italy, from which the reports were generally very favorable and a full crop was expected, but I should imagine the bad weather lately experienced both in the French and German growing districts would cause the crops to suffer very heavily. It is at these times when crops are in a weak and patchy state, and the plants are least able to withstand the onslaught, that insects make their presence most heavily felt. Probably the radish crops all over Europe will be considerably below average, for although Italy reported a very favorable crop for nearly all seed lines, radish included, as apparently that country has not suffered at all as other countries have through bad weather, the eruption of Vesuvius has quite checked any hopes there may have been of extra good crops. Since the calamity Italy is worse off than other districts. In further news I have from Naples the volcanic rain of ashes, etc., has not only destroyed existing vegetation, but the thick layer of ashes and lava which is covering the whole countryside will render the land unfertile for some time and some growers say where it is very thickly covered it will require two or three years before the soil can be successfully cultivated B. J.

WITTBOLD WATERING SYSTEM

Awarded The
S. A. F.
Medal For Merit
..at the..
Washington Convention, August, 1905

Several features of the System have since been improved and it is, for both greenhouse and garden use,

PERFECT—PRACTICAL—PROFITABLE

With the WITTBOLD SYSTEM you can in hot weather keep your houses from 10 to 20 DEGREES COOLER than adjoining houses not so equipped.

HERE IS WHAT SOME USERS SAY:

"Saves 90 per cent of our watering labor. We now have the Wittbold System in all houses. Do the watering in one hour that formerly took twelve hours—and do it better. We are recommending the system to our friends." W. B. DAVIS & CO., Aurora, Ill.

"We tried the Wittbold System on roses in one house and then equipped five more houses. We think the Wittbold System soon will be universally used."
KLEHM'S NURSERIES, Arlington Heights, Ill.

"The last season I shall use a hose. I have raised one crop of lettuce and did not use the hose once. It waters a space about twenty feet wide and the way we put it in the cost is not very much."
STEPHEN HYDE, Carthage, Mo.

"As a gardener who has been in the business all my life I wish to say that the Wittbold watering system has much merit and will save much labor in the greenhouse."
WM. EDELFSEN, Milwaukee, Wis.

Write for other testimonials and the address of the nearest place where the System may be seen in use.

On the strength of what the WITTBOLD SYSTEM has done for those first to use it, we are this season supplying full equipment for many large places.

TO GIVE SYSTEM A TRIAL

Send for a Swivel Wheel, $2.00, with galvanized connections; or $2.50, with brass connections; and six half-inch nozzles at 50c each. And see for yourself. The investment of $5.00 will be sufficient for 100 feet of pipe and will afford a fair trial. The ½-inch 50c nozzles can be spaced 10 to 20 feet apart on pipe, according to water pressure, and screwed into tee connections. No tapping of pipe is necessary. Where closer spacing is desired we recommend ⅜-inch nozzles, to be tapped into pipe; price, 15c each.

THIS SYSTEM WAS DEVISED FOR GREENHOUSE WORK

but can also be used for outside work with best results. It consists of pipes and tips so arranged that a continuous sheet of water the full length of the house can be supplied to a bench of plants and at the will of the operator can be directed upward from underneath the plants, downward from above the plants or parallel with the bench so that only the soil in the bench is watered.

The Special Rose Nozzle

The Special Rose Nozzle is just what growers need for syringing. It throws a more concentrated stream of water, in an upward direction, with body sufficient to dislodge red spider, etc. Can be regulated to suit the needs of the individual operator.

Price, $1.00. Sold by seedsmen.

The Wittbold Hose Nozzle

For greenhouse or garden use is far superior to anything on the market, the spray can be changed instantly from a fine fan-shaped spray into any form or shape the operator may desire, by simply pushing a sleeve backward and forward. This can be done as quickly as taking the finger on and off the hose.

Price, $1.00. Handled by seedsmen.

WASHINGTON.

Current Comment.

The adjournment of congress coming as it did in the midst of a hot spell, has left the flower trade in a dull condition.

There is not, however, anything to complain of, as the statesmen would have been foolish to remain here to broil when the mountains, lakes and deep blue sea all sigh for their presence. While we miss them sadly, may they all return. Notwithstanding all this, some business is being transacted, though not enough to keep anybody in the retail line very busy. The growers are getting work good and plenty, regardless of whether there is money in it or not. When the dry spell ended there came a wet spell, and all who have to do with outdoor stock have had to fight to prevent them being smothered in weeds.

The local growers are sending in very creditable stock of La France and Kaiserin roses. Carnations are badly stricken with the heat, but passable stock of Enchantress, Joost, Flora Hill and other whites may still be seen. There is an abundance of cut feverfew and some sale for nice plants of it in 5-inch and 6-inch pots. Sweet peas are not abundant, but there is some good stock on the market selling at nominal figures.

The heavy storm, noted several weeks ago, made busy times for the various park departments. What with cutting up and removing fallen trees, pruning, etc., they have had their hands full.

SCOTTY.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Trade the last week has been good, owing to the closing of a medical school. The weather is very hot here, and some stuff is suffering for rain. Some good roses are to be seen and also some fine carnations.

Various Notes.

Jacob Schulz has torn down four houses and will build new in their places.

Henry Fuchs was given a surprise party by his friends Monday, June 25, at his residence on Texas street. A dainty supper was set, and was enjoyed by everybody. Dancing was kept up until a late hour. Henry carried off the honors for fancy dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bohrman have returned from Norrie much improved in health.

T. B. Rudy, who was overcome by the heat last week, is again able to attend to his business.

Adam Heitz, opposite the St. Louis cemetery, has some very fine chrysanthemums in pots. His mums in the greenhouses are also doing nicely; they have a healthy growth.

Carnations in the field here are all looking fine, with good stocky growth. Some very fine plants are to be seen about here.

ROCHESTER.

This week really finishes the season here. Outdoor stock is arriving in large quantities, and with the migration of the people to the seashore and mountain, who can pay good money for the best stock, business is practically all in until autumn. Roses, carnations, sweet peas; in fact, all indoor flowers, have been a drug on the market. The glorious Fourth may revive sales in a degree, but as this is the only day in the year the florists sacrifice to pleasure, business has to be done ahead. Still, prospects are bright, if the weather keeps clear.

Chas. H. Vick, president of James Vick's Sons, and W. T. Fonda, representing Mandeville & King Co., returned from the seedsmen's convention the latter part of last week. They report a most agreeable meeting and speak in appreciation of Toledo as a city and the sociability of its representatives.

HYDRANGEAS We have a magnificent lot of Otaksa, nice plants coming into bud and bloom, which will be in perfection during July and August, when they are in great demand at watering places and other summer resorts. There is nothing showier or more satisfactory for lawn decoration. We make a specialty of these, and find an increasing demand for them from year to year. They can be shipped anywhere safely by freight. Large plants in tubs, $2.00 and $3.00 each; very large specimens in half barrels, $5.00 and $7.50 each.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Crimson Winter Rhubarb.

Replying to a query in the Review of June 21 regarding Crimson Winter rhubarb, our experience may be of use to the enquirer. Last March a year ago we sowed a packet of seed obtained from Mr. Burbank and put the young seedlings out in May. They did little till September, when they grew rapidly. In November and December we picked several small lots. Our climate is mild. In January we dug up two dozen plants and planted them in mother earth in a greenhouse. They did well. We began to pick in three weeks and have picked ever since. The plants are now resting. This rhubarb is evidently one to grow in the light. I should imagine that the pick from two-year-old plants would far exceed that of any other variety, but it would not be possible to obtain the same amount as can be picked from an ordinary field clump in the same length of time usually given to forcing rhubarb. Neither would it be advisable to grow it under benches or in the dark.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The annual rose show of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held in a tent on the grounds of the Essex Country Club on June 27 and 28. The dates selected were a trifle early for roses, but nevertheless there was a fine display of these and other seasonable flowers, the exhibition being pronounced the best ever held by the society. For best display of garden roses F. Brasch, gardener to Mrs. James McMillan, was in the lead, Wm. Swan, gardener to R. C. Hooper, second. For the finest display of flowers filling one of the society's tables Mrs. H. L. Higginson was first, Mrs. McMillan second. For table of roses arranged by ladies only, first Mrs. M. F. Bartlett, second Mrs. G. C. Cabet. Table of cut pelargoniums, first Miss A. G. Thayer, James McGregor, gardener.

The silver cup offered by Julius Heurlin for the best display of hardy herbaceous plants went to Wm. Swan, who showed forty varieties, James McGregor second. Other good tables were shown in this class by Mrs. C. H. Tweed, Mrs. F. R. Tibbetts and Mrs. W. Scott Fitz. For best collection of vegetables James Salter, gardener to P. Dexter, was, as usual, ahead with a fine lot, Mrs. G. S. Curtis, E. P. Hooper gardener, being second. Other classes were well contested and there were some fine honorary exhibits. Judges were Julius Heurlin, Kenneth Finlayson and David Weir.

PACIFIC COAST.

GOOD GROWING SEASON.

This should be a banner year for all kinds of stock in central and northern California. Never before in the history of the nursery business in this state has there been such a favorable season for heavy growths and well rooted stock. Under the usual conditions we do not get any rain after the middle of April until December, but we have had several downpours during the months of May and June which increased the size of almost everything about fifty per cent. Especially is this true of roses, shade, ornamental and fruit trees, and millions of stock ordinarily classed as second-grade will be found under the heading of first quality.

To a limited extent the excess of moisture has interfered with the budding of roses, one of the chief industries of this part of the country. It has been almost impossible at this time to get scions well ripened enough to use and as a consequence the rose growers will have to do their budding when the sap ceases flowing so abundantly. The wild stocks also have a tendency to grow larger than is convenient to work, but summing up the whole proposition, the balance is in favor of the growers.

With ornamental stock, both evergreen and deciduous, the conditions have never been better here, and the growths up to date have been phenomenal. Especially is this true of maple, elm, ash, linden and trees of that class, and if the demand is equal to the quality of stock that will be offered this coming season there will be no complaints from the dealers.

With the fruit tree growers much the same conditions prevail, everything growing too soft and fast. Well ripened scions are hard to get, and as in the case of roses, stocks are growing too big to be handled easily. This entails quite an addition of work in budding.

Outside carnations are in splendid shape with the greenhouse men. Of course there have been a great many houses allowed to dry out and a corresponding quantity of stock in the field. Some few growers I find are changing their houses now. These were cases where the growers considered it unprofitable to longer continue caring for the stock already in the houses, and, having plenty of time, they have made the change to younger stock and will try their fortunes again for the coming season.

I am of the opinion that there will be no surplus of roses this winter, even if we have quantities of carnations. There are but few growers making any effort to have young stock for the holidays. There seems to be a tendency to keep over old stock and make the best out of it that is possible. I am inclined to think this is rather a short sighted policy, and that the growers will lose a chance to make considerable money.

It is certain that there will be a fair demand for good stock, and of stock of a poor quality there is always an overabundance at any time. G.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.

G. W. Oliver, of the department of agriculture, whose special department is the bureau of plant industry, was here June 16 on his annual visit. He visited the gardens and houses of Thomas Thompson, the Leedham Bulb Co., and Streator, the strawberry specialist, with gardens near Garfield park. He was well pleased with his visit and the condition of the places visited. He reports that Thomas Thompson has the second largest collection of yellow callas in the United States. Mr. Oliver is introducing lily specialties, especially a Philippine variety.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There is little to record for the last week. The weather is very cool again and this is a good factor where the stores are not all that could be desired in the matter of conveniences for handling stock. Business is quiet; really nothing doing with the exception of funeral work. Shipments to interior points have almost ceased except for occasional orders. The prices of stock of all kinds have reached such a low ebb that it is hardly worth while to attempt to classify them. There is an abundance of good carnations, but roses, owing to the season in some cases, and to the neglect of the growers in others, are very poor and with no prospects of being much better for some time to come. Maidenhair fern and asparagus, which usually were considered well paying stock, have felt the fall in prices greatly, and for the former 25 cents per hundred fronds is about the average; for the latter about twice that price is asked.

Lilium longiflorum is about finished and on account of the ruinous prices received by the growers during the past two months, I am of the opinion there will be a great falling off in the number of bulbs forced for another season. Speaking of bulbs in general, it seems that there will be a shortage of valley, Romans, tulips and Harrisii for the coming season unless more of the growers do some heavy planting in the near future. The majority of the wholesalers seem to think there will be but a very limited demand for fancy stock of any kind this coming fall and winter, and but little preparation is being made in this line. Many large orders for bulbs have been countermanded and the growers will devote their attention to the regular lines of stock.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Seymour Marcuse (nee Miss Rose Mann) has returned from an extended eastern wedding tour.

J. P. Murphy, for many years head gardener at Sutro Heights, will embark in the business of growing cut flowers at Elmhurst.

A. D. Pryal, late horticultural commissioner of Alameda county, wishes the florists and nurserymen to make a fall exhibit under the auspices of the Oakland Board of Trade.

The Society Hortensia held a regular semi-monthly meeting at Oakland Saturday evening of last week.

James Nivens has constructed an artificial lake 50x200 feet on the grounds of John Martin at Ross Station, Cal. This is one of the finest private places in this part of California.

The daily papers are being used by the florists to advertise their new locations very widely. Never before have they been patronized to such a large extent.

E. D. Cutler will make a tour of northern California and Oregon. He will be away from town for about two months.

A. Rossi & Bros. are receiving the first big supply of florists' moss that has reached town since the fire. G.

A CHICAGOAN'S VIEWS.

Joseph Talbert, vice-president of the Commercial National Bank, has returned to Chicago after a trip to San Francisco. Speaking of business conditions as he observed them there, he said:

"It appears to me that fully fifty per cent of the population of San Francisco had moved away. The salaried people in lines of mercantile business have found it necessary to seek employment elsewhere, and they have gone north and south along the coast, and some have come east.

"The city has lost its trade with Alaska. That has gone to Seattle. Its trade with central and southern California has gone largely to Los Angeles. Its northern trade has gone to Portland, Seattle and Tacoma.

"But the city has left one of the finest harbors in the world; it has its docks uninjured, it has its railroads, and it has good banks. With these primary conditions the city is bound to grow. The talk of rebuilding it in a year or two, though, appears to me almost idle. It is not a case of acres of ruined buildings, but of miles. The business section will be rebuilt. San Francisco has a great many rich people, and it is these who will reconstruct the business center. They were the owners of fine office and mercantile structures and they have determined to have a new San Francisco."

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE "Proceedings of the Iowa Park and Forestry Association" make a handsome volume.

THERE can be no doubt that the nurserymen have had a very prosperous season and that the prospects were never brighter for all departments of tne trade.

THE twenty-third annual report of the park commissioners at Minneapolis is a handsome volume containing as a frontispiece a portrait of Wm. M. Berry, for twenty-two years superintendent of parks at Minneapolis.

A NEATLY printed pamphlet is being circulated to call attention to the possibilities of fruit growing and especially grape growing, in the Lewiston-Clarkston valley of Idaho and Washington.

THE Pontiac Nursery Co. has planted 1,000 apple and 1,000 peach for Dr. L. C. Newton on his farm near Pontiac, Mich. The apples include Wagner, Ontario, Gano, Stark and Black Twig, and the peaches, late Crawfords, Yellow St. John, Crosby, Bronson, Smock, S. S. No. 1, and S. S. No. 2.

GEORGE ELLWANGER.

One of the grand old men of horticulture is George Ellwanger, the senior member of the firm of Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester. In a few months he will be 90 years of age. He has lived at Rochester for seventy years and for half a century was actively associated with many of its leading business interests. He possesses a kindly personality which has endeared him to the hearts of all with whom he came in contact in his long and useful career.

Mr. Ellwanger was born in a little town called Hapbeck, near Stuttgart, in Germany, December 2, 1816. His youthful training was of that nature which makes for integrity and industry. At the age of 14 years he began his horticultural life in one of Stuttgart's leading establishments, where practically everything was grown, from seedling evergreens to seedling orchids. He was from youth an omnivorous reader but his preference was for works of a botanical character and he became an authority on many horticultural subjects, particularly on ornamental nursery stock.

About 1836 Mr. Ellwanger came to America and at once located at Rochester, which was then beginning to be heard of in a nursery way. It did not take Mr. Ellwanger long to start a business of his own. It was where the office building of Ellwanger & Barry now stands. Many reverses were met in the early days, but Mr. Ellwanger, who soon became associated with the late Patrick Barry, persevered and extended the scope of the business as the industry developed throughout the eastern country. The business has been almost since its inception one of the leading ones of its kind in this country and now Mt. Hope Nurseries are one of the show places of Rochester.

Many stories are related of the painstaking manner in which everything was performed under Mr. Ellwanger's direction. For many years, and after the business grew to large proportions, it is told that during the budding season he insisted on personally making the selection of scions and that in many other particulars he was equally fearful of the results of lax methods.

George Ellwanger.

Mr. Ellwanger still holds the presidency of the Ellwanger & Barry corporation. His son, George H. Ellwanger, upon whose education and wide and various acquaintance with world activities the father lavished his wealth and personal interest, was secretary of the company. His death early in April of the present year was a severe blow.

Mr. Ellwanger accumulated a fortune which he invested in many local enterprises. He was interested in many of the industries of Rochester and his birthday anniversary was for many years the annual occasion for a testimonial of love and esteem by his associates. Up to 1904 this took the form of a reception which many attended, but in that year failing strength necessitated an abandonment of this function and instead his friends united and presented a silver service. Subsequent anniversaries have been marked by other evidences of the high regard in which this calm old gentleman is held in the sunset days of a life spent in a community where few of his old associates survive but where the younger generation cherishes his friendship.

The Market.

The excessive heat of the last week has had its effect on the trade in all lines—and at last, after one of the best seasons in years, summer dullness is upon us. Prices, as is expected at this season, have a downward tendency. Good roses have been in short supply, but as the demand has been light the deficiency has made little difference. Carnations and sweet peas have flooded the market; one can buy a good dozen of the former almost anywhere for twenty-five cents; the nominal price of sweet peas is $1 per hundred, in any size bunch the customer wishes, but so great has been the supply that any price is accepted rather than lose the possible chance of a sale. There have been some bright spots in the way of large wedding decorations, and several important funerals, which took large quantities of stock and at good prices. A good rain is needed, as it is getting dry.

The Florists' Club.

Tuesday evening, June 19, our club held its last regular meeting of the month at Iroquois Hall. Vice-president Curry was in the chair, and Secretary McKellar was on hand. It was a very hot evening, but the attendance was good. The real question of the evening to be decided was: "Shall the club hold a chrysanthemum show this fall." Opinions varied on this point. Those opposed contended that if business was as good proportionately this fall as it had been the last spring, there would be no time to give to the matter; the enthusiastic ones held that even at some sacrifice of time the show should be held for the good it would accomplish in promoting the horticultural interests of Columbus. After a long evening's discussion of the matter, in which Messrs. Curry, Woodrow, Hills, Bauman, McKellar, Richer and Wedemeyer took part, it was voted to hold a chrysanthemum show in November. The meeting then adjourned to Monday evening, July 2, when a "smoke talk" and entertainment will be held.

Various Notes.

The Livingston Seed Co. had a very large number of floral orders for the funeral of Governor Pattison, at Milford, Ohio. So many and elaborate were the designs and pieces that W. J. Williams went to the Pattison home with them—in fact Mr. Williams took charge of all the flowers sent to the funeral and arranged them.

Graff Brothers continue to dispose of vast numbers of carnations, but at twenty-five cents a dozen.

Josiah Livingston, the vice-president, and Thomas J. Ludwig, the manager, as well as Frank P. Sperry, who has charge of the farm and field seeds of the Livingston Seed Co., attended the convention at Toledo. All report a most profitable trip and are especially enthusiastic regarding the splendid program of entertainment furnished by T. S. Burge and his able associates.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. has recently added to its equipment an outfit of miniature lamps for use in table decorations.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. reports that orders for bedding plants have continued unusually late this season.

ZERO.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The bedding season is over and the dull season is beginning for the trade in this city. The sales of bedding plants have been satisfactory, being greater than those of any previous spring. Stock was in fine shape and as a rule brought good prices. Of course there was more or less price cutting, as there probably always will be, but as a whole prices were fully up to the average. The different greenhouses around the city present a very barren appearance just now, nearly everything being sold out clean. The unusually dry weather we have experienced here this spring has cut the supply of outdoor flowers short and as a consequence cut flowers of all kinds are scarce.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Anna Schneider opened her new store Saturday and it was a great success. A brass band furnished music all day in front of the store. Twenty dozen carnations and a large number of roses were given away; the supply was exhausted before noon. Mrs. Schneider is the wife of John Schneider, the veteran Kansas City florist, and is fully qualified to make a success of the business. She has one of the best locations in the city.

Miss Jennie Murray says that business is good with her. She had several good orders for funeral work last week.

Al. Murray, W. J. Barnes' old foreman, now with James Hayes at Topeka, Kan., has been sick, but is now improving.

Lawrence Schwager's many friends were sorry to hear of his failure last week. Mr. Schwager was popular among the trade here.

Mr. and Mrs. Benton L. Holloway, of Topeka, were recent visitors here.

Arthur Boulding has accepted a position as florist at the state reform school in Topeka.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The Detroit market has shown signs of weakening since the hot weather set in, the public losing much of their interest in flowers. Funeral work has been holding on very regularly, but cut flowers have not done so well. Stock seems plentiful at the wholesale houses, except in Easter lilies, where the demand exceeds the supply.

Carnations and roses are coming in large numbers. Sweet peas are also quite numerous, but sales are good. These are vacation days for potted plants; they are seldom disturbed.

Various Notes.

The Detroit Florists' Club enjoyed a fishing trip up the lakes June 28. The twenty members who went spent a pleasant day. The weather was ideal and the fish plentiful. After being towed out in small boats, each of the party proceeded to catch the largest string, the honor going to the man having the most money along. The natives seemed to have more experience than we in hauling in fish, and they found a ready sale for them.

W. W. Castle, of Boston, who is here on business connected with greenhouse heating, was one of the party, and says he had a good time.

Charles Plumb has left on an extended trip to the old country.

Hugo Schroeter was married to Miss Aurelia Russell, of Newport, R. I., June 30. Many of his friends among the florists sent their best wishes by telegram.

CHARLOTTE, MICH.

Charlotte has two greenhouses succeeding one which for years was a success. It is doubtful, however, if the one ever did a larger business than is done by each of the two. Competition is said to be the life of trade. One dealer is apt to consider money wasted if spent in advertising, thinking it would all come to him anyhow, but two people in the same business advertise thoroughly and the result is that each sells more than the one. That is the case with Charlotte's two greenhouse concerns. The Garmans, in the near future, will erect another large greenhouse to be used entirely for carnations, and the Fuller Floral Co. also finds it necessary to enlarge.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—Incorporation papers have been issued to the Walker Floral Co. John Walker and others are the incorporators. The capital stock is $30,000.

THE REVIEW has received a souvenir postal from Harry Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, dated at Firenze, Italy, June 16, in which Mr. Bayersdorfer couples with regards to the friends at home the information that it is a hot summer in Italy.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The last week of June was all that could be expected of it, and closed up a fair month with reports of a satisfactory nature from every one; and as we enter July we will see as much business as we can expect, for the extremely hot weather has already sent most of the flower buyers to the mountains and sea-shore.

The growers have their roses planted where they expect to plant young stock, and will now dry off those which they will keep in the beds another year, so that roses will probably be scarce for a few weeks.

Various Notes.

The South View Floral Co. is working hard to get its houses far enough along to plant stock, but is finding it quite a proposition to build a range and get it planted in proper time.

The Florists' Club's proposed picnic has developed into another boat excursion, to be held July 10. The large crowd which attended their excursion last year would not hear of anything but another boat ride, so the committee chartered the beautiful steamer "Island Queen," which has a fine dancing saloon, and with a good orchestra the young people will find their pleasure. Card tables will be provided for those who wish to play and the splendid program of athletic sports will be pulled off at the grove, as the steamer will land long enough for this and the ball game. Lunch and liquid refreshments will be provided and served on board the boat only. A good time is expected. Tickets can be secured from any of the committee.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Elicker, of Homestead, Pa., will leave next week with the Elks for a two weeks' trip to Denver.

Miss Stoner, with Miss Maxwell, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., has gone to the mountains for several weeks' vacation.

Lincoln I. Neff has taken on the amusement business as a side line for the summer. He opened his Braddock Amusement Hall this week. When the summer dull spell comes on his four stores, he is compelled to hunt up work of some kind for recreation.

Hoo-Hoo.

DES MOINES, IA.

J. W. Lozier has purchased the business of the New York Floral Co., at 405 Sixth avenue, and will consolidate it with his store at 317 Sixth avenue in the K. P. block. Mr. Lozier is operating a store in East Des Moines, and announces that he expects to open branch stores in other cities.

Mr. Lozier was burned out at the time of the Rothwell block fire, but opened up the following day in the corner room of the block, where he continued business until he found a more suitable location.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

Current Comment.

This is a peculiar market in the bedding season. Some of the florists seem to think there is big money in poor bedding plants at 5 cents apiece retail and so, of course, 5 cents is all they get for anything in that line. Others ask more than that, say from 6½ cents to 7½ cents wholesale for good 4-inch pot stock and they do not seem to suffer from poor business. Dark red geraniums were sold out early, but light colors did not go so well. Petunias sold better than last year because a few growers who have been stuck with them for a year or two cut their supply very short. Fuchsias did not sell so well. Too much white fly on them made them look shabby early in the season.

The Florists' Club is beginning to blossom again. The June meeting was attended by about a dozen members. Mr. Mills made an excellent chairman in the absence of the president, George Bayer, who has to attend the city council meetings every Wednesday, he having been elected member of that body from his ward. In order to enable Mr. Bayer to attend to his duties as presiding officer, the meeting was changed from the third Wednesday to the fourth Thursday of every month. Our vice-president, E. H. Cushman, of Sylvania, apparently has too many gladioli and dahlias on his mind to enable him to attend the meetings regularly.

Rode Bros., of Bowling Green, had everything in the line of bedding stock that showed blossom or bud sold out by Decoration day. Mrs. Andreas, of the same place, reports business as having been fine.

Peter Stepnick, of Fremont, O., had to buy a lot of blooming plants, as he ran short of stock this spring.

The Florists' Club members are trying to arrange things so as to have all members go to Dayton to the S. A. F. convention in a body. I shall report on that later. E. A. K.

ROSELAND, B. C.—H. C. Smith has moved into his fine new store on Columbia avenue.

WATCH US GROW

Araucaria Excelsa, the pet of all decorative plants that nature produced, our specialty. Now perfectly recovered from their sea voyage, well established, growing in pots, ready to ship to all parts of America.

These everlasting green foliaged pot plants are growing more in favor by the tasteful plant buyers of this land from year to year. Please watch the growth of our importation during the last 11 years; first year 100, second 250, third 500, fourth 1000, fifth 2000. This year (1906) which is the 11th anniversary of our first importation, our spring importation amounted to 6,000. All these are grown for us under contract by an Araucaria specialist in Belgium. I must say for the benefit of my customers that they were never before so nice and large for the money as this year. I herewith quote you special prices on these.

10 to 12 inches high, 2 years old, 50c each. 12 to 14 inches high, 60c each. 4 to 16 ins. high. 75c each. 16 to 20 ins. high, $1.00 each. Planted in 5½-in., 6-in. and 7-in. pots. Specimens, 3 to 3 ft., 6 to 8 tiers, $2 50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, unusually large. very beautiful, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 each.
Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.
Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, 1 large one in center, 3 smaller sizes, 22 to 25-ins. high around, $2.00 each; 6-in. pots, single plants, 35 to 40 ins. high, 5 to 6 good leaves, 4-year-old, $1.25 to $1 50 each; 30 to 35 ins. high, 4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 5 good leaves, $1.00 each; 25 to 30 ins. high, 5½-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 leaves, 75c; made-up plants with 3, 18 to 20 ins. high, 25c to 30c.
Kentia Belmoreana, 6-in. pots, 4-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, bushy, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.25; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, 75c to $1.00 each. These are the sizes entered in the customs house.
Cocos Weddelliana, 15c.
Jerusalem Cherries or Solanums, same varieties we sell at Xmas for 75c, $1.00 each; 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.
Ficus Elastica (Belgian importation), 4-in. pots, 25c.
Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up with 3 plants in a pot, 25c.

MARANTA TIGRINA.

Maranta tigrina is a desirable addition to the list of ornamental-leaved stove plants. It is of compact habit and sturdy growth, producing ovate lanceolate leaves from nine to twelve inches high, on petioles, sheathing for their entire length. The leaf-blades are of a velvety, lustrous, grass-green color, strikingly marked on each side of a grey midrib, with broad transverse bars of rich, deep olive green, the marking dividing near the undulate margins into two tips. This, like all the varieties of the maranta, requires to be grown in a warm and moist atmosphere during active growth, and to be afforded a slight shading during the heat of the day.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

MONTGOMERY'S book on Grafted Roses sent by the REVIEW for 25 cents.

CANTERBURY BELLS.

To get the strongest possible plants for blooming next year the seed should have been sown about the middle of May, which means a year's growth before the plants come into flower. But it is not yet too late to sow. Few biennials can compare with Canterbury bells for a floral display in the herbaceous border during the month of June, the cup and saucer varieties being by far the most attractive, the colors varying from white to rose and blue and mauve.

The seed is best sown in shallow boxes, such as are used for rooting pelargoniums in; the soil should be light, and the seed but sparingly covered. Stand the boxes in a cool frame, and shade from the sun until germination has taken place; then stand them in the open, and see that the soil is kept moist. As all seedlings quickly become drawn up unless sown thinly, lose no time, as soon as they are fit to handle, in dibbling them out, six inches apart, into nursery lines, the rows to be double that distance apart, so that a flat hoe can be conveniently plied between to keep down weeds, and promote growth.

In the month of October sturdy plants should be forthcoming, ready to set out in herbaceous borders, and along the margins of beds devoted to flowering shrubs, etc. I like to keep the colors separate, placing three or five plants in a group, and allowing a good space between each plant. Early in April place a stake to each plant, and keep the leading stem frequently tied. In dry seasons it repays to well water while the plants are in flower.

These campanulas are also most serviceable in 6-inch and 8-inch pots, if potted up in the autumn, and given quite cool treatment, plunging the pots in coal ashes, and covering them with glass lights during wet or frosty weather; quite early in June these make a good display arranged with other subjects in the greenhouse or conservatory. —Gardeners' Magazine.

RED SPIDER.

In view of the complete knowledge we now possess upon most garden matters, it is rather remarkable that we still know so little of the habits, life history, and proclivities of the troublesome little mite called red spider. Not a season passes but we see the results of its ravages, either indoors or outdoors, says the Gardeners' Magazine, and yet we seem to get no nearer to the solution of the problem of its prevention and eradication.

Excessive heat is a common cause of its development, acording to some authorities, but I have a note of a very bad attack in a quite cold vinery. A dry atmosphere is, again, advanced as the cause of its appearance; and yet in a house of which I had charge for four years the only vine in the house attacked grew nearer to the water tank than any of the others. Placing plants in unnatural conditions has been held responsible by some practitioners for the advent of the red spider, but most observant persons must have seen common wayside weeds, such as the red dead nettle, moundwort, and ground ivy, with foliage devoured almost to blanching point by the tiny pests.

That it should suddenly be present in a house which has never harbored it before is a puzzle to many, but its presence is easily accounted for in many such cases by the custom of summering plants outdoors, and wintering them under glass. New stock also will bring the pest at times, and all new plants should spend a short time in quarantine before being allowed to share the society of their fellows.

As a preventive measure, I do not know of anything better than keeping plants constantly moist at the roots, maintaining a moist atmosphere, and syringing once or twice a week. Nicotine will do the work, but it has a very abiding smell and cannot be used on stock just ready for market.

Taking everything into consideration, I do not think that the old plan of sulphuring the hot-water pipes can be beaten. Sulphur is a deadly enemy to red spider, and pot plants can be kept clean by using flowers of sulphur freely through a dredger. A bellows apparatus will apply sulphur efficiently, or the pipes can be heated; then a good plan is to pour water over the pipes with a can, and smear on the dry sulphur with the hand.

SCOTTISH PANSY SOCIETY.

It is interesting to find that an effort is being made to re-establish the old Scottish Pansy Society. A meeting of pansy and viola lovers was recently held in Edinburgh, Scotland, when James Grieve was elected chairman; Messrs. Dick, McKenzie, A. Sutherland, James Stewart and C. Cockburn members of committee, and J. C. Grieve, assistant secretary. It is proposed to hold an exhibition in Edinburgh about June 20, 1907.

DAYTON, OHIO.

Convention Preparations.

Plans for the coming convention are nearly completed. It remains but for the executive committee to finish the official program, and all arrangements will have been made for the banner convention in the history of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, to be pulled off at the shortest notice.

The surprises will be many to behold. The wonderful illumination of Far Hills will alone be worth a trip across the continent. The exhibit promises to be the largest we have ever had. The housing of guests is well looked after. The amusements will be many and out of the ordinary. The prices for all accommodations will be very reasonable and the best to be obtained. All points of interest in the middle west are easily reached from fair Dayton at reasonable prices.

It is quite a compliment to be entertained by the great National Military Home, a thing which befalls but few societies in a decennium. The great entertainment offered by the National Cash Register Co. will surpass anything ever seen by any visitor. Of this we are confident. The work on the exhibition and meeting grounds is progressing finely, and visitors will find everything necessary to modern civilization, as near as money can make it. All we have to say is, "Come, and you will never regret it. You will see much and you will learn much."

The headquarters during the convention will be the Hotel Algonquin. All hotels are within one square of all streetcars, taking you to the exhibition grounds within ten minutes. We give here a list and prices of the leading hotels:

AMERICAN PLAN.

The Algonquin—From $2.50 to $5 a day; 300 guests.
The Beckel—From $3 to $4 a day; 200 guests.
The Phillips—From $2 to $2.50 a day; 150 guests.
Hotel Daytonia—From $1 to $1.50 a day; 100 guests.
The Aldine—From $1 to $1.50 a day; 25 guests.
The Vendome—$1.50 a day; 25 guests.

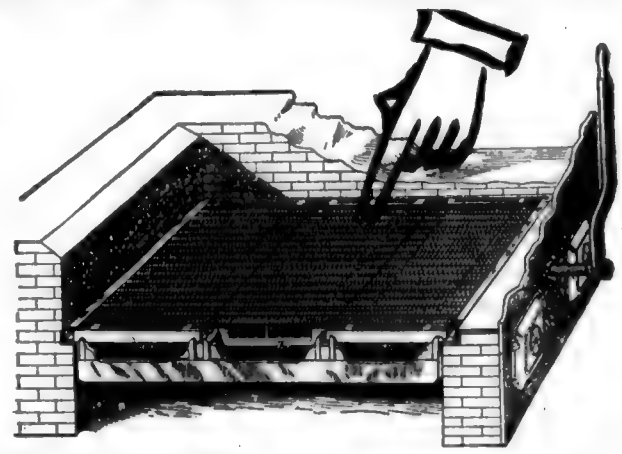
EUROPEAN PLAN.

The Atlas—From $1 to $2 a day; 75 guests.
The Wehmer—From 50 to 75 cents a day; 50 guests.
The Stag Hotel—50 cents a day; 25 guests.
The Urban—From 50 cents to $1 a day; 60 guests.

We have also on our list a number of smaller hotels and many private houses, prices from 50 cents to 75 cents for single rooms. If enough applications are made a camp will be established, with well-furnished, double roof tents, four cots to a tent, at a nominal cost of from 50 cents to 75 cents each. Any one wanting accommodations, if no individual arrangements are preferred, should make application as soon as possible to J. B. Heiss, president of the Florists' Club, who will see that arrangements are made to the satisfaction of all concerned.

LENOX, MASS.

The annual rose and strawberry exhibition of the Lenox Horticultural Society took place in the town hall June 26. Unfortunately perennials and strawberries were scarce, the former owing to the recent rains, the latter to the lateness of the season. Roses were shown remarkably well, especially a large vase of Frau Karl Druschki, exhibited by E. Jenkins, for which he was awarded a first-class certificate. The principal exhibitors in pot plants were S. Carlquist, who had some remarkably fine tuberous begonias and gloxinias; E. Jenkins, who had standard geraniums, which were excellent; they stood five feet high and were literally covered with bloom; gloxinias, Acalypha Sanderiana; and P. J. Donahue, who had some good plants of Nicotiana Sanderae.



In peonies, J. Heeremans had the largest display. Perennials were shown by Miss A. Kneeland and Miss H. Parish. In vegetables E. Jenkins and D. Dunn were first in their respective classes, in which were some good celery, onions and potatoes, for this time of year. J. Heeremans showed a collection of vegetables, not for competition, for which he was accorded a cultural commendation, and a diploma for lettuce, Sutton's Favorite. In the fruit classes the awards were divided between A. H. Wingett and P. J. Donahue. Messrs. L. Reynolds and E. Edwards were the judges. G. F.

FINDLAY, O.—S. J. McMichael is building two new houses, each 24x186.

PLYMOUTH, O.—Fannie E. Case reports trade this spring as good, with the exception of January, when cold, wet weather caused a slump. The market for bedding plants continues good.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. The Market.

We are having a spell of the hottest weather of the year and it is having its effect upon all kinds of stock. Roses in particular are small and are scarcely any good at all. Carnations are about used up and a few more days of this heat will put the finishing touches to them. Most of the local growers have thrown out the greater portion of their old plants and some of them are beginning to plant in with pot grown stock. Sweet peas are coming by the thousands, and they are of excellent quality, but the great quantity coming in has caused the price to drop. Still, the grower has no cause to complain. The demand for valley has been good and there has been scarcely enough to fill all orders. Some nne longiflorum lilies are seen at the wholesale houses. They also sell well.

Business is showing the effects of the hot weather. It has been pretty quiet the last week. But even at that it was not so bad, all things considered, and we have no cause to complain. A good many weddings helped clean out the market and the demand for funeral work is reported good. With the advent of July we shall expect business to be dull. But when we consider the summer business for the last few years we find that it has been improving right along. To have a good summer business it is necessary to have a supply of good stock. Many growers are beginning to realize this and are stocked well for the summer trade; these firms are reaping a well deserved harvest.

E. G. Gillett has taken advantage of the first lull in business to remodel his wholesale establishment. He is changing everything about, so as to give almost double the space to handle his business. He is also building a large ice-box which will give him more than double the cold-storage space he has at present. When completed he will have one of the best equipped wholesale houses in the west.

The prospects point to a very successful outing this year. There will be prizes offered for the various events. All that is necessary now is a good day and the chances are in favor of our having it.

The Test of Workmanship

No greenhouse is a perfect house unless all the materials which enter into its construction are properly made by experienced workmen. All of our material is made by men who know that perfect material is needed to make a perfect house and you can't grow the best stock without a perfect house. Well made material costs less than the inferior kind—less repairing to be done.

Our workmanship will stand the most critical test—how about making a comparison with the houses you have? Write for catalogue.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

ARTIFICIAL REFRIGERATION.

The Modern Process of Cooling.

One of the more recent adaptations of artificial refrigeration, in which it has proven its superiority over the old style ice-box, is the application of this system of cold storage for cut flowers. It has for several years been used by one or two wholesalers, but only recently has it become practicable for a retailer to maintain his own refrigerating plant.

As the amount of heat abstracted, or the amount of cold produced, is under absolute control, the required temperature can always be maintained in the storage boxes, whatever may be the outside conditions, and no matter how often business may demand the opening of the cold-box doors. If the person in charge finds the temperature rising he merely has to open a valve a little more; or if he finds the flowers are getting too cool he closes the same valve a trifle, and the correct temperature is regained. The simple regulation of temperature to a uniform degree has been found to be of the utmost importance. Not only can the flowers be held longer in storage, but they also retain their fresh appearance and fragrance for a greater length of time after being taken out.

The labor and nuisance attendant upon filling an ice-box once, or perhaps several times, a day with natural ice and the much larger waste space required are matters of great annoyance. Particularly would this have been the case had the beautiful show-case illustrated on page 461 not been equipped with artificial refrigeration. The illustration is taken from a photograph of the cut flower display case in the salesroom of the new store of John Breitmeyer's Sons, at Detroit.

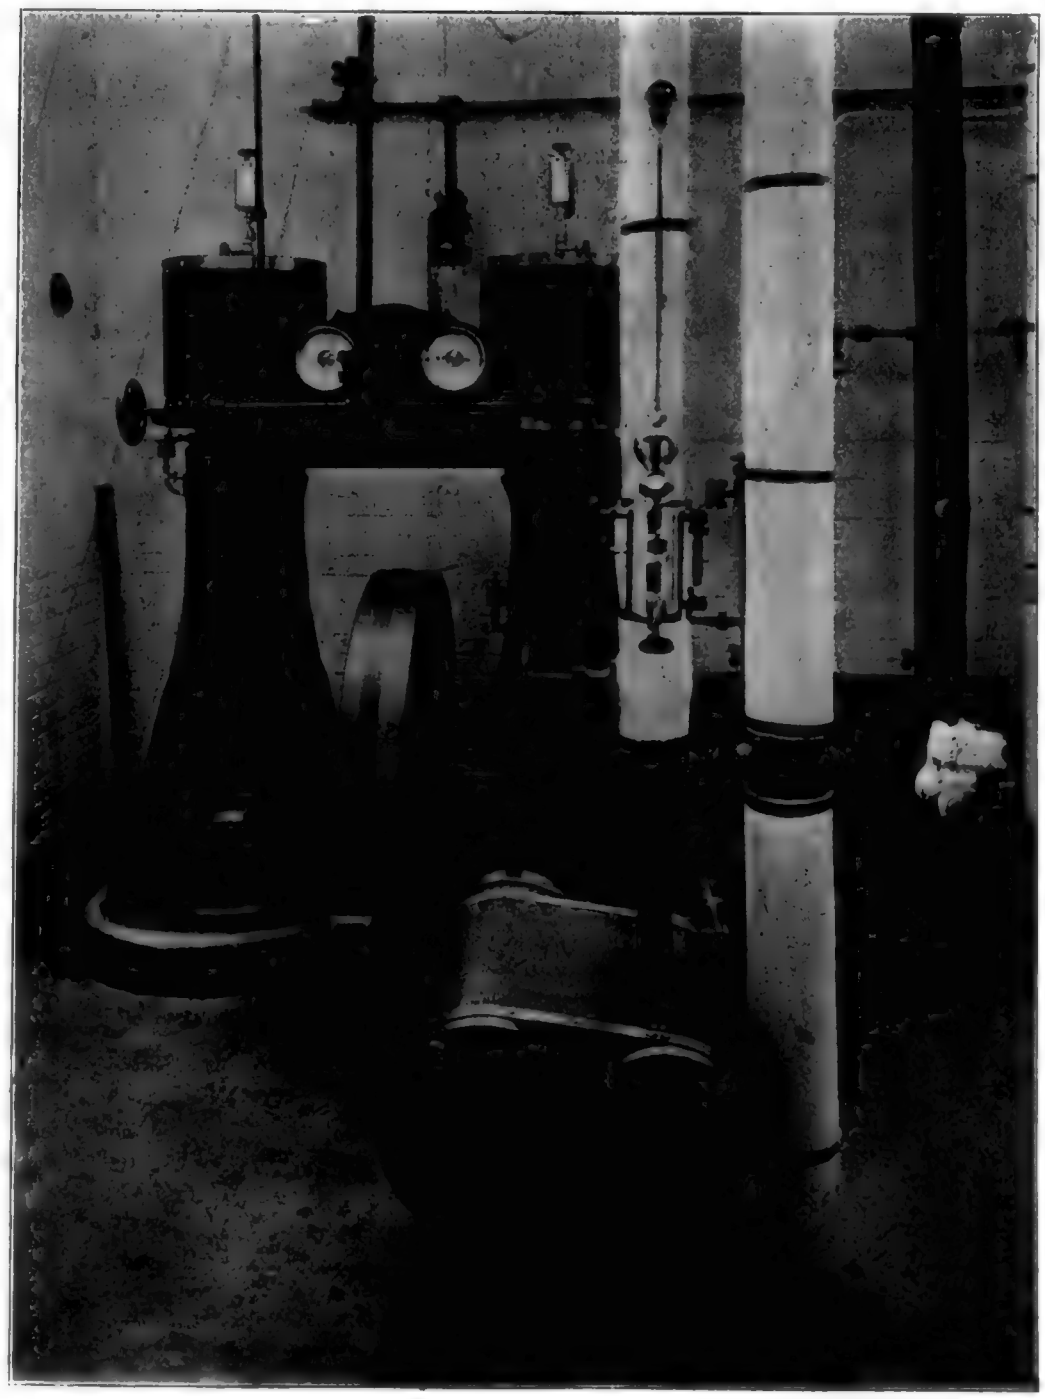
As is well known, this popular and enterprising firm occupies the first floor and basement in the handsome Breitmeyer building recently erected at the corner of Miami and Gratiot avenues. The building is equipped with a complete modern power-plant for electric lighting, elevator service, etc., and also with an up-to-date refrigerating plant designed and built by the Great Lakes Engineering Works, of Detroit.

The refrigerating machine which, as shown in the illustration, is of a new design, consists of two vertical single-acting ammonia compressors six and one-fourth inches diameter by ten inches stroke, direct connected to a steam engine with a cylinder of nine inches diameter by ten inches stroke.

The steam valve gear is of the piston type, designed for a cut-off of 5/8-stroke and giving as high a ratio of expansion for the steam as is practicable for this type of valve gear. The ammonia valves were designed especially for this machine, the idea being to make them particularly quick acting.

In a preliminary trial before leaving the works these valves operated perfectly under a speed of 140 revolutions per minute. The bearing surfaces of all moving parts are of ample area and the whole is constructed of the best material and workmanship obtainable.

The whole equipment, which is placed in a room thirty feet long and twelve feet wide, consists of the machine, oil trap, double ammonia condenser, liquid receiver, brine tank and expansion coils, suction strainer and brine pump. In addition a cold-water tank for supplying ice-water which is pumped to each floor of the building is also connected to the system.



The refrigeration supplied to the store boxes is by the brine system, the brine tank having sufficient capacity for maintaining the temperature overnight by simply keeping the brine pump going without operating the refrigerating machine.

There are two cold boxes for the flowers. One box, located in the workshop, is a dark one. This box has two coils of cold-brine pipe around three sides fastened to the walls.

The show-case upstairs in the salesroom is beautifully fitted up to harmonize with its magnificent surroundings. It also has two coils of cold-brine pipe, but they are completely hidden above the ceiling, which is composed of plate glass mirrors. A drip-pan above the mirrors carries off the moisture as it drips from the pipes. Air ducts are arranged in such a manner that a constant circulation of air is forced down one side of the box and up the other to the brine coils, over and around which it passes and when it is cooled. The room is always dry and customers may be admitted.

Philip Breitmeyer, in speaking of the apparatus, said: "We are much pleased with the artificial refrigeration installed for us in our new store. We have no ice to handle and no muss to clean up, but always a place ready, clean and sweet. We are satisfied that the process is ahead of ice for cooling rooms for flowers and we certainly should not like to return to the old system."

RIBBONS.

The fashion writer for a Sunday paper has discovered that "florists are no longer content to decorate flowers with several dollars' worth of ribbon. That cannot be made to cost enough, whatever the quality of the ribbon may be. So it has become the fashion to tie up the boxes in ribbons. From the most expensive shops there are sent out now boxes bound at one end with broad ribbons which add at least several dollars to the price of each box. Sometimes small bunches of the flowers inside are tied under the ribbon as an index to the contents of the box."

CALIFORNIA PALM HOUSE.

Would you kindly advise me how to build a house about 20x80 or 22x80 for palms, ferns, etc.? I would like to add a row of 6-inch sashes on each side of the house, which is to run north and south, the west side being the property line. How close to the line would you build? What ventilator would you advise me to buy and what price; boiler; size of pipes; how many runs; expansion tank; size and thickness of glass, pitch, etc.? I have enough sashbars for one side made of 2x3 Oregon pine fourteen feet long, and would like to make the frame and all of wood if advisable, as our redwood lasts very long in the ground and above. Would it be necessary to put posts in the ground, or would a mottsill screwed on the concrete answer the purpose? Would you have one row of posts through the center or two rows, one each side, and how far from the center to have them convenient for the use of the ventilators? Would one row of ventilators do? Our temperature very seldom goes below the freezing point. For fuel we have soft coal at $9 per ton. Crude oil is cheap, but I think my neighbors would not like the soot. Gas is 85 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. Which do you think is the best to use? F. H.

There are many questions connected with this inquiry and as the writer has never been in California some errors may be made. First then, if you are anxious to use the 14-foot sashbars which you already have, make your house twenty-one feet wide from the outside to outside of posts and make each side of the roof fourteen feet. This will be a steep roof, but so much the better for your climate, because it will not be so hot a house in summer. Supposing your east wall is five feet to where the roof springs. Then I know of no objection to running a row of 6-foot sashes along it, but connect it to the larger house in such a way that there is little tendency to cause rot.

As to the west line, that is a question of local conditions. If you are sure your neighbor will always admit you to his lot with ladders to paint or repair the roof of the greenhouse, then you might put your west wall on your property line. We think, however, you should keep back three feet from your line so that you would not have to ask favors of any one.

In the east all commercial florists use for greenhouse building that splendid wood known as southern cypress, and now we are using cypress for benches. We would hardly think the freight charge from Louisiana to Los Angeles would be as high as it would be from the gulf states to New York state; still, we hear such wonderful praise of the Oregon and Washington redwood and other firs that there should be no need of your using any other, except that the eastern and Chicago horticultural builders know just what is wanted and if you send one of these firms the width, height and size of ventilators, they will send you material cut to the minutest dimensions, with blue print to guide in erection, and the merest novice in carpentering can put it together.

The ventilation should be ample, especially in your climate. It should be three feet deep, hinged at the ridge, and should continue along the entire house on the east slope of your roof. I am not supposed to recommend any particular ventilating apparatus any more than I am pots, pipes or boilers. Any of them will serve your purpose. Write to the advertisers in the Review for prices.

You must need but very little artificial heat in a house in Los Angeles, and that little more to avoid dampness in the rainy season than to resist cold. Therefore, the use of steam would be absurd for several reasons. A hot-water heater is much the best for your size of house. Eight runs of 2-inch pipe will be more than sufficient for your house, viz., four flows and four returns.

As for the expansion tank and arrangement of pipes, it would be impossible to go into that in these columns, as we do not know whether your heater will be on the level of the greenhouse floor or six feet below it. There is really no work in this country that is a guide to any one doing his own heating. I know of none I can recommend. The greatest errors prevail on the subject, and no two places being just alike, it is impossible to make a plan for heating unless you are perfectly familiar with the place. If you will draw a perfect plan of your house, showing position of boiler, depth of stokehole, all doors, paths, benches, etc., and send it to a New York or Chicago specialist on heating, he will draw you a plan showing how to arrange the pipes and will charge you for it as he should; or you can wait until September, and buy the Florists' Manual, wherein the writer has set down the principles of hot-water heating and its practical application to the extent of several pages.

As for the walls and frame of your house, I would put red cedar or redwood posts three feet in the ground and set them in cement four feet apart, with two thicknesses of boards and an air space of half an inch between the boards. You will have a wall that will last many years and is easily renewed when it does give out.

The plate goes on top of the posts and the bars go from plate to ridgepole. By all means you need an upright support under the ridge. A 1¼-inch gaspipe is large and strong enough, but there is where the principal support is needed. One for every sixteen feet of ridge is enough. In addition to this center and principal support of the roof you will need two other lines of uprights (1-inch pipe is heavy enough for these), and they carry a 1-inch pipe running the entire length of the house on each side of the ridge half-way between the ridge and plate. These supports are called purlins, and are very necessary in the east, or the snows would crush in our roofs. The upright 1-inch pipes to support the purlins should be eight feet apart, no more, and every bar is fastened to the purlin by a tin clip and two small screws.

In conclusion I must say that if you feel yourself somewhat rusty on greenhouse building and heating you will save money and enjoy much comfort by sending a sketch of your intentions to a practical and responsible horticultural builder, of whom there are several in Chicago, and that is a thousand miles nearer you than New York; he will send you blue prints of building and heating, which are very easily understood, and it will save you lots of money and worry. CALLA LILIES IN SOLID BEDS.

We are building a new house 20x100, running north and south. We will plant carnations on the side benches, thirty inches from the ground, and think of planting calla lilies in the center bed, making it a solid bed ten inches high. Would they do well in a place like that? Our idea is not to have the center bed as high as the side benches, as the lilies may grow too high and shade the carnations. Please let us have your opinion of it. A. R. & S.

Your plan is the very best arrangement you can make of a house that runs north and south. The callas will not grow so high that they will shade either the east or west bench of carnations. Remember that the calla needs a high temperature to make it profitable, so you should plant varieties of carnations that thrive best in a night temperature of 55 degrees. If the natural surface of your house is dry, or a gravelly soil, you will not need any drainage, but ten inches is waste of material and if you give the callas eight inches of good soil it is all they need. It is best to lift the roots in June or July, give them a complete rest for two months, and replenish the soil.

SIX BEST GERANIUMS.

We wish to grow only six varieties of geraniums. Please name the six best commercial varieties and state what percentage of each to grow. S. & Y. C.

Your correspondent does not state for what purpose the geraniums are wanted, and that makes some difference. For instance, if for bedding I should venture to include several single varieties; notably Mrs. E. G. Hill, the large salmon, and Dryden are excellent single bedders, and even old single General Grant is unsurpassed where a brilliant mass of scarlet is desired.

Then there is the market grower who wants his plants to make a great show at the time the public is buying. I would put Jean Viaud in this class.

Again, there are a few semi-double varieties that are especially good for vases because they are particularly free-flowering and can withstand the hard treatment that all vase plants are called upon to endure. I commented this spring on what I thought was the too prevalent use of the crimson semi-double S. A. Nutt, yet if we had attempted to fill all the vases and beds with Nutt that were ordered we should have needed at least seventy-five per cent of all the geraniums we grew to be of that variety, such is the public faith in its hardy constitution and free-flowering quality. Still it has a fault. The florets are so crowded that after a shower they rot, making the center of the truss black instead of crimson or scarlet.

The question is, which are the best six geraniums? You are wise not to grow a great number of varieties. Here then is my opinion on the best six varieties for all purposes: S. A. Nutt, fifty per cent; Marquise de Castellane, ten per cent; Alphonse Ricard, ten per cent; Beaute Poitevine, fifteen per cent; Mrs. Frances Perkins, ten per cent; La Favorite, five per cent. W. S.

THE SMALL WHITE FLY.

I am sending you a leaf containing the egg of a small white fly that is causing trouble in our greenhouses. It is particularly fond of ageratums, heliotropes and moonvines, and is now on the chrysanthemums. The usual remedies for other insects do not seem to exterminate it. What can we use to get rid of it? M. I. O.

This little insect, known to florists as the white fly, repeatedly has been written up in the columns of the REVIEW. Strange to say, it has never invaded the greenhouses of the writer, yet we have noticed its ravages in the houses of neighbors. It is omnivorous—not that it will eat a sausage, ice cream, Limburger cheese or potted corned beef,—but few things in the vegetable kingdom does it disdain. Fumigation with tobacco in any form is futile and as for liquid forms of nicotine, it is impossible to cover every part of a plant. The simple and effectual use of hydrocyanic acid gas seems the only sure destroyer of this troublesome creature. Many florists are afraid to explode this gas in their houses, having read of some losses. The formula I recommend is perfectly safe, will injure no plant and is death to all creatures that have lungs. Scale or mealy bug it has no effect on. The formula I submit is largely my own, the conclusion of many experiments. Learned professors of agricultural and horticultural colleges will give it to you more scientifically, but it will serve the purpose no better.

Here is what we have found the best:

One pint of water; one pint of sulphuric acid. The acid must not be of the same bulk as the water, but of the same weight, which will be less in bulk than the water because the sulphuric acid has much higher specific gravity, or weight. Place these two in a stone jar. One-gallon jars are good. The acid will eat through tin, galvanized iron or fiber vessels. At sunset put into each jar you use two and a half ounces of cyanide of potassium. The combination of the cyanide with the acid generates a deadly gas which stops the work of lungs, but is harmless to the vegetable kingdom. This quantity is for every 1,000 cubic feet of atmosphere in the house; keep the house closed all night.

I say do this at sunset because at that time we never noticed the slightest harm to any plant, but experimenting once at noon, several plants were hurt. This is accounted for by the fact that at noon the plants were more or less exhausted, while at sunset and during the following hours the sap had returned to the tissues of the plants and their resistant powers were at the strongest. A house of violets, using the strength quoted, will be entirely uninjured, except perhaps a few sickly and enfeebled plants.

Now, don't think you can improve on this by doubling the quantities and making one jar do for 2,000 cubic feet of atmosphere. That would be a mistake. Equalize the gas as much as possible through the house. To find out the cubic feet of atmosphere in a house may seem a little troublesome, yet it is simple. Find out how many superficial feet there are in the gable end of your house and multiply this by its length and you have the cubic amount.

There is one point left. This gas will kill all fully developed insects, but it will not kill the eggs, so the dose must be repeated two weeks after the first to insure a complete destruction of the little fly. Buy your cyanide in little parcels of two and a half ounces each, so that they are convenient to drop into each jar, and when the last of the cyanide is dropped get yourself out of the house. Don't stop to light your pipe.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Lorraine Begonias.

Last week I promised to have more to say about that important midwinter plant, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, so I jumped on a car and made a visit to the establishment of S. A. Anderson, on Linwood avenue, where Joseph Streicht is manager, and wonderfully well does he manage this small city place. In the acquisition of the Rebstock place on Elmwood avenue Joe will have a chance to show his versatility in a much wider field. If Joseph can grow any one thing better than another it is this popular begonia; few in the country can do it better.

There is not much to add on the subject to what I said last week, and just how I found his plants is more of a guide than any theory of my own. Last December I saw his young plants in 2-inch pots propagated in September and October from cuttings, not leaves. He uses the ends of shoots of several joints and cuts at the base of a leaf, where there is a good eye, which will make a good lateral growth. This is better than propagating by the leaf detached from the stem. They root quicker and more surely. When well rooted they are potted into 2-inch and carefully watered; that is, watered only when decidedly dry. After New Year's the young growths from the semi-tuberous root will be pushing to the surface. Then the cutting that is above the soil, which has a tendency to flower because it is of terminal growth, can be pinched out.

In January or February these little plants, still in 2-inch pots, are greatly benefited by having the surface of the soil carefully stirred. The benefit in stirring is not so easily explained, yet all practical gardeners know its great benefit, not only to plants in pots in which the soil has become hard and baked, but more especially to plants in the field.

From November to the end of March these begonia plants may be considered as almost dormant and water is necessary only when quite dry. By the end of March or early April the growth from the roots or corm will be showing more vigor and the strongest can then be selected and shifted into 3-inch pots and about now will be ready for 4-inch. We found many in 4-inch, bushy plants six or seven inches in diameter, that will, if encouraged, make very large plants, and also many that were very recently shifted from a 2-inch to 3-inch pots, fine little plants, and some still in 2-inch pots, which Mr. Streicht has every confidence will make good plants by Christmas.

The 3-inch and 4-inch plants were on the south bench of an equal-span house and over them, on the outside of the glass, was a lath shading. There is no better summer shading. It is put on about 10 a. m. and removed about 4 p. m. The ventilation at the roof was all that he could give. The shading is a great point. Few plants like the exclusion of sunlight, but many object to the full rays of the sun, especially under the very artificial conditions which prevail on a greenhouse bench, with the roots cramped in a pot.

It occurs to me to mention a few prominent commercial plants that want this careful shading; i. e., shade when the sun shines brightly and no shade when it does not: The begonia family, the gloxinia and the cyclamen, and unless you are anxious and attentive on this subject you will only be a seventh-rater in growing these pretty florists' flowers.

Let me add that these very thrifty Gloire de Lorraine were potted in a very liberal proportion of leaf-mold, which their very fibrous roots delight in.

All the above are scarcely seasonable hints, but we know that there are many good gardeners who are not thoroughly familiar with the peculiarities of this hybrid begonia. There may be other methods of growing this begonia, but what I see I believe, and as some of my illustrious countrymen say, "The proof of the pudding is in the eating."

Impatiens Holstii.

We lately made the acquaintance of a very striking plant, Impatiens Holstii, a balsam from Zanzibar, a small island on the east coast of Africa near the equator, the center of the ivory and the slave trade, where if sin and iniquity still live, Flora's fair blossoms flourish. This balsam is far more attractive than Impatiens Sultani. It has bright, vermilion-scarlet flowers of more than one inch in diameter. Seeds can be sown in the spring, when it will flower all summer and we have the opinion of an expert that if propagated at the end of July from lateral growths of the stronger stems it can be made a very attractive winter-flowering plant.

Pansies.

How quickly the seasons revolve. They roll around incredibly fast. Especially is this apparent when you reach the shady side of half a century, and this comes home when we remember that it will soon be time to sow pansies. There is more than one method of growing pansies. If you cultivate them in a coldframe covered with sashes, then the middle of August is time enough to sow, but grown in the field they should be sown sometime between July 20 and August 1. Just to be reminiscent a moment, in the fall of 1871 I sowed pansy seed on September 1 and transplanted into a frame and covered with a sash, carefully guarded against overheating or extreme cold during winter, and when April came sold the few thousand plants at $1 per dozen, and did not have enough. There is no such price now, yet if you will grow whatever you grow far superior to the common herd you will get your reward. If today is a little early to sow, it's not too early to procure the seed.

Sow in a well prepared bed, a bed of sandy loam or light soil of any texture that has been raked clear of all sticks, stones, lumps and old crinolines. Sow broadcast, thinly, and very lightly rake the surface of the bed. This will cover the seed sufficiently. If you know how, very gently tap the bed with the back of a shovel. This will hasten the germination of the seed.

There was a time when I preached and practiced the sowing of pansy seed under the shade of a tree or in a frame shaded with sashes. It's only the fool that does not alter his opinion, so now I say there is no need of either of those methods. Let your seedbeds be in the broad sun. The pansy is quick to germinate and during the few days intervening between sowing seed and the little plants showing through the ground, keep the beds constantly moist. Evening and morning watering may not be enough. Water ten times a day if necessary and never let the surface of the bed become parched. I will tell you later how to protect pansies during winter.

FLOWERS IN MEAT MARKETS.

In some of the larger cities in Canada the meat markets buy the growers' surplus cut flowers and flowering plants, using them for decorations and for cheap sales. The perennial discussion here takes only a slightly different form:

"The practice of growers' turning their surplus stock over to butcher shops is to be condemned," says J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, in the Canadian Florist. "The temporary pecuniary benefit to the growers' is not worth the ultimate injury both to themselves and the trade. Rather than do this kind of business it is better to let the surplus go to waste or, better still, donate it to some hospital or other institution where it will do some good."

"Selling to butchers has so slight an effect on the regular trade," writes Wm. Gammage, London, "that the beautifying of their stores, and the selling to and notice taken of flowers by those who would not in any other way be brought in contact with or buy them, will amply offset any trade that might be diverted."

ROSES

DICKSON'S IRISH ROSES.

[The response to a toast, by Alexander B. Scott, delivered at Philadelphia Florists' Club dinner in honor of Hugh Dickson, of Belfast, Ireland, June 6.]

I have taken the liberty of changing the subject assigned to me this evening from "Ireland—The gem of the ocean" to "Newtownards—The gem of Ireland," for from this little garden spot have been raised and sent out all of Alexander Dickson & Sons' Irish roses.

Many of the members of our Florists' Club who are present this evening will recollect Hugh Dickson's last visit ten years ago, and you will remember with how much force and spirit he introduced Alexander Dickson & Sons' Irish roses to American florists, and how well they were received. Most of the roses at that time were hybrid perpetuals, and the demand was largely for Ulrich Brunner, Rodocanachi, Magna Charta, and other hybrid perpetuals that could be forced for winter blooming.

I think it would be well to note at this time the great advance in the raising of new roses that Alexander Dickson & Sons have made in the last ten years. The hybridizers of the firm—Alexander Dickson and George Dickson, Jr., were among the first to realize that the hybrid tea rose was the rose of the future, and that the great rose loving public wanted hardy everblooming roses, rather than hybrid perpetuals that flower but once, with an occasional flower in the autumn. During the past ten years, of sixty-six new roses introduced by them, forty-three have been of this class, and nineteen have received gold medals from the National Rose Society. Of this number, we in America are very thankful for two, Killarney, introduced in 1898, and Liberty, in 1900.

Last summer I visited Newtownards, and spent two weeks among 7,000 seedling hybrid tea roses. I do not think there is a man here tonight who would not agree with me that this little patch of four or five acres, during the month of July, is the most interesting spot in the world to rose growers; in fact it is a Mecca for rose growers, both amateur and professional.

Two things I was impressed with very forcibly; one was the vast amount of labor and care in the production of these seedlings; not one of these 7,000 varieties were chance seedlings, and I found out that for the past twenty-five years these men have been keeping a record of every cross they have made, with notes of the result of that cross. Since they have raised so many good things themselves they have for the past few years confined their crossing and hybridization to roses of their own raising, and the result is shown in the varieties I inspected last summer.

The other thing that impressed me is the care with which they select their eyes for budding. I had often wondered why it was that the Dickson roses had such a remarkable vitality, and while they do not appear to be stronger in growth than selected stock from other sources, they invariably give larger and finer flowers a year or two after planting. I found last summer that the eyes put on in their vast establishment were selected by members of the firm; a boy generally waited on them while they were cutting the flowering wood of the plant; with their knives they cut out all the flat or poorer eyes, and only the sound, plump eyes went to the budders. They believe in the survival of the fittest, and they have found by experience that a constant selection of the best and plumpest eyes from flowering wood only will keep up their standard to its present high mark.

In their seedling roses, I was of course very much interested in the varieties that would probably do in America; it was very fascinating, and at the same time very disappointing work; almost every morning I would see varieties in bloom that I was absolutely sure would be winners for winter forcing in America; I would cut a bloom and take it to my room for its keeping qualities; I would then examine it in the field the following day, and would find that it had developed something that would not suit, and would have to be discarded. One variety that I was particularly impressed with, was a strong-growing variety which flowered in the open ground with 3-foot stems, and the flowers were even brighter and more velvety than Liberty; I thought that if this acted in America as it did in Ireland, we would have a crimson American Beauty. I received four plants in October, and they all grew; they grew so well that by March 1 they had attained a height of seventeen feet without a flower, and they have not flowered yet. I brought over with me thirty varieties, and have them now growing at my nurseries; several of these are very promising, but my faith is in two sterling varieties; one is a yellow with petals larger than Killarney, and the other is a light pink with a rosy center. I hope I may have these two varieties in good shape for exhibition next year.

In hardy everblooming roses for outside culture they have the grandest collection I have ever seen; they have almost every shade of color, many of them having the Killarney type of growth. I only hope the time will come very shortly when they will get stock enough to introduce them to general cultivation.

MAMAN COCHET ROSES.

I would like to know the best place for storing Maman Cochet roses during winter. I have 500 plants. A. G.

We have no experience in lifting and storing this grand rose, and think the process would not be satisfactory. It would be better to go to some trouble to protect the plants from being killed back, and to that end I would recommend that six inches of long stable litter or leaves be spread over the entire surface of the bed, between the growths, and over the top place a thick covering of evergreen boughs.

A still better plan and better protection would be to excavate the ground three or four inches on the side of the roses, then peg them down, covering again with three or four inches of soil, and further covering the soil with a few inches of long stable manure. This should not be done too early in the fall; just before a hard freeze is the time. This grand rose is surely worth some labor and watchfulness. As a summer-flowering tea rose it has no equal. President Carnot is also very valuable for summer, but wants the same protection from our northern frosts and blizzards.

W. S.

DICKSON, OF NEWTOWNARDS.

Hugh Dickson, of the firm of Alexander Dickson & Sons, of Newtownards, Ireland, known all over the world as hybridizers and introducers of new roses of merit, has been enjoying a short holiday in Philadelphia as the guest of Alexander B. Scott, of Sharon Hill, after his busy season just over.

Mr. Dickson, who is associated with his father and his three brothers in the far-famed Irish firm, is manager of the seed and bulb department, with large warehouses and salesroom in Belfast. When asked by a representative of the REVIEW to say a few words to his American cousins, Mr. Dickson kindly consented, expressing his belief that a chat about the growing part of the business would be of more general interest than about his own particular branch.

The firm of Alexander Dickson & Sons has three large farms. The first, embracing about 150 acres, is at Newtownards. Here the hybridizing and grafting of roses is done; grapes and fruit trees in large quantities are grown; ornamental shrubs and perennials are an important feature. Hardy phloxes are rapidly gaining in popular favor. A general line of nursery and garden stock is grown. Forest trees are now bought from elsewhere instead of being grown on the place as formerly.

The second farm consists of seventy acres. It is at Ledbury, Herefordshire, England. Here twenty acres of roses are grown. The third farm is at Blackford, near Dublin. It consists of twenty acres and has just been acquired this season.

There are about a dozen greenhouses at Newtownards. They aggregate about 25,000 square feet of glass and are used merely for grafting roses, for grapes and for general propagating and growing small stock. The annual output is about 300,000 roses, all budded. The old varieties are dug from the open ground in the fall; some of the newer varieties are sent out in 5-inch pots in June.

While Mr. Dickson's visit here is purely for recreation, he spent several days at W. Atlee Burpee & Co.'s at Fordhook, comparing the growth of different varieties with that made at home. He considers Fordhook a most wonderful place, its thorough system commanding admiration. He doubted whether such perfect trial grounds could be found anywhere else.

A new variety of edible pea originated by Mr. Dickson is now on trial at Fordhook. It is believed to be an improvement on Gradus and if suited to our climate and conditions it will be sent out, probably next season, by W. Atlee Burpee & Co. Mr. Dickson considers Mr. Burpee's judgment on sweet peas excellent and this, coupled with his wide knowledge of varieties and perfect candor, made him an invaluable ally for Mr. Eckford, whose novelties he will again send out simultaneously with their introduction in England.

Mr. Dickson spoke with pleasure of the reception tendered him by the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, and said to be sure to tell his friends that he still remembers with pleasure his visit of seventeen years ago, and how at the Thorndyke hotel in Boston, some of them tried to convince him that the Wootton was a red, red rose.

PHIL.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Making Ready for Planting.

By the middle of July there are few beds of carnations that are really worth saving, and it will pay you to throw them all out and get your houses in shape to plant from the field. We like to keep on cutting carnations until the early asters make their appearance, but after that time we have little use for them. That time is about here, and the throwing out process will soon be completed. We have many beds that have been empty for several weeks, beds that contained varieties that will not stand hot weather. Such varieties as Enchantress, Lawson, and The Belle, Flambeau, Harlowarden, Ethel Crocker, etc., have been giving us fine blooms up to now, and we hate to see them go to make room for the new stock.

It does not pay to put off the start until the last minute. There is sure to be some repairing of beds or benches needed, and usually we find more than we expected. The large carnation specialist, who grows but little else, of course has been at this ever since his young stock was all out in the field, but the retail grower, who tries to cover the whole field, from pansies to American Beauties, has his hands full all the time and must keep his wits about him, or he will put off some of these operations until they are obliged to forfeit their place in the line of march. When carnation planting was done mostly in September it was not necessary to think of them until all the roses and mums were benched, and all the painting done, besides a lot of other things. But times and conditions have changed. No sooner are the roses and mums in, than you must be ready to go right at the carnation preparations.

Of course it will depend largely on how many you plant as to the degree of haste required. If you plant only one house it will not take you long to do the job, but if you plant 25,000 plants, or more, it will take some time. The earlier you begin the more thorough you can make the preparations, and they should be completed before you begin planting. It will do no harm if the soil is on the bench a month before planting time, so get in the new soil as soon as you can.

Cleaning Up.

Do not empty a bench and let the sun beat on the boards for days before you refill it, but fill it at once, after cleaning off all the old soil. If the old plants were infested with red spider take the hose and wash off all the woodwork and the walls when the beds are empty. You can do it better then than any other time, and it is a good way to destroy many of these pests that may have remained when the plants were taken out. If the house is entirely empty it is a good plan to fumigate it thoroughly with sulphur before replanting, but be sure there are no plants in the house which you want to keep. This is perhaps the strongest point in favor of detached houses. You can fumigate one house without doing the same to the whole place.

Clean up thoroughly under the benches, in the walks, in fact from end to end. If you cannot fumigate with sulphur it is a good plan to smoke heavily with tobacco stems. The smoke will reach nooks and corners that you never reach when spraying with liquid and therefore will reach many insects that succumb to the fumes that would never be reached otherwise.

Soil to be Used.

When refilling the beds put a layer of half rotted cow manure on the bottom about an inch thick. Some growers object to this, but we have always found it a good practice. On top of this fill in your soil so as to make the whole about four inches thick. Four inches is plenty to set the plants in properly without spreading the roots out unduly. If it could be done in less depth I would advise less soil, but four inches, counting the manure, we find just about right. When planting from small pots we make the soil shallower and we have just as good success.

When filling in the soil break up all the lumps with your shovel. Carnations do not like a lumpy soil, but it should not be screened as I have seen done. In the latter case it will lie too close and you screen out too much fibre and manure, both of which are rich in plant food. If the soil is to lie a couple of weeks before planting, then let it dry out; it will do no harm. If you kept it moist that long you would likely have to pull a crop of weeds before you could plant. True, there would be that many less to pull afterward, but it would not amount to the same in the end, as you might suppose.

The Question of Weeds.

I have never considered a crop of weeds such a curse as many are wont to do. I would rather plant in a batch of soil that has in it in the shape of seed a lot of strong growing weeds than in a soil entirely free from anything of that kind. In the latter case you set your plants and water them; every time you water the soil settles down tighter and tighter, and when it gets dry it bakes and becomes less fit for plants to grow in every day. On the other hand, you set in your plants and water thoroughly. The weed seeds germinate and throw out their strong young roots, which keep the soil open and alive. By the time they are large enough to pull and the second batch is pulled, your plants have become established and are sending their roots through the soil, which will act in the same way as the weeds did. A soil that has nothing growing in it is dead and the longer it remains that way the worse it gets; a dead soil when kept moist soon becomes soured and poisonous to the plants set in it. Of course you don't want to let the weeds grow long enough to extract most of the plant food from the soil; that would be folly, but even that would be preferable to the other, because you can replace that. However, they will not take out much food if pulled as soon as they are large enough.

Level the soil as you fill the beds and see that the beds are well filled along the edge. If leveled, if the soil dries out it will dry over the whole bed and can be watered evenly when wanted for planting. Mix in the bone a few days before you plant and water enough to put it in proper shape for planting. Thirty-five pounds of bone to a bed 5x100 is about right, and rake it into the soil well. Leave all other stimulants until later on, when you can see by the behavior of the plants what is needed.

A. F. J. BAUR.

IRONWOOD, MICH.—R. Lutey is building an addition of two houses to his Block of Peony Festiva Maxima at the Peterson Nursery, Chicago.

BEST CUT FLOWER PEONIES.

I am planning to plant a few peonies this fall for cut flower purposes. Will you kindly name the best for this use, the best early double pink and white, the best mid-season and late sorts.

D. W. W.

E. E. Pieser, secretary of Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, who has sold as many peonies as any man in this country, says that for the florist who is planting 100 peonies for his own use, retailing the flowers as they develop, the varieties and proportions should be as follows: Officinalis, pink, six plants; officinalis, red, twelve plants; Early Rose, twelve plants; Queen Victoria, or Whitleyi, forty plants; Late Rose, twenty plants; Richardson's Rubra Superba, true, ten plants. For larger quantities the proportions would continue the same.

Mr. Pieser says that where peonies are grown for cut flowers for wholesaling, especially for the Chicago market, more depends on knowing how to cut and handle the flowers than on the variety. However, he finds Queen Victoria, formerly called Whitleyi and first known in the Chicago market as Von Bombach's White, so much the best keeper in cold storage that it is by all odds the best sort for the purpose. A variety grown by Klehm's Nursery and sold only as "light pink," is giving such satisfaction that Mr. Pieser says it promises to become a companion sort to Queen Victoria.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business is dull, with the quantity of flowers at lowest ebb. The features are the arrival of auratum lilies, which are very fine, and the increase in the supply of Rhode Island Beauties, finer than those grown near here at this season, as the buds can remain longer on the plants. There are a few good carnations, some nice roses, chiefly eastern stock, and lilies of the valley. Sweet peas are on the decline. Business is quiet.

Protective Association.

It has been generally known about town for the last six weeks that the wholesalers were growing restive under existing business conditions. With their business increasing and the necessity for prompt monthly payments in order to meet the wishes of their growers, long credits have become an impossibility, a burden that could no longer be borne. After a number of meetings, at which the situation was thoroughly discussed, it was decided that all those interested in the selling of cut flowers should be invited to join some kind of an organization, formed with the object of securing prompt payments from the buyers, and preventing an abuse of credit.

At the meeting held in Horticultural hall on Monday, July 9, ten of the wholesale houses signed the by-laws of the Philadelphia Florists' Protective Association, binding themselves to require payment for all cut flowers on the fifteenth of the month following delivery. When such payment is not made within five days, a list of delinquents is to be furnished to the secretary of the association. The secretary will make up a complete list of delinquents, furnishing the same to each member, the latter agreeing to sell only for cash to such delinquents.

This agreement was signed by Wm. J. Baker, Berger Bros., Eugene Bernheimer, Dumont & Co., W. E. McKissick, the Leo Niessen Co., the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market, Samuel S. Pennock, Fred Ehret Co. and Edward Reid. The officers of the association are: President, Samuel S. Pennock; secretary and treasurer, David Rust. The initiation fee is $10. September 1 is named as the date when the plan will become operative, and it will apply to Philadelphia and Camden and Philadelphia counties.

Reception at Dooner's.

The Florists' Club tendered a reception and banquet to Hugh Dickson, of Newtownards, Ireland, Friday, July 6, at Dooner's Hotel, Tenth street, above Chestnut, which was well attended and greatly enjoyed by all those present. Alexander B. Scott acted as master of ceremonies, presenting Mr. Dickson to all those with whom he was not acquainted. After a half hour's chat dinner was announced, the following members sitting down to the tables: Thomas B. Meehan, presiding; Hugh Dickson on his right, on his left Edwin Lonsdale; Alexander B. Scott, Edward Reid and C. E. Larzelere were also at the president's table. At the other tables were W. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C.; P. Joseph Lynch and Antoine Wintzer, both of West Grove; George Burton, of Wyndmoor; Edward A. Flood, of Ateo, N. J.; W. P. Brinton, of Christiana; W. A. Leonard, of Lansdowne; Adolph Farenwald, of Roslyn; Joseph Heacock, of Wyncote; Thomas W. Logan, of Jenkintown; W. H. Vance, of Wilmington, Del.; John H. Dodds, of Jenkintown; Fred Hahman, of Frankford; and Dr. Robert A. Huey, Dr. Montrose Graham Tull, Henry F. Michell, William K. Harris, William P. Craig, Robert A. Craig, Robert Craig, D. T. Connor, George C. Watson, George Craig, Robert Kift, S. S. Pennock, John Westcott, John A. Dunham and J. W. Young, all of this city.

The dinner was well appointed and greatly enjoyed. President Meehan introduced Robert Craig, who acted as toast-master, calling on Hugh Dickson, who responded in well chosen words. Among the many excellent speeches that of Alexander B. Scott, which appears elsewhere in this paper, is of more than usual interest. Mr. Dickson evidently has a keen sense of humor, for when Mr. Scott described the new Irish rose that appeared to be better than Beauty and with a finer color than Liberty, he watched with merry eyes the faces of the rose growers who were leaning forward to catch every word, and when Mr. Scott went on to say that this rose when planted at Sharon Hill had grown seventeen feet without producing a flower he laughed merrily, as the rose growers sat back in their chairs with deep disgust on their faces. P. J. Lynch read a clever original poem with spirit. Edwin Lonsdale sang the "Duke of York" as only he can sing it, and Adolph Farenwald made a ringing speech, sounding the changes on the coin in a way to stir his hearers. The party broke up at a late hour, agreeing that the evening had been one of the pleasantest of the many entertainments in which the members of the club had participated.

Burton vs. Niessen.

Last Saturday afternoon the employees of the Burton rose-growing establishments played a game of baseball with a team representing the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market, Edward Reid Co., and the Leo Niessen Co., the latter team winning by the score of fourteen to six. The features of the game were the good feeling shown by both teams and the fans present, and the excellent nerve of Leo Niessen in calling this representative team the Leo Niessen Co. baseball team.

After a very pleasant hour around the refreshment booth nobody seemed to care much who won. Even the umpire, poor unfortunate individual, made peace with both factions, and was freely forgiven before the company finally dispersed.

Various Notes.

Henry F. Michell is summering at Atlantic City.

M. Rice & Co. are importing goods by way of New York as well as through this port, in order to expedite matters.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have large consignments on the steamers Barcelona and Menominee.

William J. Moore has been offering Stokesia cyanea until early asters arrive.

Samuel S. Pennock is summering at Ocean City, N. J.

Mrs. John Wolf, of Savannah, Ga., is visiting friends here. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Receipts of poor stock at the wholesale houses are very much more than the demand calls for, especially in sweet peas and Bride and Maid roses. Carnations, too, are becoming very small and of poor color. We are still in need of a soaking rain for the outdoor stock. The business among the retailers since the Fourth has been reported as very dull in all lines, so the boys are going away one at a time to be back in season for the boss's vacation at Dayton next month.

The wholesalers, too, are idle after the morning sales are over. Little shipping is being done at present. Prices on stock are low, especially on sweet peas: 5 cents and 10 cents per hundred in large lots. These are at their height at present and of fine quality. The bulk of these come from Kirkwood.

Beauties are of poor quality. Kaiserin, Ivory and Carnot are good. Bride and Maid still are poor.

Carnations are selling well, though they are small in flower. Valley is good, with slow sale. Gladioli, tuberose stalks, daisies, cornflowers and asters are having slow sale at present.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Wm. Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., is visiting the northern lakes for the summer. Her daughter, Miss Allie, is in Grand Rapids, Mich., on a visit.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville, Ill., visited Chicago last week on business and pleasure.

Wm. Winter, of Kirkwood, spent Saturday in the city calling on the trade.

A. S. Halstead, of Belleville, was over on Saturday, buying supplies. Mr. Halstead will leave for Chicago tonight and also visit his daughter at Detroit before returning home.

F. C. Weber, Jr., is spending ten days north on pleasure.

A. Bayhouse, of the Bayhouse Floral Co., Boise, Ida., spent a few days here, visiting the growers.

George Waldbart is having great success this year with his daisy and sweet pea farm in St. Louis county. Thousands are cut each day for his Grand avenue establishment.

Fred H. Meinhardt, state vice-president of the S. A. F., will this year look after transportation for the Dayton convention. Those going will please report to him.

The club meeting this week Thursday, which will be held in Edwardsville, is promised a large attendance by the members and their ladies. Mr. Ammann has made full preparation for entertaining them.

The trustees of the club, Messrs. Beyer, Weber and Fillmore, spent a day last week looking for a place to hold our annual outing and decided on the beautiful Roncona park, on the suburban line in St. Louis county. The date of the outing is Thursday, July 26. There will be the usual games, fishing, boating and dancing. The music will be by the famous colored Jubilee band, who will amuse the crowd with both singing and dancing. Another feature this year will be a baseball game between the wholesalers and retailers. The teams have been made up as follows:

Wholesalers.	Position.	Retailers.
Schriefer	p	Beneke
Alves	c	Adels
Smith	1b	Sanders
Berning	2b	Windt
Kuehn	ss	R. Windler
Angermueller	3b	C. Beyer

Umpires—Fred Ammann and E. W. Guy.

Mrs. F. M. Ellis and her two daughters are visiting friends in the western part of the state, where they will remain until Mr. Ellis returns from Panama August 1.

Theo. Klockenkemper has offered his place on Mead avenue for lease. Here is a chance for a good carnation grower to make some money this fall and winter.

William C. Osberghaus, for the past seventeen years gatekeeper at Shaw's Garden, died at his home in the garden on Saturday at the age of 51 years. He was known to many S. A. F. visitors and was well known to every member of the local trade. He is survived by his wife and four children. The funeral took place Monday from his home at the entrance to Shaw's Garden. Interment was in St. Matthew's cemetery.

For the months of July and August all four wholesale houses will close at 5 p. m. Berning and Kuehn started in July 1 and Angermueller and Ellis this week, so the trade will know that after 5 o'clock nothing can be had from them.

The two teams got at each other Monday night. Team No. 1 won all three games, as follows:

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Stagnation expresses the condition of affairs in the wholesale flower markets. Stock is not overabundant in any line and yet the demand creates no stir in prices and midsummer values prevail. The new roses are short-stemmed and small and often drop to $2.50 a thousand. Lilies are shortening in quantity and a slight increase in price was noted Monday. The sweet pea flood comes in steadily and the tide recedes in value. Orchids are at low ebb, with the rest of the arrivals, and so everything and everybody is resting or planning for the usual summer holiday, both magnates and employees.

The Picnic.

The club's outing, briefly reported last week, is a happy memory to the participants. In the baby contest the following proud mothers competed, and none of their babies was forgotten: Mrs. F. H. Traendly, Mrs. John Foley, Mrs. Louis Schmutz, Jr., Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Vocke, Mrs. Fenrich, Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. Bohlen, Mrs. John Scott, Mrs. Wagner, Mrs. Miller. Mrs. Sullivan and Mrs. Manda. The judges had a serious task. No such galaxy of youthful beauty has ever been seen at an outing in this country. Mr. Traendly seemed several inches taller after the decision for first prize was awarded his heir and this, with the fat men's prize, made the Isabel too small a ship to hold him. Next year the competition will be keener and larger. The florists here agree with the President on the family question.

The music was continuous. At the dinner vocalists added to the melody and 400 joined in the choruses. The club is talking of a larger boat for next year.

Sweet Pea Plantation of George Waldbart, St. Louis, at Clayton, Mo.

The day was well chosen. All the schools were closed and the children were all made happy with some memento of the occasion. The supply of everything on the boat was abundant. The dinner fulfilled all promises, as usual, at the excellent resort chosen. The committee worked tirelessly and deserves the commendation it received. The only disappointment about these yearly outings is the lack of time to complete the contests, so that all may enjoy them. The sports are so numerous that all the strain of a three-ring circus is experienced. The only way to please everybody will be to make it a two-days outing. The bowling alone was sufficient for the sport of an afternoon. Fifteen handsome prizes rewarded the lady winners, with Mrs. Whitman in the lead. Joe Manda led the men and his score had no remnants of typhoid fever in it. John Birnie was close after him. About 250 bowlers of both sexes participated in this contest. The prizes in all the games were valuable and gave great satisfaction to the winners. Charlie Lenker was loaded with a bicycle won by one of his kids. Mr. Pepper won John Birnie's silk umbrella. Mansfield gave an exhibition of fancy swimming. The married ladies were more enthusiastic than the maidens and their racing was artistic. Mrs. Smith won first honors. Miss Manda still holds the record among the unmarried ladies and is always No. 1. The fat men had hard sledding against Traendly. Mr. Bohmler made a good try for a 240-pounder. Will Elliott ran well for ten yards, and the other fellows "fell by the way." Chicago was heard from in the quarter-mile race, F. Lautenschlager winning first honors. The tug of war was a heart-breaking struggle of five minutes' duration with the growers victors. The whole ten were exhausted and the excitement could be heard a mile.

Chairman Wheeler was a strenuous coacher and manager and had a hot afternoon. The success of the day was greatly to his individual credit. President Scott aided greatly in producing the triumphant culmination of the yearly festival. Perfect harmony and decorum characterized the occasion from start to finish and the New York Florists' Club has added another record to its history.

Various Notes.

James Coyle, of Froment's, is away to the mountains. Mr. Froment is rearranging his big store and adding room and conveniences, evidently with enlarged faith in the coming season now less than two months away.

J. K. Allen, as the bookkeeper, Miss Smedley is away on her summer outing, has his hands full from 6 o'clock every morning, and the Jersey mosquitoes over in Kearney are no great comfort during the night.

For this time of the year Victory carnations are reaching the market in fine condition, the old plants still doing duty. Some 15,000 weekly are handled by A. J. Guttman. Guttman & Weber report a large booking of orders and plants in first-class condition.

H. H. Berger & Co. report their new catalogue ready for distribution. Mrs. Berger and Miss Berger have returned from their first outing of the season.

The travel to Europe continues, among the latest voyagers being R. C. Pye, of Nyack; David Fraser, of Pittsburg; John Heeremans, of Madison; Charles Plumb, of Detroit; S. Burnett, the seedsman, and Peter Duff, of Orange, N. J.

The Kervan Co., of West Twenty-seventh street, lost a faithful employee last week, Richard Cooper having been run over by an automobile.

C. W. Ward is on a western trip and Frank Hamilton, of the Cottage Gardens Co., has resigned his position as manager of the landscape department on account of failing health.

At the "little church around the corner" L. W. C. Tuthill, of the Horticultural Ad. Agency, last week joined the ranks of the benedicts. Mr. and Mrs. Tuthill went to Gloucester, Mass., for their honeymoon.

James McManus is one of the Elks who will journey to the great convention at Denver. While away he will take in the loup trips in the Rockies, over the Marshall pass, and will climb Pike's Peak with the rest of the brethren.

Frank Millang has some wonderful fish stories from his own trout stream at his summer home in Westchester county.

The ambition to become suburbanites is growing among the wholesalers. Such glowing descriptions of fresh air and quietude and reliable eggs and other foods are coming in from those already blessed with country homes. I venture to predict that every wholesaler in the business will have his farm before the century is eight years old.

Harry Bunyard, of Boddington's, is back from a successful trip and getting ready for the convention. He reports a great interest in the Dayton meeting wherever he has been and predicts a record crowd. The New York section will be well represented. All the great exhibitors will make fine displays. Reed & Keller promise an attractive showing of all their latest novelties. A letter from Mr. Reed, who is in Italy, indicates that Mrs. Reed and he are having a delightful time and will not be home before the early fall.

A. Herrmann, who has been in Europe for several weeks, returns Wednesday with many interesting additions to his stock of florists' supplies.

A. Moltz has been away for a two weeks' vacation.

Carrillo & Baldwin, at Secaucus, N. J., have eight houses devoted exclusively to orchids and are rapidly stocking them from their own importations. Mr. Carrillo, who spent six months in South America and has been at home for only a few weeks, started on Saturday for Venezuela and will continue to gather and ship until every bench is filled. McManus handles the cut flowers grown by this progressive young firm. Mr. Baldwin reports a steady demand for plants from all over the country.

Fred Atkins has just completed a very handsome residence on his property at Rutherford. It is situated close to the nurseries and overlooks a splendid country. These nurseries now comprise over 100 acres and are planted with the finest stock of every description. The bay trees are almost a forest in themselves. The greenhouses are filled with palms of every size. Herbaceous plantings are extensive. One can hardly realize the wonderful growth of this enterprise in seven years without spending a day there. Large additions are to be made to the offices at once and everything indicates progress and prosperity. Mr. Atkins says the nursery business in this country is only in its infancy, and Bobbink & Atkins are laying broad and deep foundations for the growth that is to be.

C. W. Ward is on the program for an address at the international conference on plant breeding to be held in London, England, beginning July 30.

THE YEARBOOK.

The Yearbook of the department of agriculture is being distributed and may be had by addressing a request to your congressman. It is a volume of 815 pages and serves to give an idea of the extent of the size of this branch of government service, and its rapid growth, for in it in 1905 was expended the huge sum of $6,000,000, there being 5,446 employees as against 2,443 in 1897.

The volume shows also the wide scope of the work undertaken by the department. As usual, reports show the subjects taken up and the results achieved in the past year. There are also a number of papers by department scientists, some one of which at least will interest every man who lives by the soil, no matter what he grows.

Every year 500,000 copies of the Yearbook are published, and all but 30,000 are at the disposal of congressmen.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Plant Registration.

Charles G. Roebling, Trenton, N. J., submits for registration Cattleya Charles G. Roebling, a stray seedling; flower pure white, six inches across with slight trace of yellow in throat; probably raised from Cattleya Harrisonæ alba x C. Mendelii Bluntii, which parents it resembles very much; bulbs are eighteen inches long and two-leaved; quite strong growing; flowers are of good substance. Also Cattleya Kinkora (C. Mendelii Morganii x C. intermedia alba); flowers pure white, with richly colored lip; bulbs are two-leaved, slender, about ten inches long.

Paul Niehoff, Lehighton, Pa., submits for registration Rose Aurora, seedling from Bon Silene x Souvenir du President Carnot; flowers large and full; color light pink with a deeper shading in the center; growth very strong; foliage dark green; stems four to five feet long; very prolific with no tendency to go dormant during the winter. This is the rose which Mr. Niehoff recently exhibited under the name of Columbia. On being informed that another rose had already been registered with the S. A. F. as Columbia he withdrew his claim and the rose will be disseminated as Aurora.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business is at a low ebb. Much of what is brought in cannot be sold or is disposed of at very low prices. A number of flowers are now out of the market for the present, but too much stock comes in for the light demand. The best selling flowers are sweet peas. These bring 20 cents to 25 cents per hundred and are now abundant, white being the only color in rather short suply. Outdoor roses are now over and there is only a very spasmodic call for indoor ones, mostly for funeral work.

Carnations coming in are mostly of very poor quality. Prices have varied from 25 cents to $2 per hundred, far more selling at the former than the latter price. Lily of the valley is in less request and the demand for other seasonable flowers is light. At the stores quantities of good Lilium candidum are seen, also L. auratum, pond lilies, gladioli, delphiniums and coreopsis. In orchids, Cattleyas gigas, Harrisoniæ and Vanda cœrulea are noted.

Exhibition.

The first of the summer Saturday shows on July 7 brought out a fine lot of exhibits which filled the main exhibition hall. There was a keen tussle between Bay State Nurseries and Blue Hill Nurseries in the class for thirty varieties of herbaceous plants, the first named eventually coming out ahead. Each of these exhibitors also staged large additional collections of perennials. William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, had the best collection of hardy perennial roses. He was also first for a table of Canterbury bells and for thirty vases of delphiniums, three spikes to a vase with a magnificent lot of Kelway's named varieties. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener, was second in the two latter classes and first for twenty-five vases Iris Kæmpferi; W. Whitman second, each showing finely.

In the way of miscellaneous exhibits, the Boston park department had a fine display of cut sprays of Farquhar roses which were tastefully arranged. George Hollis had a collection of double zonal pelargoniums; Mrs. Ayer tuberous begonias and Marguerite Queen Alexandra; Mrs. E. M. Gill, Thomas Doliber, M. Byrne gardener, and Mrs. J. B. Lawrence, general displays. Harvard Botanic Gardens staged a collection of eighty-four varieties of herbaceous plants. A. Ouimet had a well flowered double pomegranate in a tub. Mrs. A. W. Blake, J. L. Smith gardener, had Brassia verrucosa and Larz Anderson, Duncan Finlayson gardener, a capitally bloomed Dendrobium taurinum awarded a cultural certificate.

There was a splendid display of fruits and vegetables, competition being unusually keen. The display of produce from children's gardens was very interesting and attracted many visitors. The Boston Mycological Club had a good collection of fungi.

Various Notes.

Herbert C. Tyler is in Canada for a few weeks' vacation.

Samuel Wax has gone as far away as Labrador and hopes to catch some big salmon there and perhaps bag a polar bear or two.

Frank White, of Holbrook, reappeared at the Park Street Market on July 6 after an enforced absence due to a honeymoon trip.

Charles E. Robinson, of H. M. Robinson & Co., is enjoying his vacation in the wilds of Maine.

George H. Butterworth, of South Framingham, sailed on the S. S. Ivernia on July 10 for Liverpool. He will visit some of the noted orchid collectors in Great Britain and will attend the international hybridization conference in London.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Finlayson also sailed on the Ivernia. They will make a tour of the leading horticultural establishments in Great Britain, including Skibo Castle, Andrew Carnegie's Scotch home, over the gardens of which Mr. Finlayson's cousin is presiding genius. William Nicholson and Miss Nicholson, of Framingham, and H. L. Cameron, of North Cambridge, were also passengers on the Ivernia.

July 21 will be sweet pea day at Horticultural hall. Ten classes are allotted to them this season.

Interest continues to grow in the coming club picnic on July 25 at Caledonian grove. The sports committee is hard at work and will present a very attractive program for contestants.

We are getting an unusual amount of rain this summer, which, while not to the liking of haymakers, is promoting a splendid growth on practically all garden crops. Carnations and violets are looking unusually well in the fields.

James Wheeler, who for a number of years has been a valued member of the plant and flower arrangements committees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, has, owing to pressure of other duties, resigned from these committees. It will be very difficult to secure one who will adequately fill Mr. Wheeler's place.

W. N. C.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Godfrey Ascnmann is planning to go to Europe the latter part of the month, on business connected with his large importations of plants.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The demand has receded to the usual summer level. There is only a small amount of business, either in shipping or in local trade, but those houses which are fortunate in having cuts of good quality find it easy to sell out, for receipts are at a lower level than at any time this summer and good stock is particularly scarce.

The out-of-town demand calls for Beauties for special work. Supplies are light and prices well maintained. Kaiserin is bringing good returns, although a few good Bride are coming in. Red roses still are abundant. Carnations are in lighter supply than has been known in the last year. Most of the stock is small and the color is lacking in many growers' crops. The prices range from 5 cents per bunch to $2 per hundred, with an occasional sale of fancy stock at higher figures.

There continues to be large receipts of sweet peas in a wide range of color. With most growers stems are not long and the stock is moved with difficulty. Peonies are approaching the end. They will hardly be available after this week. Longiflorum lilies are seen in quantity in several houses, but are reported to be moving satisfactorily. Auratums are not yet largely in evidence and candidum is about finished. Gladioli from outdoors are being received in small quantities. A few asters are seen, also centaurea. Water lilies are abundant.

There are large receipts of green goods, especially Michigan ferns.

Outdoor Flowers Useful.

The cut flower work of the George Wittbold Co. has an individuality these days. It is because they have available much material not usually seen in the wholesale cut flower markets. They have for some time been cutting great quantities of splendid trusses of Crimson Rambler, which they have used with excellent effect in table decorations, presentation baskets and for many other purposes. Another of their useful items is purple stocks, with which some splendid funeral wreaths have been turned out. The nursery at Edgebrook is supplying a diversity of outdoor material which is not only profitably used but which draws attention to their work because of its being different from that turned out from stores which depend upon the wholesale markets for supplies.

At Brant & Noe's.

Louis M. Noe has returned to Madison, N. J., after a week's visit at the establishment of Brant & Noe, Forest Glen. All the roses were planted by July 1 and one could not ask for finer young stock. The old houses are rapidly being rebuilt and it is expected to begin benching carnations in them about July 20. J. J. Curran, who years ago had charge of the growing here, has returned, after having spent a number of seasons with Van Bochove & Bro., Kalamazoo, Mich., and the United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y.

Rose Company Plans.

The Chicago Rose Co. has concluded to drop its line of seeds, bulbs and nursery stock and confine the supplies to staples. As a result the south half of the store is offered for rent, the intention being to put in a partition. They have a very favorable lease, the rental for store and basement being $4,000 per year. As there are almost no empty stores in the downtown district, they anticipate no difficulty in getting $2,000 for half the store, leaving sufficient salesroom for their own use and the basement for storage.

State and Randolph.

The Central Floral Co. has not yet installed the new fixtures in the store at 68 State. It is a small room and few cases or tables can be admitted. It is asserted that per square foot of floor, Mr. Schneider is paying the highest rent ever paid by a Chicago retailer.

A few feet away, around the corner, George Vesas, who formerly was in the basement, has been fitted up with a store almost the equal of the Central's and makes a nice showing from the street. He does business as the Bay State Flower Co. and has a three years' lease. It is said Mr. Schneider was not deterred from taking the State street store by the knowledge that the other store was provided for.

Various Notes.

Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth reached home Saturday. Mr. Hauswirth will be along about next Sunday. They left San Francisco June 27, spent a day at Santa Cruz, and at Los Angeles Mr. Hauswirth was recalled by telegraph to San Francisco to do some further work for the Red Men.

L. Baumann has returned from Europe and gone on the road to sell the supplies he bought while abroad.

Wietor Bros. are doing a big business in chrysanthemum plants and ship daily to New England and the far west.

The bowlers meet every Tuesday evening at Bensinger's, 114 Monroe street. All are invited.

Splendid irises have been a feature in Mangel's show window for several weeks.

Ernest Rober, formerly with Andrew McAdams, is now grower for the Aurora Greenhouse Co., Aurora, Ill.

George Reinberg is cutting some very good Bride roses and reports demand fully up to the supply.

Peter Reinberg, Adam Zender and John Muno, accompanied by their wives, are planning a trip to Denver and Colorado Springs. They are scheduled to leave July 18.

E. C. Amling and family have been spending a week with relatives at Milwaukee.

A. L. Vaughan and family started on Tuesday for a fishing excursion to Spirit Lake, Wis.

N. J. Wietor and John Sinner returned Sunday from their Wisconsin trip. Each was well tanned and reported the fish biting so well that the return was with reluctance.

C. M. Dickinson, manager of E. H. Hunt's, is in Wisconsin for a fortnight. W. E. Lynch, of the same firm, is a summer bachelor, his family being at the old home at Northampton, Mass.

A. L. Randall Co. has heard from Miss Tonner, who is buying supplies in Italy. She writes that she is not so well pleased with the spaghetti bill of fare as with the quality of the Italian wheat for sheaves.

George Wienhoeber has returned to Boston after spending a few days here.

Leonard Kill and wife leave Thursday for Cincinnati to spend Sunday with their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Weimer. Mr. Weimer pitches for the Cincinnati National League baseball team.

Kruchten & Johnson have about reached the end of 5,000 dozen peonies stored the first part of June.

Weiland & Risch have their new house up and planted. They are now preparing to bench about 50,000 carnation plants. Several Evanston growers who had vegetables last year will grow carnations to consign to Weiland & Risch this season.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting some superfine valley.

At J. A. Budlong's plant they have a new house up and planted. Six houses are given to Beauty, three times as much space as last year.

Visitors have been numerous this week. Among them were E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; J. G. Crozier, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; A. S. Halstead and Henry Emunds, Belleville, Ill.; J. W. Young, Aurora, Ill.; Ed Calvert, Lake Forest; F. H. Howard, of Howard & Smith, Los Angeles, Cal.

Junction City, Kan.—W. P. Ranson is building an addition 21x40.

Joliet, Ill.—Fred H. Rowe has resigned his position with the Chicago Carnation Co. to take charge of a store at Bloomington.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Good roses are scarce, as the last week has been quite a busy one. A large number of weddings having taken place, we had to look to Chicago to help out. Sweet peas are scarce and short in stem on account of the dry weather that we had in May and part of June. But the recent rains are bringing sweet peas out in fine shape. A large per cent were destroyed by greenfly during the dry spell. We find that sweet peas shipped in from Chicago don't keep well and will not do for use the next day, and most of the florists have quit ordering from there. Carnations are also scarce and small, and prices are up. Some of the customers are grumbling because they can't buy them for 25 cents a dozen as they could last winter when they were plentiful. Snapdragons are in fine shape and are being used more than ever before.

Various Notes.

Jacob Tobler, of Westport, is highly pleased with the spring trade and says his range of houses is too small. He recently bought 4,000 feet of glass and will at once build larger houses. Tobler has quite a large bedding trade.

A. Blankenfelt, one of the leading florists in Westport, has purchased five acres of land two miles out of town, where he will have more room to grow his flowers. He intends to grow vegetables in addition to his flowers. He is now located near the main line of natural gas from the Kansas fields to supply Kansas City, and he will tap the line for his fuel for next winter. He heats with steam. He has already torn down his range of houses on Main street and has moved them out on his new place. Kansas City florists wish him success in his new undertaking.

Charles Laundy has a fine new wagon which is a good advertisement for his business. Mr. Laundy grows bedding plants and carnations for wholesale. He superintended the bedding out this spring himself. He had a very good spring, but will not build any this summer.

James Payne, at the Union cemetery, seems to have had a good trade this spring, as his houses are quite empty. Mr. Payne has a very nice patch of early dahlias which are in bloom now.

Miss Jewell is still busy and seems to do quite a good wedding business.

Mr. Fruedenthal, the Twelfth street florist, is still in business. Although others fail around him, he still holds his own and intends to do so.

R. S. Brown & Son report that their business has been very heavy. They are well sold out of everything that is any good. They are now very busy planting mums, of which they grow quite a large number.

Albert Barbee, of Elmwood cemetery, reports that he was sold out on good geraniums by Decoration day. Mr. Barbee has one of the best trades in Kansas City. His Sunday trade in bouquets is excellent, as his houses are just across the street from the cemetery.

Fred Groschki, formerly employed by R. S. Brown & Son, has purchased three large lots 40x137½ between Independence, Mo., and Sugar Creek, where the large oil refinery plant is located by the Standard Oil Co. It is the intention of Mr. Groschki to raise vegetables for Sugar Creek.

C. Hite, of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., is now busy taking down raised benches for American Beauties, and he will plant all in solid benches. Last winter's trial has convinced him that this is the only way to get good buds and stems.

BUSY.

USE OF STEAM TRAP.

I am about to wall in a fifty horse-power steam boiler and find that I cannot get the boiler deep enough to get the return water back if I keep the return pipes under the benches. I cannot lower the boiler on account of water. Will a steam trap answer the purpose? The returns as they are now would come in almost at the bottom of the boiler instead of above the top, and the boiler is fifty-four inches in diameter. If a trap will do please give me the name of the best one made, also the size of pipe necessary to carry enough return water to heat 16,000 square feet of glass. Will a trap give good satisfaction or are they liable to get out of order?

H. H. G.

It is to be regretted that you cannot lower the boiler so as to use a gravity system. However, if you maintain sufficient pressure on the boiler at all times the return steam trap will do the work nicely. Traps are simple in construction and do not easily get out of order. There are several good ones on the market, any one of which will serve the purpose, but most florists use the Morehead, made at Detroit. It will be necessary to provide a hot well into which the water from the house can be discharged, and from which it can be elevated by the trap to the boiler. L. C. C.

BOILER AND HEATING.

I have a house 16x30, heated by 2-inch overhead flow and eleven 1¼-inch returns under the benches. The north end is against a dwelling. I am building across the south end of this house, a house 21x60, 5-foot walls, two feet of glass in the south wall, east end of glass, with a shed on the west end. I have solid beds. I want 60 degrees in the small house and 50 in the large one in zero weather. Please give me the best plan under these conditions for heating. Will a fifteen horse-power, fire-box boiler be large enough to heat these houses and for 60-foot radiators, using hot water?

W. D.

The houses in question 16x30 can be successfully heated with water at 180 degrees by using a 2-inch flow under the ridge and eleven 1¼-inch returns under the benches, and the 21x60-foot house by a 2-inch flow and twelve 1¼-inch returns under the benches. To care for the radiators in the house an independent 2-inch flow should be carried from the boiler to the house to make direct connection with the heating plant, rather than to use a continuation of the greenhouse flow for the purpose. The fifteen horse-power boiler will do the work, but it must be remembered that the fire-box type, i. e., locomotive type, is less economical than the return tube type. L. C. C.

MILWAUKEE.

The Milwaukee Retail Florists' Association was organized June 30 at the Republican house for the protection of mutual interests. The association is composed of twenty-four members and officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Frederick Davis; vice-president, William Edlefson; secretary, A. B. Loufbourow; treasurer, Mrs. Ida Baumgarten.

F. Praefke is building three new greenhouses at his place on Concordia avenue, which he expects to have ready for planting by August 1. The heating contract has been awarded to Louis A. Riemer, who will install a Furman sectional hot-water boiler. Mr. Praefke, to accommodate his downtown trade, will open a flower store on Third street, near Garfield avenue.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Various Notes.

Emptying and refilling the benches is the order of the day now, and planting mums is going on apace. From all appearances there will be an immense cut of the autumn flowers in this vicinity.

Bertermann Bros. have begun glazing their new range of houses near Cumberland; they have a fine water supply from a deep well, getting the required pressure from a high water tower.

John Bertermann and family start for their cottage on the lakes in a few days.

Baur & Smith have commenced cutting their Shasta daisies, and judging by the look of the patch, they can take care of all orders.

Wiegand & Son are making extensive improvements in their store; this firm believes in expansion and doing things up right.

Henry Rieman has taken out a building permit for a $2,000 greenhouse. With this addition Henry will have a model establishment and be in good shape to handle his increasing trade.

There will be a large party of florists attend the convention from this city. It is the intention, if the party is large enough, to charter a special car.

Ben Pritchard, who is with Wiegand & Son, is back again after a vacation spent in the hills of Brown county. S.

ELBERON, N. J.

A meeting of the Elberon Horticultural Society was held on Monday, July 2, with President W. D. Robertson in the chair. A good number of the members were present, considering the warm weather we were passing through at that date. Some good exhibits were shown, notably a collection of cannas shown by A. Bauer, who was awarded a certificate of merit.

The prize of the evening, which was awarded by W. W. Kennedy, of Red Bank, for a collection of vegetables, was won by F. Dettlinger. A. Bauer, H. Hall and Ben Wycoff exhibited collections of cut flowers, and W. D. Robertson exhibited a vase of Chysanthemum maximum. Some good vegetables were also shown by J. Kennedy and A. Greil. This young society holds its first flower show on Friday and Saturday, July 13 and 14.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting and floral display of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held on July 6, with orchids in the lead from the commercial houses of Lager & Hurrell and the Julius Roehrs Co., and many rare and meritorious contributions were shown from the neighboring estates. A paper upon the dahlia was read by Walter Gray, of Maplewood, N. J., and letters upon the recent exorbitant and oppressive charges of the United States Express Company were presented.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

THE Chicago onion set fields are again in much need of rain.

W. ATLEE BURPEE, Philadelphia, is inspecting seed crops in California. He is accompanied by his son, who is to take an active part in the business.

EVERYTHING in the way of reports from the onion growers of Indiana and Ohio points to a short crop in those parts. In the east conditions are said to be better.

T. H. HOPKINS, who has charge of the Sturgeon Bay warehouses of the John H. Allan Seed Co., reports peas in Kewanee and Door counties as looking especially well at this date.

ONE who claims to know says that when the seed department in the general mail order house is put in a class by itself the management will have solved the problem of how it can be conducted profitably.

J. M. THORBURN & Co., New York, announce the removal of their business to the large five-story building at 33 Barclay street, through to 38 Park place. The condemnation of their warehouse on Cortlandt street for railroad purposes necessitated the change.

ARTHUR B. Clark, treasurer of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn., is at East Jordan, Charlevoix county, Michigan, arranging for the erection of a seed warehouse. It is expected to have it ready for the reception of the 1906 crop by September 1.

AT the meeting of the Western Pickle Association at Chicago yesterday it was reported that the acreage in cucumbers is only half that of last year. As the decrease with seventy-six packers is 10,147 acres, it accounts to a great extent for the quantities of seeds for which there was no call.

THIS is the time of the year when nobody knows anything about crop prospects. There is a dullness all along the line. Those interested as growers are figuring on going on tours of inspection and expect to get an idea of things after a bit of travel. Each, however, is optimistic that his crops are doing better than the other man's.

ARTHUR H. LUCK leaves the Iowa Seed Co. July 15 to take the management of the seed department of the German Nurseries at Beatrice, Neb.

WALDO ROHNERT, of Gilroy, Cal., spent a few days at Chicago on his way back from the convention. As the only representative of the California growers, he was a welcome visitor.

THE Texas Seed and Floral Co., Dallas, Tex., R. Nicholson, secretary and manager, has sold the greenhouse end of the business to E. S. Perryman, who was formerly interested in the company. The plan is to extend the catalogue seed department.

HOT weather is reported in the California seed-growing districts.

MRS. ROBERT BUIST, wife of the Philadelphia seedsman, died July 2.

CARL PLETT, of the Leonard Seed Co.'s West Market store, Chicago, is to be married at Los Angeles, Cal., July 18.

A JULY frost is reported from the pea-growing section in the vicinity of Petoskey and Cheboygan, Mich. No harm to peas is likely to result from it.

WORD comes from Bermuda that the crop of Harrisii is likely to turn out lighter than was expected, especially on the larger sizes.

Hasslach & Roumanille, St. Remy de Provence, France, are introducing Solanum Commersonii Violet.

Rochester seed houses report the bulb season opening better than last year and fall orders coming in better than usual.

The Pacific Seed Growers' Co. and the Cox Seed Co., which were burned out in the San Francisco disaster, have re-established city headquarters at 2077 Sutter street.

At the onion set centers they are predicting a short crop on account of the dry weather, which experience has shown produces an excellent quality but of too small size to "bushel up" well.

Seed houses which are large handlers of bulbs report that approximately fifty per cent of their orders for bulbs for fall delivery in San Francisco have been canceled since the disaster.

The market for Paper Whites and French Romans is holding steady but not advancing. The French syndicate seems to have heeded those who say it would be impolitic to continue the advance of the past two or three years.

Sutton & Sons, the well known seedsmen of Reading, England, announce that on May 1 Phillips F. Sutton, second son of the senior partner, joined the firm, which now consists of Martin J. Sutton, Arthur W. Sutton, Leonard Sutton, Martin H. Sutton and Phillips F. Sutton.

A Chicago concern has been debarred from the use of the mails because it advertised a preparation by the use of which vineless potatoes could be grown in the bin. A large business was being done with the credulous before the issuance of the fraud order, July 3.

Advices from central New York are to the effect that the pea crop for canning is so irregular that it is impossible to give any estimate of its probable size. About Utica the crop is very poor, further west it is better, while in the extreme western portion of the state it promises a good output. But even in the best sections there are fields that are almost a failure, while where the crop is poorest there is occasionally found a field of excellent promise.

Henry W. Wood.

HENRY W. WOOD.

Henry W. Wood's active connection with the seed business dates back to the year 1879, at which time his father, the late T. W. Wood, founded the present business of T. W. Wood & Sons, at Richmond, Va. T. W. Wood continued as the head of the firm up to the time of his death, last year, but during the latter years of his life had practically given over the active management of the business to his sons.

From the very incipiency of this business, Henry W. Wood has always been actively engaged in it. In fact, the business was originally started from the desire of Henry W. Wood in his boyhood days to learn and follow the seed business for an occupation. T. W. Wood having been engaged in the grain and seed business in England, and, after coming to this country, having engaged in farming, the experience obtained in this way gave a most excellent foundation for the starting of the present business.

Henry W. Wood has always taken an active part in agricultural and business affairs, and was for two years president of the Virginia State Agricultural Society, conducting while in office a most successful ten-days' exposition. He is at present a member of the board of directors of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, also a member of the Richmond Grain and Cotton Exchange. He has been quite active in all matters pertaining to the interests of the seed trade, the firm of T. W. Wood & Sons having joined the American Seed Trade Association almost at its beginning. He is a member of the board of directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, and took quite an active part in the campaign which was carried on against the free seed distribution during the last year.

Mr. Wood is now at the head of the firm of T. W. Wood & Sons. The catalogues and advertising of T. W. Wood & Sons have for the last eighteen years been prepared by him or under his immediate supervision, and the catalogues published by this firm have long been noted for the clear, practical information which they give in regard to the culture and uses both of vegetables and farm crops.

SEEDS IN THE YEARBOOK.

To the seedsman the Yearbook of the department of agriculture is always of considerable interest. This year the contribution to which the trade will turn is the paper by A. J. Pieters on "The Business of Seed and Plant Introduction and Distribution." It occupies sixteen pages of the 815 in the book. Mr. Pieters says of congressional free seeds:

"In 1839 congress appropriated $1,000 to be used by the commissioner of patents in collecting agricultural statistics and for the purchase of seeds of new and rare varieties of plants. This was the first appropriation providing for a work, which during the fiscal year 1906 requires an appropriation of $290,000.

"With the increase in the number of packages annually assigned to senators, representatives, and delegates in congress, it became increasingly difficult to obtain seeds of new varieties in sufficient quantities, and to a greater and greater extent those of standard varieties were substituted.

"The distribution of vegetable and flower seeds on congressional orders now is the largest single business this office has to handle. The total number of packets put up and mailed during the fiscal year 1905 was 35,773,400. These were assembled into packages of five packets each, making 7,110,680 packages. The seed purchased to fill all these packets was enough to fill twenty-eight cars of 30,000 pounds per car. The work of packeting begins about November 1 of each year and is completed before the end of the April following, the greater part of the work being done in a little more than four and a half months of this period. If we consider the work to extend over six months 500 packets are put up every minute of every working day of eight hours during that time. During much of the time as many as 1,000 packets per minute are put up.

"The secretary of agriculture has pointed out that, while it is his duty to carry on the distribution in accordance with the wishes of congress, the money expended for vegetables and flower seeds could probably be more profitably used for the introduction of new and rare seeds, such as grains, forage crops, cotton, tobacco, and the like. The large quantities of seed needed make it impossible to use the rare varieties, even if there were a sufficient number of new and valuable varieties of vegetable seeds each year to fill the requirements. The number of really new and desirable varieties of vegetables that appear each year is extremely small, and the seedsmen of today are so thoroughly awake to the importance of introducing novelties that any new variety quickly finds its way to the trade.

"It is only the standard varieties of vegetable and flower seeds, therefore, that can be used in the general free distribution. These are in more or less regular supply in the trade, and while the stocks vary in quality it is not difficult for those who understand the business, and who know the sources of supply to secure each year first-class seeds at reasonable prices. This office aims to get seeds of the best value. This, of course, does not mean the cheapest seed, as every one knows that the value of vegetable seed is not measured solely by the price. Vitality and trueness to type, or purity of stock, are of the utmost importance, and of these the latter can be determined only by a field inspection. Experts must therefore be employed who know the general character of each grower's stock, and part of whose business it is to visit the principal growers at least once each year to keep posted on their work and on the quality of their stock. The objects kept in view are (1) to obtain good seeds—as good as those sold by the best mail-trade houses (though they are no better, since the seeds are bought mostly from the growers who supply the seed trade); and (2) to get these seeds at the best prices.

"The seed needed is secured in one of two ways: (1) It is bought outright, the seeds being on hand at the time of purchase, or (2) it is contracted for, the department agreeing to pay a fixed sum for all seed of satisfactory quality delivered up to a given amount. All seeds offered are considered by a special committee, which consults with the seed experts of the bureau of plant industry, and recommends purchases in accordance with the following considerations:

(1) The known quality of the stocks offered.

(2) The reputation of the firm making the offer.

(3) The price, calculated upon delivery at Washington, D. C.

"The price, though important, is never the first consideration; good seeds must be secured at a fair price, and 'the best value' is the watchword in the work. The packeting of the seed is done by contract.

"In order to have first-hand information about the quality of the seed used for congressional distribution, to keep up with the times in the matter of new varieties, and to do something toward systematizing the knowledge of American vegetables, trial grounds are maintained at the Arlington Farm and on the Potomac Flats, near Washington, and annual trials are conducted at various places in the United States. All of this work is under the direction of W. W. Tracy, Sr., whose long experience at the head of a large commercial trial-ground, and whose intimate knowledge of vegetable varieties especially qualify him for this work. At the Arlington Farm tests are made of samples of all lots of vegetable seeds distributed through congressional orders. Here also the principal new varieties offered by seedsmen each year are tested.

"Besides the tests at Arlington, the trialground work looking to the preparation of standard descriptions of all the recognized vegetable varieties is carried on at a number of places in the United States. Several hundred samples are planted on each of these tracts, so that the effect of different soil and climate may be noted for each variety. Careful notes are kept on these tests, and from the field descriptions that are made it is purposed to issue standard descriptions of all the recognized varieties as soon as possible. It is hoped that these bulletins may become useful handbooks for the seedsmen, especially for such as cannot well conduct extensive trialgrounds, and that in course of time the catalogue descriptions may be more unified than is the case at present."

FRENCH SEED CROPS.

After the long period of rainy weather which we had here (and in most European countries, as I hear), at the third week of June we are now enjoying bright sun, such as we have not been seeing for a long time. The result is that the soil has become so dry all of a sudden, that farmers are now anxiously waiting for some rain. Most biennial plants were planted some time ago, in a pitiable condition, being so very small and tiny that the question was whether or not they would get on. Besides, they were stuck into a wet, badly prepared soil, in which they could not possibly find any strength at all. The sudden change in the weather, becoming so very hot and dry, terribly affected those young plants, which were either burnt down or forced to shoot up quickly to seed. We may easily realize that under such circumstances they will produce but a very small quantity of seeds.

Such is the case this season for swedes, turnips, carrots, beets, mangels, etc. Of course this will be no great inconvenience as regards swedes and turnips, of which there are still such large stocks in warehouses. On the contrary it will be to the benefit of both dealer and farmer, as it will lower the stocks and cause a certain advance in prices this year or next, and we all well know the rise in price is much needed by the farmers, who have now to grow these articles at such a low price that there cannot be any living for them under the circumstances.

I believe beets suffered mostly, and it is a great pity to see such small plants of beets in the fields, which have already shot up. Certainly the crop will be worse this year than it has been for a long time, and consequently a good rise in price is inevitable. Mangels are not looking well, either, but there was such a larger acreage planted that it would not be easy now to say what they will do later on.

Cabbages came out the best of all, as it looks, although a good many of them perished through the winter, and some others badly shot up to seed in some districts; the crop will not be so bad after all.

Onions have kept very small; they did not develop properly and a good many lots suffered last March in earth on account of long standing wet weather, and the stalks have become yellowish. Owing to the extraordinary high prices of last season, I think that, even if the plants get on nicely and do not get broken down by hail or storm, etc., the fall in price of onion seeds will not be so great as it was first expected from the large acreages planted.

Parsnips and parsley do not look bad for the present.

Cabbage lettuces and cos lettuces have just lately been transplanted under very good weather conditions.

Radishes are quite a failure with us. Firstly the acreage planted was awfully small, then the prices paid to the growers was much higher than usual, so that no doubt we may reckon upon a big advance in prices.

Mignonette, nasturtiums, etc., suffered terribly from hot weather, and a good many lots could not even be sown owing to drought. Sweet peas, which have to be sown already in March, on the contrary had to stand a fearfully wet period, which hurt them terribly, so only a very poor crop is to be expected this year.—Horticultural Advertiser.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

With the beginning of July summer has begun in earnest. While there is a little business doing all of the time, it is just about enough to keep the boys awake. Funeral work is our only chance and there is not much of that. The weather is hot, to say the least, and so the quality of the stock that is to be had is not the best. Beauties are holding out better than any other of the indoor-grown flowers, and they are nothing to speak of; still they are selling well and at fairly good prices. Other roses are not doing quite so well, but the quality is so poor in most cases that it is not to be expected. White roses do best, and some pretty good ones are to be seen now and then. Red roses are about out of the market. Some fine sweet peas from the field are coming in now and they sell out well. White and lavender have the call. Gladioli are not very plentiful as yet. More could be disposed of to advantage. This market is now pretty well supplied with the usual run of outdoor flowers for funeral work.

Various Notes.

While the wholesale and retail florists are putting their business into shape to take their vacations, the growers are hard at work changing the soil in their houses and replanting. This is the hardest season of the year for them, and with the hot weather we are having now the job is pretty trying. Many of the boys already have their carnations planted, that is, those that were grown in pots, and they are doing first-class. Owing to the many rains that we have been having carnations in the field are doing fine this year, and with a continuation of the rains the plants will be good.

Tickets are out for the florists' outing, and arrangements are completed for the program, which if carried out as it is intended will provide a fine time for all. Ben George is hustling to get everything into shape and now all that is needed to make our outing a success is a good day. The chances are that we will have that.

It is probable that the committee will select the C. H. & D. R. R. as the official road to the S. A. F. convention at Dayton. The committee is not quite ready to make the announcement as yet, but everything will be shaped out this week. Many inquiries are being received by the committee from persons wishing to join the Cincinnati delegation. As soon as definite arrangements are made all of these will be notified of all particulars. An invitation is extended to all who can to join our party. We expect to have at least 100 people and it will make a jolly good crowd.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Society will be held in the club room Saturday, July 14, at 8 p. m. It will be a very interesting meeting, as many subjects of interest will come up.

The newly elected officers will be installed. The new year finds the society in first-class shape in every respect and a very prosperous and beneficial year is looked forward to.

Gus Meier, of the firm of Sunderbruch & Meier, is now on the ocean journeying toward Germany, where he was born. He will be gone a couple of months.

Charles Hoffmeister, who is now with William Dittmann, of New Castle, Ind., was home on a short visit.

HYDRANGEAS FOR SUMMER BLOOMING :::

WE have a magnificent lot of Hydrangea Otaksa grown especially for July and August Flowering. Plants are just coming into bloom, just beginning to show color, and will be in perfection during July and August, when they are in great demand at watering places and other summer resorts. There is nothing showier or more satisfactory for lawn decoration. We make a specialty of them, and find an increasing demand for them from year to year. They can be shipped anywhere safely by freight. Large plants in tubs, $2.00 and $3.00 each, according to size; very large specimens in half-barrels, $5.00 and $7.50 each.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Though business is dull there is a great scarcity of roses and carnations when these flowers are required in any quantity. The local growers are throwing out many old rose plants in the process of replanting, and though carnations have not all been thrown out, most of them have been damaged by heat. American Beauties, from as far north as Tarrytown, N. Y., are on the market in small quantities. Several local growers continue to send in very good stock of La France.

It has dawned on several growers here that the Killarney is a good rose both for summer and winter, and there are indications that it will, in the future, be extensively grown here. Among the growers who have taken it up are the Gude Brothers Co., A. B. Garden and George Field.

Various Notes.

W. F. Gude has returned from Philadelphia, where on the evening of July 6 he was a guest at the banquet given by the Philadelphia Florists' Club in honor of Mr. Dickson, of Belfast, Ireland. It will be recalled that the Killarney rose originated with the Dicksons. Mr. Gude thoroughly enjoyed the hospitality of the Quakers, and believes with many others here in Washington that anybody who calls Philadelphia slow should be prosecuted for libel.

Both J. L. Carberry and Harry Summers have been drawn as jurors in Judge Kimball's court. That is a better July job than filling greenhouse benches.

The chairman of the outing committee would like to have all of the return postals in by July 20; and please state how many friends you will bring. Tickets for the banquet can be procured at any of the retail stores. There is a good time in store, so don't fail to be present. SCOTTY.

MOLINE, ILL.

Members of the Tri-City Florists' Association of Moline, Rock Island and Davenport, Ia., their families and invited friends, held their annual picnic on the north bank of the Rock river, a half mile from the Watch Tower, on June 28. About sixty members and invited guests were present, and in spite of the torrid weather, the day was heartily enjoyed by all.

The annual quoits contest developed keen rivalry between the three cities. Messrs. Temple and Pauli were entered for Davenport, Messrs. Staff and Gaethje for Rock Island and Messrs. Staack and Knees for Moline, and the umpire was Mr. Boehm of Davenport. The quoit men from Davenport were victorious, Moline came second and Rock Island was last. There is a chance that Rock Island will protest the decision, as the pins mysteriously disappeared when Messrs. Staff and Gaethje were getting ready to win the event.

Messrs. Pauli, Knees and Gaethje were the entries in the running race, and again the Iowa representative carried off the honors. Davenport also captured the boys' and girls' races, and the fat men's race. Colonel Gaethje, of Rock Island, made a sensational slide for the tape in the last event, and came out of the cloud of dust minus a large patch on (or off) his nose.

The baseball game and the sleight-of-hand work of Mr. Boehm, of Davenport, were other events adding to the interest in the program. Refreshments were served during the day, dinner at 12:30, ice cream and cake at 3:30, and supper at 6 o'clock, and a dance was held in the evening.

The next regular meeting of the association will be held with Henry Pauli in Davenport, July 12.

PACIFIC COAST.

PACIFIC COAST BULB MARKET.

From several of the growers of Dutch bulbs for flowers, and from a few dealers as well, I have heard that there will be but comparatively few hyacinths, tulips, daffodils and other stock of that class used in this portion of California during the coming season. Our wholesale jobbers were so completely burned out that they have cancelled their foreign orders, and the growers have figured that it will be too much of a gamble to spend money for the bulbs when there may be little or no demand for the flowers. They argue that in the best of times there is but little money to be made from hyacinths, tulips, etc., as they are used principally as a means to fill in when the other crops are not blooming very well, or during excessively dark weather, when it is not possible to get a good supply of other flowers. It seems to be a general opinion that there will be no shortage whatever during the coming season, and that buying bulbs will be a waste of good money.

There is really little to encourage the planting of bulbs for forcing under any conditions, when the miserable prices that have been received by the growers during the past two seasons are taken into consideration. With the possible exception of valley, prices have been away down below par.

The fickle taste of the public is to blame, of course, but the dear public, unfortunately for the grower, does not take him into its confidence until it is too late, and much unprofitable stock is handled in consequence.

Dutch hyacinths have been a positive drug on the market for several seasons. Roman hyacinths are not profitable to handle for the florist in most instances, and it is only when a particular order for a wedding bouquet is received for this particular flower that a good price can be charged. Ordinarily they are used in funeral designs with a mixture of other flowers. But as I mentioned before, they help the grower out when he is short of other stock and they make his visit to the retailer at least worth his while.

Tulips, unless some very early or very late sorts, have not proven to be money makers for the last two seasons. The same fickle public of which I spoke before decided that it did not care for them, and so that ended it. Unfortunately they are flowers that cannot be used to advantage in funeral work, and only in a few instances are they suitable for other kinds of work.

The country here is overflowing with narcissi. They multiply so rapidly, flower so easily and require so little attention, that they are always found in some out-of-the-way patch or in some neglected field. They are used in enormous quantities during their season, but the price for them has been so low that no one pretended to grow them for profit. About the same can be said of daffodils and jonquils. A few very early sorts are forced, but ordinarily they hardly pay for the handling, the country being flooded with them during their season.

Easter lilies paid very well for the last season to all growers who had them for Easter, which was just before our big fire. Those who were unfortunate enough to be a week or two late lost considerable money; this may be all changed, however, in another season.

Valley is usually a good paying crop, and although this fact has not been the rule for the last few months, under other conditions it is quite remunerative. I have met several growers who will plant valley extensively, as well as Lilium Harrisii and Lilium longiflorum, but of the other lines of bulbs I have mentioned there will be but few plantings made.

For garden planting, should there be much demand, there will be but little stock here. It is claimed by our largest dealers, however, that the noticeable falling off in the demand for the flowers is equalled by the limited demand for garden bulbs, especially noticeable last season. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There are at present fifty per cent more stores in proportion to the population of San Francisco than formerly, but already signs of improvement can be noticed in the trade. For the first few weeks there was absolutely nothing doing except funeral orders, but recently there has been quite a demand for colored stock of all kinds. This has the appearance of more healthful times and it is possible that there will be considerable business done here in the near future.

Stock of all kinds with the possible exception of fancy roses is plentiful, and the prices are even lower than those recorded last month. There is a slight exception also in fancy carnations, some of which net the growers $2 per hundred.

Peas are very plentiful, but owing to the fact that the demand has been limited, the growers have not given them much moisture and the stems are short. The ruling price for the last month has been 50 cents per dozen bunches.

Asparagus and maidenhair are in fair demand, also all other kinds of hardy greens. The orchid growers have suffered more in proportion than any of the other dealers, but it is to be hoped that a demand will soon be created for their stock.

In Oakland there is little change in affairs. Business continues to be quiet, but is a little better than it was last year at the same time.

Various Notes.

E. Sanborn has leased the Dwight Way Nurseries in Berkeley for a term of years. He will operate them in connection with his Telegraph avenue store.

John Young has retired from the growing business for the present, but expects to open up in a new location in the near future.

Frank Pelicano reports a very satisfactory shipping season. He has had the pleasure of carrying a majority of his old trade to his new location.

The Holland Nursery Co. will force a large quantity of valley for the coming season's trade. This firm makes a specialty of this article.

The earthquake and fire have not interfered to any extent with the houses of P. J. Meyer & Co., at Burlingame. This place is under the able management of Thos. Breen, and a splendid show of stock can be seen there at any time.

F. Ludemann, of the Pacific Nursery, will import largely of Japanese stock for the winter trade. He has just published a price list for the trade.

James Niven, gardener to John Martin, has recently completed a two-acre lake on his grounds. It will be planted with choice aquatics, and will form a welcome addition to the grounds.

A. D. Noble has returned from Los Angeles, where he went with the intention of interesting himself in the purchase of a floral establishment. He did not make arrangements and his present intention is to open in town.

Thos. Stevenson has returned from a two months' trip to the eastern states.

P. J. Hauswirth and wife started for Chicago June 22, by way of Santa Cruz and Los Angeles.

PEKIN, ILL.—George A. Kuhl, Mrs. Kuhl and their son have gone to Colorado for a few weeks.

CORRY, PA.—George Patterson and Howard Whiteley are building a greenhouse across the street from the latter's residence on Columbus avenue.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE season's peony price lists indicate that several growers are well stocked on Festiva maxima.

THE statisticians have figured out that the railroads of the United States use 80,051,000 cross-ties each year.

THE Flushing Nurseries, Flushing, N. Y., have been incorporated with $1,000 capital stock, the incorporators being T. P. Lawlor and P. H. Lawlor, of Flushing, and L. R. Lawlor, Brooklyn.

THE Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., says that every season it receives a number of inquiries as to the Stringfellow method of pruning and some few try it, but not enough to show that the practice of cane planting is gaining converts.

THE Nebraska State Horticultural Society is in session at Omaha this week. The officers are: President, J. H. Hadkinson, Benson; first vice-president, H. S. Harrison, York; second vice-president, C. H. Green, Fremont; treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva; secretary, L. M. Russell, Lincoln.

THE first steamship service ever operated exclusively for the exportation of American apples is being arranged for by Harry M. Isaacs, of a firm of fruit importers of London. The ships, which will ply between Boston and London and Hull, will sail every two weeks and will have a capacity of 20,000 barrels.

THE executive committee of the American Apple Growers' Congress has decided to hold the fourth annual meeting of that body at St. Louis August 14 and 15 and has issued a call to that effect. An arrangement has also been made for an excursion for the members over the Frisco railroad from St. Louis to the apple-growing country of the Ozarks.

The officers of the nurserymen's association are: E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, president; B. L. Adams, Bonham, vice-president; John S. Kerr, Sherman, secretary and treasurer.

HEATING SMALL HOUSES.

I wish to ask you for information about heating a house 14½x20 feet, sides three and one-half feet, ridge eight feet, three benches, two walks, to grow miscellaneous stock. The lowest temperature has been 13 degrees below zero, and there are only a few days when we need to heat in daytime during winter. I heated the house with one air-tight heater placed in the center below the surface of the ground. What size of boiler, and size and number of pipes, will be required? How deep should the boiler be placed, and how shall I arrange the pipes? I intend later to add another house the same size. E. F.

A small, upright heater, like the Wilks, rated to care for 150 to 200 feet of radiation, will be ample for this house. A 2-inch flow carried under the ridge to the far end of the house and returning by eight 1¼-inch pipes should be sufficient to heat this house amply in your climate. L. C. C.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business is quiet in the cut flower line, and a call at the stores in both cities finds the clerks attending to business, while the proprietor may be away fishing or enjoying some other recreation. Funeral work with the largest dealers has been active.

Stock of everything, with the possible exception of outdoor flowers, is scarce. Roses are particularly scarce and it is sometimes hard to fill orders; the demand is not at all heavy, but so few are being cut that a good day now and then cleans up the rose market in good shape. Carnations are also scarce and what we are getting are small and inferior. Prices are fair. Roses are selling for $1.50 per dozen, carnations at from 25 cents to 75 cents per dozen. Sweet peas are plentiful and are sold at 50 cents per bunch of twenty-five. Green stuff is in good supply. Wild and fancy ferns are marketed in large quantities, and are used to work up in designs. Street dealers are doing a good business in fern plants.

St. Paul.

August Vogt says trade is quiet. As he is located in the residence district, he no doubt feels the slump, his customers being all at the lakes.

C. F. Vogt reports a good trade in the funeral work line, but says the sale of roses is small; outdoor flowers sell to good advantage.

Otto Hiersekorn is not worrying about business. He says he has enjoyed a good season's business, and is willing to rest for the next sixty days.

Holm & Olson are pushing the fitting up of their new store. It will be one of the largest flower stores in the country, if not the largest one.

The Swanson Floral Co. is doing well. The peonies they cut this spring were the finest seen in this locality.

The florists have decided to hold their annual picnic at Shakopee, July 21, 1906. They have engaged a steamboat for the occasion. Prizes will be given for the winners of different races, and a good program has been arranged. All twin city florists are cordially invited.

Minneapolis.

Rice Bros., wholesale florists, are satisfied with their season's work. Trade is now quiet with them.

Miss Whitted is doing nicely in her new place and is well pleased with the change. Her store is now one of the finest in the city.

The New York Florist continues to handle large numbers of carnations, but no roses to speak of.

The department stores, including Donaldsons' and the Powers Mercantile Co., report good sales, principally on Saturday. Felix.

Red Wing, Minn.—Trade is slow, although funeral work is reported good by the Humphrey Floral Store. This store does much outside work, besides a large business in vegetables. J. A. Schunk, the former owner of this place, sold to Mrs. Sarah P. Humphrey, and will leave for the west in a short time. The Sten Floral Co. reports trade good in plants and in a wholesale way. The state institution grounds present a very neat appearance and reflect credit on Mr. Larson.

DAYTON, OHIO.

Convention Notes.

Everything is progressing finely. All local arrangements are so far completed. Every committee has been attending to duties and every one is alive to his responsibility, to greet all visitors as well as he knows how. The superintendent's report of exhibitions shows up fine as far as exhibitors are concerned. Some of the larger firms have done nobly, but we regret that the large wholesale houses that should take advertising signs, have not so far responded. The letter of the firm of Bassett & Washburn was refreshing, with a check for $50 for a sign and the statement that "it is every florist's duty to help this convention along." Only a few more of such Bassetts and Washburns and the local club will not have to worry how to make both ends meet.

All concessions are given free of charge and the club has only one point in view, and that is to treat all visitors gloriously. Even the souvenir program was left to the private enterprise of J. Austin Shaw and Harry Altick, so nothing is coming from this source.

It is everybody's desire to make this the banner convention. So far nothing is heard of landscape gardeners or plans of enterprising firms and young men of push. The Dayton Florist's Club will see that liberal prizes are offered for such work. Furthermore there is need of electric signs of leading firms on the outside grounds. Such can be offered at reasonable cost. Wake up, gentlemen, this is a national convention. All eyes are centered for the time being on Dayton, Ohio. You owe it to yourself, to your business, to the whole country, to show the world what our peerless art does for mankind. H. M. FRANK.

OMAHA.

The Nebraska State Horticultural Society is in session this week Wednesday and Thursday at Hanscom park pavilion. Thursday afternoon, July 12, is florists' day, the program being entirely given over to the interests of greenhouse owners. Ed. Williams, Grand Island, of the firm of Brewster & Williams, is down for an address on "Bedding Plants and Planting Beds." Irwin Frey, of Frey & Frey, Lincoln, is assigned the topic, "The Ideal Carnation." John Bath, of this city, who is store manager for A. Donaghue, will offer some suggestions on "The Care of Cut Flowers." "Roses" is the topic assigned M. Stauch, foreman for J. F. Wilcox, at Council Bluffs. It promises to be an especially interesting session and draw the attendance of practically all the florists in this section of the country.

TOPEKA.

J. E. Rodman, one of Topeka's old-time florists, is rebuilding his greenhouse plant this summer. Mr. Rodman is one of the oldest florists in the city, not in years of age, but speaking from a business standpoint. While his hair is just a little scarce on the dome, yet Al. still considers himself one of the boys. His first experience in the florist business was as an employee of the old Paul M. Pierson Co., before Mr. Pierson sold out here and went to New York. He later bought Pierson out and went into business for himself. He has a very attractive little store on the main street and enjoys a good business. He does the landscape work for the Union Pacific R. R. in this territory. He took the contract this spring for the landscape work at the new state printing plant, where he will use over 3,000 bedding plants.

James Hayes has his carnations all planted in the benches. He believes in early planting, and the results he obtains certainly justify his belief. Under the able foremanship of Al. Murray everything is doing finely.

One of the local florists recently bought the crop of daisies on the old daisy farm south of town in the attempt to corner the market on this rare flower. The florists here have depended on this farm for their daisies in former years, but as none of them have failed we will hope that the "daisy trust" had no disastrous effects.

C. E. Hubbard had a splendid trade this spring. He has built up a splendid reputation as a seedsman, and from present indications will be equally as popular as a florist.

We are glad to note that Hiram Hulse is still in business, having failed to dispose of his place. There would be a vacancy in the trade ranks here that would be hard to fill if "Uncle Hiram" should drop out. MUM.

LINCOLN, NEB.—J. K. Hiltner has erected a range of five 50-foot houses.

CLINTON, MO.—On account of poor health, M. L. Bonham has discontinued his business here.

TOPEKA, KAN.—Oscar Roehr has a new seedling canna of the Crozy type, remarkable for its large flowers. He purposes naming it Topeka.

SPRINGFIELD, MO. — Mrs. Rudolph Koeppen is building a large new house, to be used for roses and carnations. Three smaller houses have been removed to make room for the addition.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS
FLORAL PARK, L. I., N. Y.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

July has been as slow as any one could wish, and it is just as well it is so, for outside of Beauties and Kaiserins there is nothing good to be had in roses, all other stock being very summery looking. The retailers are doing nothing outside of crapes and funeral decorations and the wholesale houses have a hard time to supply enough good stock for this. Carnations are scarce and very poor and asters will be welcomed when they arrive. The growers have all dropped asters as greenhouse flowers and we miss them very much this season; but for several years they would not bring a living price. There are quantities of shipped sweet peas coming in, and in nearly every case they arrive so soft and poor that most of them find their way to the garbage box.

Various Notes.

During the last week a number of the boys from the shops and wholesale houses have gone on their vacations, and this will continue from now on until all have had their annual two weeks' rest.

J. F. Poague, of Washington, Pa., has just returned from a two weeks' trip to Cincinnati, Ohio.

Miss A. L. Wells, of Steubenville, O., has returned after a six months' trip abroad.

Ed. Leitzmann, of Latrobe, Pa., sailed Monday on a trip to the old country.

J. N. Spanabel, of East Palestine, O., was a visitor last week.

Randolph & McClements will vacate their Schenley Park greenhouses about August 1, when that property will be used as a park entrance.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has arranged with Frank Banning to handle his cut of gladioli in this city; this will include his Reuben H. Warde.

Miss Clara B. Forbes, who has been managing the Wheeling Greenhouse Co.'s store in Wheeling, has severed her connection with that firm and is now making arrangements to open a new flower shop there. It will be up-to-date in every respect. Miss Forbes is one of the energetic people, who never fails to succeed in anything she takes hold of, and her many friends are wishing her her usual success in the new venture.

The annual outing of the club took place July 10. It was the usual boat excursion and everybody had a good time.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. WATCH US GROW

Think of Aschmann, the Great Araucaria Importer of America, before buying elsewhere. Araucaria Excelsa, the pet of all decorative plants that nature produced, our specialty. Now perfectly recovered from their sea voyage, well established, growing in pots, ready to ship to all parts of America.

These everlasting green foliaged pot plants are growing more in favor by the tasteful plant buyers of this land from year to year. Please watch the growth of our importation during the last 11 years; first year 100, second 250, third 500, fourth 1000, fifth 2000. This year (1906) which is the 11th anniversary of our first importation, our spring importation amounted to 6,000. All these are grown for us under contract by an Araucaria specialist in Belgium. I must say for the benefit of my customers that they were never before so nice and large for the money as this year. I herewith quote you special prices on these.

Araucaria Excelsa, 12 to 14 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 50c. 14 to 16 inches high, 5½ in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs old, 60c. 16 to 18 inches high, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 yrs. old, 75c. 18 to 20 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.00. 20 to 24 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old. $1.25. 36 to 50 inches high, specimens, 7-in. pots, 6 yrs. old, $2.50 to $3.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, have 1000 of them. Never were they as nice as this year. Plants are as broad as long, from 12 to 20 inches in height, 3 to 4 perfect tiers, 20 to 30 inches across from tip of one tier to the other, 3, 4 and 5 yrs. old. 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00, up to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and size, their beautiful greenish blue tiers give them such a striking appearance, that anyone seeing them must fall in love with them on sight. Plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, 3, 4, 5 perfect tiers, 15 to 25 inches in height, from 15 to 30 inches across, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each. Please bear in mind that the above mentioned varieties are the cream of Belgium's productions. We have thousands of them and can meet all demands.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, 1 large one in center, 3 smaller sizes, 22 to 25 ins. high around, $2.00 each; 6-in. pots, single plants, 35 to 40 ins. high, 5 to 6 good leaves, 4-year-old, $1.25 to $1.50 each; 30 to 35 ins. high, 4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 5 good leaves, $1.00 each; 25 to 30 ins. high, 5½-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 leaves, 75c; made-up plants with 3, 18 to 20 ins. high, 25c to 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 6-in. pots, 4-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, bushy, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.25; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, 75c to $1.00 each. These are the sizes entered in the customs house.

Cocos Weddelliana, 15c.
Jerusalem Cherries or Solanums, same varieties we sell at Xmas for 75c, $1.00 each; 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.
Ficus Elastica (Belgian importation), 4-in. pots, 25c.
Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up with 3 plants in a pot, 25c.
Cycas Revoluta, sago palms, 6 to 7-in. pots, 7 to 20 leaves to the plant, 10c per leaf.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

HEATING ARRANGEMENTS.

Will you kindly tell me how many rows of 1¼-inch or 1½-inch pipe it will take to heat a greenhouse 20x75 feet, inside temperature to be 52 degrees when it is below zero outside? The house is ten feet to the ridge with 4½-foot sides, no glass in the sides; steam heat to be used. J. W. S.

If hot water is to be used to supply the heat for the house in question, 20x75 feet, it will require a 2½-inch supply pipe and fifteen 1¼-inch returns; or if 1½-inch pipes are used thirteen returns will be required. L. C. C.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Exterminating Ants.

I see some inquiry about killing ants. I find the best plan is to put a small amount of powdered cyanide of potassium over the hole. It kills the ants when they remove it. For large ant hills outdoors I use the granulated form. A fourth of a teaspoonful will clean out almost any nest. A. GARDNER.

SOLLYA DRUMMONDI.

A very pleasing and most uncommon feature at the recent Temple show, in London, was a small group of this pretty little twining plant, thickly studded with blossoms. The specimens composing this group had taken possession of some small branches stuck in the pots, and had been allowed to grow in quite an informal manner. The small bright bluebell-shaped flowers were sufficiently numerous to make a goodly show, and many times was the question asked, What plant is that? Although comparatively unknown, the two recognized species, S. Drummondi (or parviflora) and S. heterophylla, were both introduced in the first half of the last century. The genus sollya is limited to Australia, and consequently requires the protection of a greenhouse in most parts of these islands. The Australian bluebell climber, as the sollya is popularly termed, is a charming subject for training to roof or pillar in the greenhouse, as its slender, wiry shoots, clothed with narrow leaves, have a light and elegant appearance, and when thickly studded with its small bell-like flowers of a beautiful gentian blue, there is nothing else with which it can be compared. It grows well in ordinary potting compost.—Gardeners' Magazine.

...THE...
Chrysanthemum
By Arthur Herrington
Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

Weather conditions are the best—bright, warm sunshine, with just enough air stirring to keep from being uncomfortable. Stock plants are coming along finely, especially carnations and mums, which seem to thrive in this climate. In a trip of several days duration, I have had an opportunity to study conditions closely, and my impression is that much better success could be secured by a closer application to details, together with a study of prevailing conditions, which in my opinon can be easily overcome.

The soil is the most productive I have ever had the good fortune to encounter, crops coming up with little if any attention. This being the case, the habit of leaving the soil in its natural state, without any fertilizer, year after year, trusting too much in the soil renewing itself, brings with it the inevitable result, a gradual decline in its productiveness.

Those places which I have seen so far, where the gardener, or planter, scattered the manure over the ground, in place of hauling it to fill up some ditch or gully in the road, are easily distinguishable from the lands of the gardener, who "lets well enough alone," by the large crops raised. The same conditions are noticeable in our line.

Taking a flying trip to McKinney, the county seat of Collin county, your correspondent visited G. Taylor, of that place. Mr. Taylor has been very unfortunate lately, having a sick wife, and only a few days before I visited him, a cloudburst almost inundated his place. Mr. Taylor is an affable gentleman, and I was glad that I became acquainted with him.

The Texas Nursery Co. is busy erecting a new house, and when it is finished this firm will have one of the best plants in this section. Narcissus.

Hamilton, Ont.—McLeod Bros. are rapidly rebuilding after the demolition of their place in the recent cyclone. They are putting the houses in much better shape than before. The Webster Floral Co. is also making repairs and improvements.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

At the call of several concerns among whom the matter has been quietly discussed for some time past, a meeting was held Monday evening, July 2, in the offices of the Good & Reese Co., for the purpose of organizing an association of florists. The following concerns were represented: P. J. Agnew, American Rose & Plant Co., B. C. Blake & Son, Callander Cactus Co., Ferncliff Floral Co., Good & Reese Co., Leedle Floral Co., McGregor Bros. Co., George H. Mellen Co., Chas. Unglaub, Chas. M. Niuffer, Springfield Floral Co., Schmidt & Botley, Highland Floral Co. and Harry C. Reeser, all of this city; also R. H. Murphy & Son and the Reeser Floral Co., of Urbana, and the Fairview Floral Co., of Beatty. At this meeting John M. Good was elected temporary chairman and Chas. W. Schmidt secretary.

After an informal discussion indicating general favor toward the project of forming a florists' club, a committee on constitution and by-laws was appointed, consisting of Chas. C. Leedle, C. W. Schmidt and Leman Bradford. Committees on membership and nominations were also appointed. The meeting then adjourned for two weeks, at the end of which each committee is expected to report.

Considering the importance of this locality in the growing and shipping of plants, and the prevailing good will among its florists, it seems strange that Springfield has thus far been without organization of any kind.

LOWELL, MASS.

James McManmon takes advantage of the large production and light demand to advertise Saturday sales of cut flowers, as follows:

"As I have thousands of them at this time of the year, I will sell for today only, fresh cut carnations and nice roses for one cent each. Call and take advantage of our surplus stock. Your gain, our loss. McManmon, 6 Prescott street, next to Page's Spa."

Dixon, Ill.—Most of the glass in the local greenhouses was broken by a recent hail-storm, some damage also being done to crops in the vicinity. Although the storm was short, hailstones an inch in diameter were numerous.

GREENHOUSE PAINT.

The Lord & Burnham Co. has made a long series of exhaustive experiments with painting in greenhouses for the purpose of finding a white lead and method of mixing it that will make it free from cracking and less liable to mildew or peel off.

It seems that in all pulp-ground lead, that is, ground in oil, there is an excess of moisture. This moisture causes it to peel. By kiln-drying the lead the Lord & Burnham Co. expels practically all the moisture. Then the lead is ground finer than the finest flour. This grinding makes it incorporate thoroughly and easily with the oil. This lead will then take twenty-five per cent more oil than other leads and for the same reason will go just that much farther.

All the oil used is first tank-settled for at least four months. This not only purifies the oil, but cures it in a way that increases its elasticity and binding powers.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Advance Preparation.

In reality there is no dull season for the carnation grower, unless it is in the matter of returns, and that is at about this time, when all attention can be given to future stock. Do not forget, however, to prepare a suitable place in which to grow next year's batch of young stock.

For many reasons this is an excellent time for this work. The carnation is not over-fond of fresh manure, nor is a young plant capable of doing its best on recently turned sod. Corn or some other strong growing farm crop can manage very well under this treatment, but the divine flower is of finer grain; so if the land you have in mind is in sod, by all means spread the manure and plow this summer. Frequent cultivation with a disc or cutaway harrow will put the soil in fine condition to receive a sowing of crimson clover or other cover crop, for under no circumstances leave the surface bare over winter.

Summer plowing and cultivation will destroy many cutworms, pests that have caused us much trouble in times past. The best remedy seems to be a mixture of bran, molasses and Paris green, in the proportion of 100 pounds bran, one pint molasses, one pound Paris green and enough water to moisten. Spread this mixture evenly over an acre of ground.

Perhaps you are growing some other crop on the location in question; if so, contrive to get in the seed of a cover crop at the last cultivation. We prefer crimson clover, as it grows fast in early spring, decays quickly when plowed under, and gives us nitrogen at low cost; if used on land having no crop the seed can be sown later than if the ground is occupied. The middle of July to the first part of August has given us the best results, the point being to sow at such time as will allow sufficient development for the clover to withstand winter but not to bloom in the fall.

Some growers are obliged to use the same piece of ground another year, and while this practice cannot be recommended, with extra care we need have little fear of results; this is more especially true since the plan of early housing has come into practice, the chance is offered to restore the soil more nearly to its original condition. Much depends on the health of the plants grown there this year, but in any event be extremely particular when through lifting to clear the field of all plants or parts thereof, healthy or otherwise, for if left to decay they only invite disease.

Plow as soon as the land is clear, apply a generous coat of air-slaked or pulverized lime, allowing the surface to remain rough; in a week or ten days apply manure, cross plow and treat as you would land in sod.

As before stated, this using the same piece of ground two years in succession is not in line with up-to-date carnation culture, but having been up against this proposition myself, the result of experience is passed along.

At the present time we are having ideal conditions for the growth of plants in the field—warm days and cool nights. If thorough cultivation has been kept up you ought to have a grand lot of plants to lift and that very soon.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

CYANIDE FUMIGATION.

Please state the amount of cyanide of potassium to use to safely fumigate a house of carnations for thrips, that is, state the quantity for 1,000 cubic feet of space. Should the cyanide be dropped into the sulphuric acid full strength or should the acid be diluted with water? Also please state the strength of a common salt solution in water, to use for spraying carnations for red spider.

H. F. C.

On page 461 in the issue of the REVIEW dated July 12, Mr. Scott (W. S.) gives a complete plan for fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas. In it you will find the proper quantity to use and the proper way to mix it. I do want to caution you to be careful that you do not breathe any of the gas. Arrange to let the cyanide into the jar from outside with a string run through a hole in the roof.

For syringing carnations with salt water dissolve a 6-inch pot of the common salt in ten gallons of water. I think you will find the soap solution more effective than salt, however. Don't spray too often with the salt water. Once in a week to ten days is often enough.

A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Housing the Plants.

If your houses are ready and the plants are of fair size, it is not at all too early to begin bringing them in, providing conditions are favorable. The plants should not only be of fair size, but they should be in that semi-hardened condition that they are apt to be in after a week or two of dry, bright weather. Some years ago we used to imagine that if a plant stood up crisp and full of sap, it was in proper condition to lift, providing it had rained within a few days. This is just the opposite of what we now know to be the ideal condition. Such a plant will wilt badly and suffer severely, especially if a hot spell sets in soon after lifting. If you have had abundant rains lately, then don't be in a hurry about housing the plants. Wait for a dry spell, when the rapid growth will be checked and the plants will harden up some. Then the plants will wilt but little, and when the roots get into the moist soil they will take hold eagerly, and the whole batch will start to growing at once. Less foliage will be lost, too.

Supposing conditions are ideal and you decide to plant; there are many details you must be careful about in order to have complete success. Put a good, heavy shade on your house, of some material that will wash off readily. We have used a clay wash with good success, but some kinds of clay will leave a deposit on the glass which is hard to get off, especially if it has to be put on the second time in case of rain. We have about come to the conclusion that a wash made of air-slaked lime is about as good as anything. A couple of rains will take it off clean. Spray it on with a hand syringe, such as I have described repeatedly.

Preparing the Soil.

The day before you expect to plant see that the soil is in proper condition in regard to moisture. If too dry, water it and see that it is wet clear to the bottom. Nothing could be worse than to plant in soil that is dry at the bottom. The soil should not be wet, but it should be moist enough to press together firmly when you plant, about the same as you want it when potting. If it is too wet it will pack and bake when it dries out; if it is too dry it will draw the moisture from the roots instead of supplying it to them, and you will find it difficult to water through it without making a mud of the whole bench. Dampen the walks and under the benches, so as to have as much moisture in the atmosphere as possible. If there is a high wind you had better lower the ventilators some. The plants stand a high temperature better than they can draughts.

Treatment in the House.

When planting the broad benches stretch a line down the middle of each from end to end. For any man with a straight eye this is enough to keep all the rows straight lengthwise. Use a pole with notches cut in it at proper distance to guide the planter in spacing the rows. When setting the plants in the bed, set the larger ones in the center rows and the smaller ones along the edge. If any of them are extremely small put two of them together. Make a hole large enough so you can set the ball of soil in and fill around with loose soil; then press firmly all around, leveling off with loose soil. Leave a slight depression close around the plant to water in the first few times; not so deep that the plant will set too deep when the soil is stirred and leveled later on, but just enough to hold what water you give each plant. I don't like to water the whole bed until the syringing can be dispensed with, when the roots have become active. If the soil and atmosphere are moist you don't need to water every time a hundred plants are set in, but water what you have planted about once every hour or so. Spray lightly a number of times during the middle of the day. Do not drench the plants, but let it be more like a mist.

Treatment While Shifting.

Out in the field have a careful man to do the digging, and see that he forces the spade down deep enough to get all the roots. Every large root that is broken off means additional suffering for the plant. Have enough men to follow him right up, gathering up the plants in trays. Let them reduce the ball of soil to about the size of your fist, if the soil will stick together. If it all crumbles off without tearing the roots, no particular harm is done, but you want to get such plants in the earth as quickly as possible. If your carnation field is close to the houses, do not dip the roots in water, but get them planted just as soon as you can. If, however, they will have to be out of the soil a couple of hours, you had better dip them. Get them under cover as soon as possible after digging, and cover with burlap to keep off sun and wind, one as bad as the other. Divide up your force so that each part (the planting and the digging) will progress at about the same speed. Then the plants will not need to lie around and wilt. When digging, select all good, healthy plants. They need not necessarily be of large size, just so they are healthy and of good form. An ill-shapen, straggly, or diseased plant means only trouble later on. Let me repeat that you should be sure that conditions are favorable when you plant. Early planting pays if conditions are right, but I would rather plant the middle of August under favorable conditions than in July under unfavorable conditions, such as soft plants, etc. So don't lose your head in wanting to get planted before your neighbor. A. F. J. Baur.

RED SPIDER ON CARNATIONS.

My carnations which are in the field are badly infested with red spider. I think the hot and dry weather which we have had is the cause of it. I am getting the plants into the benches as fast as possible. Is that the thing to do? C. A. M.

One of the worst things that can happen to your carnation plants in the field is to become infested with red spider. During a dry, hot spell they will sap the life out of the plants in a very short time, a condition from which it will take them a long time to recover, if they ever do. The best thing you can do is to arrange to combat them in about the same manner as you would in the house, if such a thing is possible. If you can not lay the water to the carnation field and get a fair pressure, then you are doing quite right to rush the plants inside where you can get at them.

The following plan, however, I would consider far preferable. Lay the water and put in enough faucets so you can work with a 50-foot length of hose and reach every plant easily. Then take a 5-cent bar of any pure soap, shave it into small bits and dissolve in a gallon of hot water. When dissolved, dilute in ten gallons of clear water. Spray your plants with this early in the morning, and two or three hours afterward wash it off with a sharp spray from the hose. A couple of applications of this kind ought to clear them out.

This treatment outside is to be preferred to taking the plants inside for several reasons. When you take up a plant and replant inside it is a rather severe ordeal in itself, and the plant is not in condition to stand much in the way of insect extermination without causing extreme suffering. So outside of syringing with clear water, you would hardly dare to do much until the plants had resumed growth. The plants would be much slower to take hold than usual on account of the weakened condition, and all this time the spider would be enjoying a respite. The extra syringing would not do the new soil any good either, and besides all the above reasons it is bad policy to bring spider into your houses if you can possibly prevent it. By destroying the spider outside you can have the plants recuperate before taking them up, and they will not be much worse for their experience. They will take hold as well and do as well as if there had been no spider on them, if left out until they get to growing strong again. A. F. J. Baur.

FERTILIZERS.

What is the objection to using horse manure in preparing liquid fertilizer for roses and carnations? S. S. B.

There is no objection and it is often used. A few years ago Mr. Dorner, of Lafayette, Ind., wrote carnation notes for this journal, and in one article enlarged on the benefits of a change of food for plants, referring, of course, to liquid fertilizer. Horse manure is, I believe, stronger than that from a dairy farm and should be more diluted with water. If a change of diet is good for plants, then stable manure is one of the best. Its careless or injudicious use may have spread the fallacy that it is dangerous. I say if it is good, for I am not sure that it has been demonstrated that it is of great advantage.

Two or three years ago there was a sketch of the life and achievements of the wizard, Edison, and he was quoted as saying that a brain worker should feed on a large variety of food. He himself ate the greatest possible variety. You may think this has little to do with the subject, but the animal and vegetable kingdoms are much more closely allied and related than the superficial thinker believes or understands. Now it would not take a very keen observer to refute the argument of Mr. Edison. There is little doubt but what the constant food of the parents of a Burns, a Carlyle or Lord Clyde was oatmeal.

But now the supper crowns their simple board—
The halesome parritch, chief of Scotia's food.

And so it was the chief food, and in many cases the only food, of many an illustrious Scotchman; how about the thousands of bright Irishmen whose diet for months at a time was only the humble potato and salt, varied only by the change of potatoes without salt? Have not genius and brains more often emerged from these classes than from the pampered and luxurious classes of any nation? W. S.

Callas in the Shelter of Windbreak in the Azores Islands.

AZORES ISLANDS LILIES.

A New Source of Supply.

The lily-bulb industry in the Azores Islands is still in its infancy, although growers there have been experimenting with lilies for the last eight years. Lilium longiflorum is the crop with which the most important results are in prospect, but freesias are already grown there in considerable quantity, also callas, candidums, agapanthus and camellias, and the culture of azaleas has been taken up in a limited way. The freesias are especially fine, affording a high percentage of pure white flowers.

So little is known of the Azores Islands that when a bulb man speaks of lilies from the Azores he is almost invariably asked where the islands are. The Azores belong to Portugal, from which country they are some 800 miles distant, or rather more than the distance from Cape Hatteras to Bermuda. The labor in the Azores is Portuguese. The latitude is 37 degrees north. The latitude of the Bermudas is 32 degrees north. Climatically the islands are much the same and topographically there is also a similarity. The Azores are volcanic and mountainous, with extremely fertile valleys. They are perhaps best known to Europe as a health resort, and as a matter of fact the Bermudas are also best known for the same thing. One name for the Bermudas is the Summer Islands, and most people suppose the name refers to the climate, but it is an English name, the islands having been originally christened after Sir George Somers. The Azores are about 1,000 square miles in area and in 1890 had a population of about 250,000.

The Lilium longiflorum bulbs are grown in the usual manner and mature at about the same time as Harrisii. Thus far they are practically free from disease and their habit is notable for its uniformity. They produce blooms very freely. The illustrations show plants cut in the field and another in a pot which carried seventeen blooms. Numbers carry twelve blooms per plant.

Lilium Longiflorum Growing in the Azores Islands.

These are photographs taken in the field grown for Ralph M. Ward & Co. The Azores lilies are said by importers to be absolutely sure for the earliest Easter. There is very little waste because of no disease. Ward & Co. say, however, that some growers in the islands have already developed the careless methods which a few years ago so impaired the quality of the Bermuda stock. At present the output of the Azores bulbs is so small that the stock is quickly sold and the demand is left unsatisfied.

One of the accompanying illustrations shows a field of callas growing in the Azores. It is a practice to grow these crops behind high windbreaks, one of which is seen in the picture. The callas do well and produce flowers of exceptional size. Earl Bros., of Elizabeth, N. J., had 8,500 of these calla bulbs last season and cut from them fully 30,000 blooms, which sold regularly at $1 per dozen in the New York market. The cost of the bulbs laid down at their greenhouse was less than $30 per thou sand.

The Forcer's View.

Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, have been forcing the Azores Islands lilies and C. L. Washburn thus relates their experience with them.

"Three years ago we received the first Azores Islands lilies we ever had seen. They were two plants in bloom in pots shipped us as samples by Robert Craig & Son, of Philadelphia. These were from bulbs imported by Henry & Lee. We were so pleased with the appearance of these plants that we bought 5,000 bulbs of the same kind and last year we increased our order to 10,000 of the Azores bulbs. Of these we placed 5,000 in cold storage to be retarded for summer flowers.

"These bulbs are a distinct type of lily. They are, you might say, absolutely free of disease so far as those we have handled are a sample. This is a great feature in their favor. The bulbs are received late in August in this country and are slow in growth. We potted them as soon as received and set them outdoors, well covered with straw, until along in October, by which time they were well rooted and had made a growth above the soil. We then put them in a rather cool house, say 50 degrees at night, with plenty of ventilation during the day. When they had made a good start to grow we gradually increased the heat, depending on just when they were wanted. Our Azores bulbs last winter were held back a little too long, as we only wanted to bring them in for Easter, so for six weeks just before Easter we had to force them quite hard. We had to give them a night temperature of 75 to 80 degrees and ran it up to 90 degrees during the day. They stood it all right, but the flowers were not so large as if grown in a lower temperature.

"The one great feature of the Azores Islands lilies is that they are absolutely healthy. The plants all grow to an even height and grow so sturdy and strong as not to need staking, though we did stake ours. The flowers are not so large as the Japan longiflorum or multiflorum, but are of good size and of strong texture. They stand a great deal of rough handling without becoming bruised. The flowers are all perfect; not a cripple have we seen. The only thing against these bulbs is that they are so slow to grow. They have to be pushed along to get them in by April 1. They submit to cold storage almost as well as the giganteum.

"I do not want to say anything of our experience with Japan longiflorum or multiflorum, as the tale is too sad and expensive to recall these joyous days. We can give you our experience with that class of stock in November, when 'the melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year,' etc. Just now is vacation time; fishing excursions and picnics keep the smile busy that won't come off, and we do not care to think of Japan bulbs."

LILIES IN ENGLAND.

A great deal is being said in England just now among florists as to the merits of the various types of Lilium longiflorum. L. longiflorum eximium, L. longiflorum multiflorum and L. longiflorum giganteum are the three varieties used the most extensively. Demand for lily bulbs is good, as retarding for the market is a new line of work. Prices are correspondingly high. There is some confusion among growers as to the distinguishing features of each variety, and some doubt exists about the most profitable kind to grow.

The giganteum, although the most expensive, is the best variety for retarding. It has a darker stem, and narrow leaves set close together. It is a stronger grower, and has thicker, better flowers. Lilium longiflorum multiflorum is probably, considering the price, the most profitable for market growers. Its blooms are slightly larger than eximium and it produces probably three times as many blooms.

The eximium variety produces not nearly so many blooms, and they are of poor quality. Eximium bulbs are much crumbles off without tearing the roots, no particular harm is done, but you want to get such plants in the earth as quickly as possible. If your carnation field is close to the houses, do not dip the roots in water, but get them planted just as soon as you can. If, however, they will have to be out of the soil a couple of hours, you had better dip them. Get them under cover as soon as possible after digging, and cover with burlap to keep off sun and wind, one as bad as the other. Divide up your force so that each part (the planting and the digging) will progress at about the same speed. Then the plants will not need to lie around and wilt. When digging, select all good, healthy plants. They need not necessarily be of large size, just so they are healthy and of good form. An ill-shapen, straggly, or diseased plant means only trouble later on. Let me repeat that you should be sure that conditions are favorable when you plant. Early planting pays if conditions are right, but I would rather plant the middle of August under favorable conditions than in July under unfavorable conditions, such as soft plants, etc. So don't lose your head in wanting to get planted before your neighbor. A. F. J. Baur.

RED SPIDER ON CARNATIONS.

My carnations which are in the field are badly infested with red spider. I think the hot and dry weather which we have had is the cause of it. I am getting the plants into the benches as fast as possible. Is that the thing to do?

C. A. M.

One of the worst things that can happen to your carnation plants in the field is to become infested with red spider. During a dry, hot spell they will sap the life out of the plants in a very short time, a condition from which it will take them a long time to recover, if they ever do. The best thing you can do is to arrange to combat them in about the same manner as you would in the house, if such a thing is possible. If you can not lay the water to the carnation field and get a fair pressure, then you are doing quite right to rush the plants inside where you can get at them.

The following plan, however, I would consider far preferable. Lay the water and put in enough faucets so you can work with a 50-foot length of hose and reach every plant easily. Then take a 5-cent bar of any pure soap, shave it into small bits and dissolve in a gallon of hot water. When dissolved, dilute in ten gallons of clear water. Spray your plants with this early in the morning, and two or three hours afterward wash it off with a sharp spray from the hose. A couple of applications of this kind ought to clear them out.

This treatment outside is to be preferred to taking the plants inside for several reasons. When you take up a plant and replant inside it is a rather severe ordeal in itself, and the plant is not in condition to stand much in the way of insect extermination without causing extreme suffering. So outside of syringing with clear water, you would hardly dare to do much until the plants had resumed growth. The plants would be much slower to take hold than usual on account of the weakened condition, and all this time the spider would be enjoying a respite. The extra syringing would not do the new soil any good either, and besides all the above reasons it is bad policy to bring spider into your houses if you can possibly prevent it. By destroying the spider outside you can have the plants recuperate before taking them up, and they will not be much worse for their experience. They will take hold as well and do as well as if there had been no spider on them, if left out until they get to growing strong again. A. F. J. Baur.

FERTILIZERS.

What is the objection to using horse manure in preparing liquid fertilizer for roses and carnations? S. S. B.

There is no objection and it is often used. A few years ago Mr. Dorner, of Lafayette, Ind., wrote carnation notes for this journal, and in one article enlarged on the benefits of a change of food for plants, referring, of course, to liquid fertilizer. Horse manure is, I believe, stronger than that from a dairy farm and should be more diluted with water. If a change of diet is good for plants, then stable manure is one of the best. Its careless or injudicious use may have spread the fallacy that it is dangerous. I say if it is good, for I am not sure that it has been demonstrated that it is of great advantage.

Two or three years ago there was a sketch of the life and achievements of the wizard, Edison, and he was quoted as saying that a brain worker should feed on a large variety of food. He himself ate the greatest possible variety. You may think this has little to do with the subject, but the animal and vegetable kingdoms are much more closely allied and related than the superficial thinker believes or understands. Now it would not take a very keen observer to refute the argument of Mr. Edison. There is little doubt but what the constant food of the parents of a Burns, a Carlyle or Lord Clyde was oatmeal.

But now the supper crowns their simple board
The halesome parritch, chief of Scotia's food.

And so it was the chief food, and in many cases the only food, of many an illustrious Scotchman; how about the thousands of bright Irishmen whose diet for months at a time was only the humble potato and salt, varied only by the change of potatoes without salt? Have not genius and brains more often emerged from these classes than from the pampered and luxurious classes of any nation? W. S.

Callas in the Shelter of Windbreak in the Azores Islands.

AZORES ISLANDS LILIES.

A New Source of Supply.

The lily-bulb industry in the Azores Islands is still in its infancy, although growers there have been experimenting with lilies for the last eight years. Lilium longiflorum is the crop with which the most important results are in prospect, but freesias are already grown there in considerable quantity, also callas, candidums, agapanthus and camellias, and the culture of azaleas has been taken up in a limited way. The freesias are especially fine, affording a high percentage of pure white flowers.

So little is known of the Azores Islands that when a bulb man speaks of lilies from the Azores he is almost invariably asked where the islands are. The Azores belong to Portugal, from which country they are some 800 miles distant, or rather more than the distance from Cape Hatteras to Bermuda. The labor in the Azores is Portuguese. The latitude is 37 degrees north. The latitude of the Bermudas is 32 degrees north. Climatically the islands are much the same and topographically there is also a similarity. The Azores are volcanic and mountainous, with extremely fertile valleys. They are perhaps best known to Europe as a health resort, and as a matter of fact the Bermudas are also best known for the same thing. One name for the Bermudas is the Summer Islands, and most people suppose the name refers to the climate, but it is an English name, the islands having been originally christened after Sir George Somers. The Azores are about 1,000 square miles in area and in 1890 had a population of about 250,000.

The Lilium longiflorum bulbs are grown in the usual manner and mature at about the same time as Harrisii. Thus far they are practically free from disease and their habit is notable for its uniformity. They produce blooms very freely. The illustrations show plants cut in the field and another in a pot which carried seventeen blooms. Numbers carry twelve blooms per plant.

Some difficulty is experienced in knowing when the stock received is of pure strain. If eximium and multiflorum are mixed, the only difference in plants and blooms is one of quality. Multiflorum is only a better quality than eximium, and the variation is laid to poor bulbs.

BEAUTIES.

Treatment for Young Stock.

When young Beauties have attained a length of twelve or fifteen inches and are forming buds, if they are strong they should be cut back, taking off three of four of the topmost eyes. This will divert part of the strength into the lower eyes, causing them to break and form a more bushy plant.

There being nearly always a demand for Beauty buds, the temptation to market them as early as possible is frequently the cause of giving the young plants a stunted habit, from which it takes them a long time to recover. Denuding the plant of so much of its breathing apparatus causes a check to its growth, the wood hardens and ripens prematurely and there it remains till cool weather sets in. Beauties, to give good results in winter, should not also be expected to give a large cut during summer or early fall.

During recent years and particularly in some localities the worst trouble that Beauty growers have had to contend with, and which still keeps them guessing, has been the pest called thrips. This insect has caused more loss and damage to Beauty crops than all the other troubles combined. At this season the grower should keep a sharp lookout for these pests, so that they may not secure a lodgment among the young stock. Before the plants begin to bear a crop the insects give little evidence of their presence, and it requires a sharp and practiced eye to read the signs, but as soon as the buds begin to develop, their work becomes manifest to even the most inexperienced.

While infesting all varieties of roses, thrips commit their greatest destruction among Beauties under glass, and to houses containing this variety the grower should direct his best efforts and attention.

There are many species of these pests, some of them natives and many of them imported, and they are all inimical to rose culture under glass. The imported varieties are quite as destructive as their native congener. They are all so nearly alike as to make it hard to distinguish them, but as their habits and food plants are so much alike and the methods of exterminating them so similar, the grower does not need to spend his time in determining their identity.

Prevention being so much better than cure in this case, rigid precaution against increase in, and in proximity to, rose houses, and their introduction into the houses among such materials as soil, manure, litter, etc., should be in force the whole summer and fall. Keeping the ground near the houses and in the vicinity of soil piles clear of weeds is one of the best preventives.

If the weeds have been neglected they should now be cut down and burned. It is also a good plan to burn the grass and ground herbage near the houses during a hot spell. Weeds in the houses, on the paths, and underneath the benches should be strictly kept down, as these afford both feeding ground and shelter.

During the growing season and while we are practicing disbudding is a favorable time to apply the remedies, as we can use more radical measures then than we can apply with safety or prudence after we allow the crop to come.

After crops begin to show color the means of destroying these pests become more limited, as persistent fumigating with tobacco in any of its forms is sure to injure the buds, having a very deleterious effect on the color of the petals. Consequently our most strenuous efforts should be put in force before the crop matures.

Ribes.

BLACK SPOT.

What is the matter with my roses? The leaves become covered with black spots and fall off. I have the plants in 4-inch pots, and want to use them for cut flowers next winter. They were in this condition when I received them. What shall I do for the disease? P. J. K.

This is a genuine case of black spot, and no doubt has been brought about by allowing the plants to become pot-bound and then overwatered.

Plant out in a bench, giving about one foot of space, and using a compost of four parts good, rich, loamy sod to one of decomposed cow manure. Allow plenty of drainage, give plenty of water and free ventilation night and day, and pick off all affected leaves. The trouble will soon disappear.

Ribes.

NUMEROUS ROSES.

A very full catalogue of rose names has just been issued in Paris and serves to show how great is the number of varieties. The names of all known roses, or at least of more than 11,000 of them, are arranged alphabetically. Concise details are given relating to the section to which each belongs, the name of the raiser, the year of production, the color of the flowers and the synonymy. Some idea of the numbers of varieties dealt with may be gleaned from the fact that hybrid perpetuals number 2,791, teas 1,434, provins 1,713, hybrid teas 473, polyantha 207. A list is given of the varieties issued each year from 1800, when there was one only. In 1833 none was added to the list. In the year 1905 thirty-three additions were made. In 1901 no fewer than 169 new names were launched. Vibert, of Angers, is credited with 600 introductions, a far larger number than any other raiser.

PINCHING SPECIMEN PLANTS.

The end of the third week in July is late enough for the last stopping of specimen plants, or for the general run of pot plants that may be planted out for the time being, and which it is purposed to take up later and pot, and have produce a dozen or so flowers.

Ivory and other growers of like delicate habit and constitution should not be pinched so late as the stronger ones, and they need more care in watering when a whole lot of mixed varieties are growing together. The man behind the hose can make or mar a good lot of stock in a few days by sheer carelessness, unless he uses common sense in his watering, but the same applies almost as strongly to other crops.

Routine Work.

General work in the houses now consists largely of routine work, staking plants, tying them up, and keeping the beds sweet and free from weeds by a weekly stirring up. It pays to examine the under side of the foliage once in a while. Many a stray brood of caterpillars can be picked up this way, and one can also see where red spider begins to get in its work.

About every two weeks get a sprayer that will get right under the foliage, and wash every leaf on the under side. The top side of your foliage may be perfectly clean while on the under side you may find whole colonies of insects. The instinct of self-preservation teaches them early that they are not nearly so liable to meet with disaster if on the sheltered side of the leaf.

Early Buds.

During the last few days of July those growers who cater to a very early market, or who are endeavoring to be the first in with their flowers, take what buds they can find on the earliest varieties. There are several kinds that will come finely from a late July bud, among them being Monrovia, Montmort, Gastellier and Fitzwygram, and it is from these early buds that the flowers come which one sees about the end of September. The market is limited so early in the season, but a few dozen flowers can be sold to good advantage, and when we get a killing frost, as we sometimes do, around October 1, they are worth big money. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

PLANTING MUMS.

Is 6x8 too far apart or too close to plant mums, to grow two blooms to a plant, put in June 30, ready to be topped the same day? I have such varieties as Touset, Chadwick, Dean, Amorita, Jones, Enguehard, Nonin, Ivory and Duckham. H. W. S.

Plants can be grown 6x8 and two flowers taken from each, but the same space is not too much to grow single-stem plants to carry one flower only, if you are wanting to grow only the finest grade. Ivory is possibly the only exception. This variety has small foliage, and can be grown much more closely than the others.

As I mentioned in the notes a week or two ago, one must be guided by his market in growing a large number of a medium grade, or a few of superior quality. I would say grow as good quality flowers as you can, and leave the other kind to the other fellow. C. H. T.

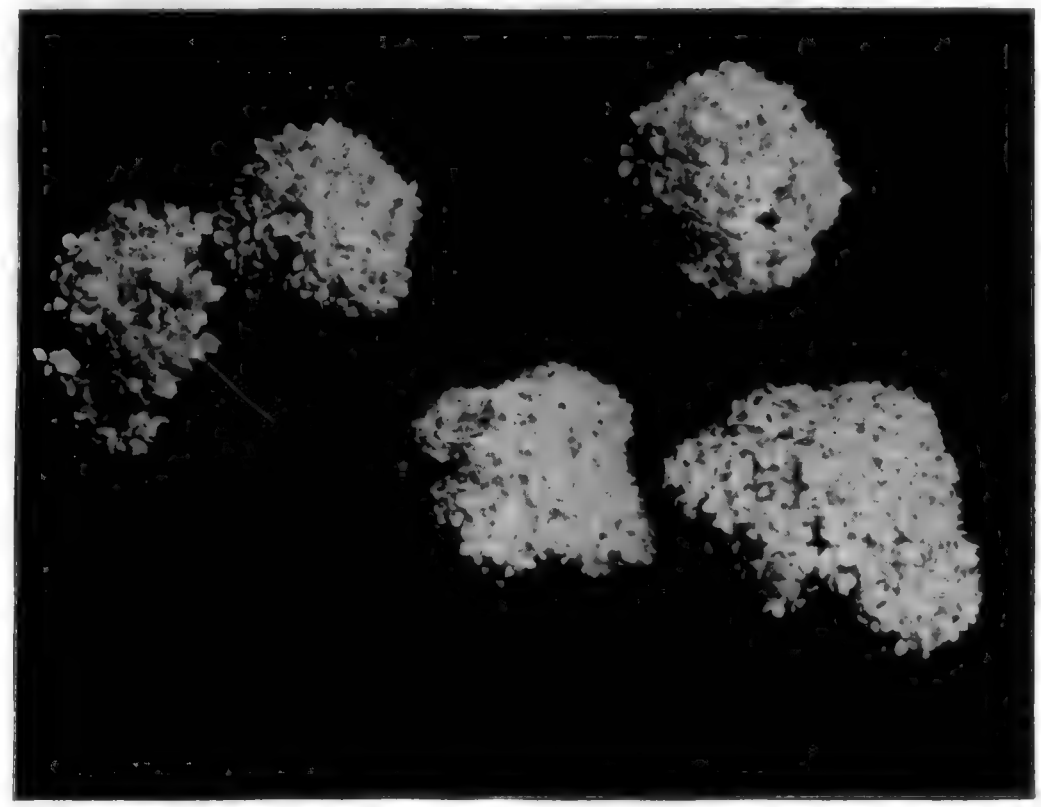
A NEW HYDRANGEA.

Arborescens alba grandiflora is the name which has been sent for registry to cover a most valuable new hardy American hydrangea, which as soon as thoroughly disseminated will be known as the "snowball hydrangea," from its resemblance to the viburnum flower, so that this synonymn might as well be bracketed with it from the first.

The original plant was found growing wild in the woods of Ohio, and the variety bids fair to become the most valuable hardy shrub of middle latitudes, its greatest value, aside from its wonderful beauty, being that it comes into bloom just after the flowering time of the lilacs, syringas, viburnums and spring-flowering spiræas, and, further, it continues on into August. The panicle is more like hortensia in form than paniculata grandiflora, and is a pure shade of white, the stem and leaf are both refined in form, and the panicle is of fine size. The bush grows some four feet in height and is about the same in width.

It is a boon to the American garden, and it is probable that it will rank very high as a florists' flower. S. A. HILL.

ACHILLEA AND PHLOX.



When is the right time to plant Achillea The Pearl in a warm climate, and how long does its bloom last? Does it have to be renewed every year and will it stand the hot sun? When should annual phlox be planted in the south? What is the difference in the bloom of the annual and the hardy white phlox, and what are the best varieties for southern culture? We shall be thankful for any information that you can give us about these plants. L. J. S.

This fine little hardy plant is classed as an alpine, yet a good authority says it is well adapted for a dry, sunny position. We have found it to do well in rockwork gardens, and its season of flowering extends for several months. It should do well in Alabama unless the winters are too warm and humid. The summer suns will certainly not injure it. Plant in a well drained, light or gravelly soil.

The variety known to florists as The Pearl is a variety of the species A. Ptarmica. It is propagated by cuttings of the young growths put into flats or beds of light soil or sand in early spring, or by divisions of an old bed pulled apart and replanted. We had a bed or row which lasted and flowered four or five years; but like many perennials the centers of the plants become exhausted, and a new planting should occur every three or four years. Its bloom is long lasting and it is a valuable florists' flower, especially where there is much demand for white flowers for designs, etc.

Phlox Drummondii is an annual found growing in the state of Texas, and on account of its freedom of growth, variety and brilliance of color and wonderful propensity to bloom, it is one of our most highly esteemed garden annuals. Through crossing and selection there have also been evolved several types of distinct form, the star phlox and several others. I am not able to describe botanically the difference in the floret of P. Drummondii and the hardy P. decussata, and there is little apparent difference, but there is a wide difference in the species. The greatest distinction is that one is an annual and the other a hardy perennial. The hardy phlox has large terminal panicles, while the blooms of the annual Drummondii are described as broad, flat-topped cymes. If you will notice, the panicles of the hardy phlox resemble Hydrangea paniculata, while the flowers of P. Drummondii are very different. That is the best distinction we can give.

P. Drummondii, if planted thickly, will flower itself to death by the end of July, while if given plenty of room and nourished by water and, more than all, if the flowers are kept cut off if you have use for them, it will continue to flower late in the fall. With many plants an early flowering habit is greatly desired, and this is produced by several transplantings. Transplanting is a check to growth and induces an annual to flower, and that's an end of its existence. So the Phlox Drummondii is better sown in the open ground where it is to flower, which in Alabama would, I should think, be in the month of March, or as soon as the ground is in good order to work and there is no more fear of any frost; I know that although you are in a semi-tropical climate, you still have unseasonable frosts. Hydrangea Arborescens Alba Grandiflora.

PLANTS FOR WESTERN BEDDING.

[A paper by Edward Williams, of Grand Island, read before the Nebraska State Horticultural Society at Omaha, July 12, 1906.]

To begin with, the term bedding plants covers the plants that do well when planted out of doors. Everybody knows what a geranium is, one of our most useful plants. I have had the best success with geraniums by potting the cuttings in the fall in 2-inch pots. The secret is to get your soil firm at the base of the cutting, water thoroughly, and shade for a few days; then the operation is done. It saves handling the plants twice; besides, your percentage of plants will be greater than if you propagate them in the sand. Geraniums are bad about damping off in the cutting bed. These plants will furnish good cuttings about the middle of February; that gives you your 3-inch and 4-inch stock in bloom by the middle of May, in a temperature of 54 to 56 degrees at night, and 58 to 60 day heat, sun heat 70 degrees. Give plenty of air at all times, and it is well to give the plants a handling over, and take off the large leaves; that lets in the light and helps to break out new shoots.

Now in regard to varieties; they are so numerous that I won't endeavor to recount them. What you want are good red, pink, and white, and a few fancy-leaved ones, in both single and double. It is better to grow a quantity of each variety than to have fifty varieties and only a few of each. When my customer comes in and says, "I would like to have five or six dozen geraniums for my beds, all one shade," you can fill the order without substituting. I don't believe there is any line of business in which a man gets more roasting than does a florist. So my reason for growing a quantity of what I do grow, with the fancy-leaved varieties, and Mme. Salleroi, is a good one.

It is best to lift a few plants of each and pot in a 5-inch pot, then you can take your cuttings off during the winter. Mme. Salleroi roots easily, so that a cutting put in the sand by February 1 will make nice stock in three months' time.

Other Good Bedders.

Cannas are great acquisitions to the flower bed. They are easy to handle and don't take up much bench room. After the first frost cut the foliage down to within five inches of the ground. In lifting leave just enough dirt to cover the roots. Lay in the sun for a few days so as to ripen them. A good place for the florist to winter them is on boards laid along the ground under the carnation bed. By dividing the clump about March 1 and placing the eyes in boxes of sand, placed on the steam pipes under the bench, they will start nicely, and when the foliage is up about five or six inches, pot them up in 4-inch pots. This method of starting saves considerable bench room and you don't pot up a lot of eyes that won't make good plants.

Dahlias, when given good care, make nice plants for a background, or to fill in some corner. The same treatment will apply to them as to cannas, with the exception of starting. Dahlias grown from cuttings make good plants, and will bloom profusely the first year. Cuttings can be taken off about the latter part of February by laying the tubers out, covering slightly with soil and keeping them moist. The eyes will begin to break freely and the old clumps can be divided later on.

Coleus is in great demand for edging, or for solid beds. The most satisfactory way I can find, also the most economical way, to grow them is to lift a few plants of each variety before frost, cut them back to within ten inches of the pot and carry them through the winter in a moderately warm house. When spring comes you have all the cuttings you want. The first part of April is time enough to take cuttings; they root in twelve to fifteen days. The old plants are subject to mealy bugs, so keep your hose on them occasionally.

Lantanas and heliotrope treated the same way are better than cuttings taken in the fall, only they don't lift very well, so you had better put a few in 5-inch pots in the spring and plunge in a frame through the summer.

Other plants, such as abutilon, ageratum, salvia, verbenas, marguerites, double petunias, feverfew, cuttings taken before frost and rooted in the sand, will give you good stock to propagate from through the winter.

Plants from Seed.

The following plants can be grown from seed and give good satisfaction, besides saving much valuable room; single petunias, asters, lobelia, mignonette, moonflower, nasturtium, Phlox Drummondii, stocks, zinnia, candytuft; seed should be sown the first part of March.

Now, in sowing seed it takes patience and care. A good rule to go by is to cover the seeds their own thickness. First, thoroughly water the soil before sowing. Shade during the day until they begin to show up; then be careful not to let them get dry or wilted.

Pansies for early plants can be sown in the latter part of August, and transplanted to the frames when the character leaves show; cover with sashes and later put on a covering of course manure over all. It is also a good idea to make a sowing in flats about the first part of February, which will give you another batch to fill up the frames after the earlier ones are gone.

Alternantheras, in different varieties, are indispensable as carpet bedding plants. I have had the best success with them by taking cuttings the latter part of August, putting them in a flat of half soil and half sand, watered thoroughly and placed along the edge of a bench on the ground, shaded until root action begins. By spring you have all the wood for cuttings you want, or if your supply is adequate, prick them off in 2-inch pots about the middle of April and plunge in a hotbed. This treatment does not take up bench room.

I believe I have named about all the most important bedding plants in the soft-wooded line.

Roses for Bedding.

The hybrid tea roses are very satisfactory as summer bloomers. Take the plants from the bench the first part of June, cut them back a little, and give them a thorough soaking; they will bloom profusely. I have carried them over with good success by putting four or five inches of soil around the base, and later on, as the weather gets more severe, the same quantity of coarse manure. In the spring, as the weather gets milder, remove your top covering. Later on remove this second covering. Cut off all dead wood and you will find that in a short time new shoots will show up and give you good roses throughout the summer.

In the line of hardy bedders that give good satisfaction as to blooming qualities, I find that the following varieties do well with us here: Hardy phlox, peonies, Achillea The Pearl, campanula, dielytra, delphinium, helianthus, funkia, pyrethrum, Rudbeckia Golden Glow, and anemone. To increase the stock of these either by cuttings or divisions, take cuttings off the soft growth in the spring and make divisions about September 1.

Planting and Care.

Now a few words on the planting and care of these plants. The most essential part is to get the ground in proper shape. What I mean by proper shape is this: Whether for fall planting or spring, give the beds a liberal coating of well rotted cow manure. If the ground is dry, water first, and let it stand until it can be spaded without the soil sticking to the spade, when you are ready to do your planting. This applies either to rain, hose watering or sprinkling can. Half the success with bedding plants depends upon the planting out. Plants purchased from a florist, as a rule, are pot-bound. So in setting out be sure to make your holes deep enough.

Plants, to make a good showing, as a rule will stand to be planted from ten to twelve inches apart. After making the holes, place the plants and if the arrangement suits you water each individual plant. After the water has soaked away fill up the holes with dry soil; this method keeps the soil from baking around the roots. It would be well if we could abide by this rule in all our plantings. The soil needs to be kept loosened by frequent cultivation. Don't be afraid to go down well; that is where you want the moisture to go.

As a rule, sufficient rain falls to do most plants, cannas and dahlias excepted. They can take a soaking every evening and will be better for it. When watering, give the plants enough to thoroughly soak them, not a light sprinkling, as that only does more harm than good.

Window-boxes, veranda-boxes and hanging baskets are used extensively. I find that the wire baskets lined with moss are the best, as they hold the moisture better.

Asparagus Sprengeri is used extensively as a basket plant and seems to thrive nicely. For boxes or vases I would recommend mixing your soil with stable manure, as it seems to hold the moisture better than the cow manure does, and the ammonia in it seems to give the plants good color. After a flower is through blooming, pick it off, stem and all; your plant will do better and bloom more freely.

Ornamental bedding is something that is always left to the florist to do, and lucky is the florist who has a man who can do ornamental work, for nowadays everybody is a specialist. To get an all-round man is a hard proposition. You will find them mostly on the smaller places, where a man is expected to be able to grow most anything there is to be found, make up designs, decorate, and last but not least, be a steam fitter, carpenter and a good wheelbarrow pusher.

Bulbs for Bedding.

I can't close this paper without saying a word or two on bulbs. What is prettier in the spring than a nice bed of tulips, hyacinths, and narcissi? Oftentimes people come in about the first part of March and want bulbs, and when you tell them that fall is the time to put them in they look surprised. Bulbs can be put in after a light frost or two. Put them down five or six inches in the ground about December, and give them a good covering of coarse manure; then as the weather begins to moderate in the spring, remove your covering. After they are through blooming, which depends on the season, lift them up, cut the tops off, and let the roots lie in the sun for a few days, taking them in at night. Then lay them on a shelf in the cellar and about May 10 you can put out your bedding plants.

GERANIUM SYCAMORE.

A. S. Halstead, of the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, Ill., has for several years been telling his friends about a wonderful new single pink geranium he was growing at his place. The accompanying illustration shows a bench of it photographed early this spring. Dr. Halstead has given the name Sycamore to the variety and will give the trade a chance to see it at the Dayton convention. It is a bright-colored salmon-pink, a cross between Mrs. E. G. Hill and Bruant. The habit is vigorous, dwarf and floriferous, the trusses being very large. It is an excellent bedder, one of its strong points being that it will endure beating rains.

A. S. Halstead's New Pink Geranium, Sycamore.

GERBERA AURANTIACA.

Gerbera aurantiaca is a fine companion to E. Jamesoni, but as it comes from a dry region of Natal and the Transvaal it needs greenhouse protection during winter, and very little water at that period. The flower-heads are scarcely so large as those of G. Jamesoni, but the ray florets are a wonderfully vivid blood-red color with a yellow undersurface. The leaves are entirely oblanceolate, pubescent above and tomentose beneath.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE CARE OF CUT FLOWERS.

[Paper read by John H. Bath before the meeting of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society, at Omaha, Neb., Thursday, July 12.]

From a commercial viewpoint, I think that growers, generally, give too little attention as to how their stock is handled after it is cut. Of first importance is to have the stock sorted and placed in water as soon as possible after being cut. I find it a good idea to have vessels of water in the greenhouses, placed conveniently, wherein the blooms may be placed, awaiting their removal to the sorting room, then if the cut is large, the petals are not soft when being sorted, thereby preventing a great deal of bruising that they usually receive.

After sorting, the long-stemmed and short-stemmed stock should be placed in separate jars of proper depths, to keep them together and straight, and on hardening, weak stems will be found to have straightened considerably. Flowers kept in the cellar over night should always have their stems cut afresh, and the water refreshed if it is desired to hold them longer. The temperature of the cellar or ice-chest should be 45 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit all the year around.

Too much care cannot be used in packing flowers, whether the distance be one mile or a hundred. The damage does not come from the jar of the wagon or cars, but the blooms bruise each other. Wax or manila tissue paper or cotton cloth should be placed between the layers. Always have a cushion of paper or air space at the head of the box when packing, because a very slight jar in a forward direction is sure to bruise them badly.

I do not believe that greenhouse employees receive enough instruction on the handling of cut flowers. They are almost invariably rough with them. The blooms can be handled rapidly and gently. I personally have seen a number of expert rose growers who treated the flowers, after they were cut, in a most shameful manner, such as squeezing long and short together, or laying them down hard, almost dropping them, on the table. This probably is mere thoughtlessness. It takes no more time to handle them properly. I believe that as many of the flowers as will permit should be broken off, instead of being cut with a knife, because more of the pore surface is brought in direct contact with the water in this manner. This applies particularly to chrysanthemums, lilacs, heavy-stemmed roses, and others having heavy stems.

Handling in the Store.

On receipt of the stock at the store, it should always be gone over, the stems freshly clipped, and bruised petals and deformed foliage removed. If the flowers have been shipped from a distance, they should not be used until they have been chilled a second time.

In these days of fancy carnations, we are troubled at times with many split calyxes. This can be remedied, if carefully done, with a needle and thread, or with stemming wire, sewing the parted calyxes together. Too many flowers are usually placed in one vase. Put them in several vases; the flowers won't wilt, as otherwise, the foliage is not destroyed, and you have apparently a larger stock and an infinitely more artistic display for your customers' inspection.

As to preservatives, many have suggested the use of patented stuff, chloride of sodium, bicarbonate of soda, and even a rank poison, nux vomica; but I believe Nature intended cool, clear water, and plenty of it, as the preservative, par excellence, of cut flowers.

Flowers grown in a greenhouse should never be offered for sale until they have stood in water and been kept in the cellar or ice-chest at a temperature of 50 degrees for at least twelve hours, and twenty-four would be better. This allows the stems to become filled with water, for the pith acts much as a sponge. Then, and not until then, will the cut flowers keep, and be satisfactory to the buyer. Fresh air is as important as fresh water; for instance, at this time carnations will keep but one day at the store, and should I take some of the same lot to my home, where the air circulation is good, they will keep three to four days longer. A draft will wilt a rose badly, and scarcely injure a carnation, so it is best to avoid drafts. In conclusion, I would say that common sense, coupled with an observing eye, should govern the care of cut flowers.

BEST RED GERANIUM.

In the Review of July 12, Mr. Scott, under the heading "six best geraniums" recommends to S. & Y. that they grow fifty per cent S. A. Nutt. Now Nutt is a very fine geranium, and there is perhaps more of it grown than of any other one variety in commerce. We used to grow it, too, for dark red, years ago, but we are now growing Marvel, which we find a much better variety than Nutt. Marvel is not a new variety, in fact I think it is almost as old as Nutt, at least I have known it for fifteen years or more. Why it has never caught on like Nutt I cannot account for, especially when taking into consideration its good qualities. I have seen many other dark red varieties come and go, and deservedly so, because all had one bad fault or anotner. Not so, however, with Marvel. This variety has all the good qualities of Nutt and none of its faults. For instance, it grows more stocky and heavier than Nutt, and is just as free from disease. It is equally as free in bloom and blooms as early and steadily. The trusses are held up above the foliage better and are just as large. The individual floret is larger and of better form, while the color is a trifle brighter. It does not take on that blackish cast you see in Nutt outside. A large bed of it makes a grand sight.

I have seen these two varieties growing side by side for years, and have never seen Nutt make a better show than Marvel under the same conditions, but in nearly every case it was the reverse. So constant was the superiority of Marvel that we have discarded Nutt altogether for dark red. It cannot be said that this is a local condition. In the early nineties, when I was employed at E. G. Hill's, at Richmond, I first noticed the superiority of Marvel over Nutt. Some years later, when I was foreman at H. A. Niemeyer's place at Erie, Pa., I procured some plants of Marvel, and we found the same difference, and displaced Nutt with Marvel as rapidly as possible. Since engaging in business here in Indianapolis, we have verified our opinion time and again until, as I have said above, we have discarded Nutt entirely.

On the other varieties I quite agree with Mr. Scott as to the percentage of each color to grow. I would like to see Marvel tried by every grower of geraniums. It can be procured from most any of the large geranium propagators.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

We can safely say that the cut flower market is dull. A few have been busy with funeral work, and that is all there is for the retailer. The light demand at the wholesale houses each morning shows this plainly. The quantity of cut stock coming into town is quite large, and the wholesalers have their troubles in disposing of it. We had a good rain Sunday, which no doubt saved the asters and sweet peas.

All roses are looking much better of late. Kaiserins sell well. Bride and Maid are too small and soft. Cochet roses are coming in for a fair demand, especially white. Beauties, both long and short, are none too good. Carnations have become scarce, that is, good stock. Poor stock is plentiful enough. Sweet peas were hard to sell last week. Job-lot prices were 50 and 75 cents per thousand. Asters and gladioli are having a good demand. Dahlias sell slowly. All greens are abundant.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club meeting held on last Thursday afternoon in Edwardsville was one of the best and largest attended meetings held for a long time. Thirty-six members, most of them bringing their ladies with them, making the party number fifty-two, left for the home of President Ammann at 12:30 p. m., arriving at 2 o'clock. At the station we were met by Mr. and Mrs. Ammann and members of his family, and were escorted to his place a block away. The ladies were taken in hand by Mrs. Ammann and her daughters, and the members by Mr. Ammann. The latter party went on an inspection tour through the greenhouses, which were being planted with a young stock of roses, all in fine condition, and a field of 50,000 carnation plants, which opened the eyes of some of our growers. Mr. Blixen, the foreman, showed the members all the points of interest on the place. In the meantime the ladies inspected the new residence just finished, and it's a beauty in all respects from roof to cellar.

After this the members and ladies proceeded to the meeting place four blocks away, in the old fairgrounds. The meeting opened at 3 o'clock with all the officers present. After the regular order of business had been disposed of, Fred Meinhardt, state vice-president of the S. A. F., who has charge of the transportation for Dayton, reported that the round trip would cost $12. The question as to which road to take would be left to the choice of those going and would be decided just as soon as all the names were handed in. Chairman Beyer of the trustees reported that everything was in readiness for the picnic on July 26, to which the club donated $50 for expenses, all money left over to be placed in the entertainment fund of the club. Gus Miller, a grower, presented his name for membership, which will be acted upon at the next meeting. Nomination of officers then took place: for president, Prof. H. C. Irish, E. W. Guy and Frank J. Fillmore; for vice-president, Fred H. Weber, John Connon and George Angermueller; for secretary, Emil Schray and J. J. Beneke; for treasurer, R. Windt, Chas. J. Juengel, A. G. Bentzen and Henry Lohrenz; for one trustee, to serve three years, C. A. Kuehn, A. Fehr, William Winter and R. J. Scott. Frank Fillmore led a discussion on growing carnations in pots, which was interesting. The secretary announced the election of officers for the next meeting, and discussions by A. Jablonsky, on "Growing Begonia Gloire de Lorraine," and by C. C. Sanders, on "Growing Nursery Stock," followed. Before adjourning a vote of thanks was extended President Ammann for the entertainment given the members. After adjournment the entire party partook of an elegant lunch. After this the official photographer, Rude Windt, took the pictures of the party. Preparations were then made for the return trip, after three rousing cheers for the president and his family. The return trip was uneventful; the two hours' wait at Mitchell was not relished much by the ladies.

Notes of the Trip.

Prof. and Mrs. H. C. Irish were seen to enjoy the surroundings very much.

John Connon and his charming young bride say they spent a most enjoyable afternoon.

George Angermueller lost his coat, but recovered it at Mitchell, when he mistook a stranger for Dr. Halstead, of Belleville.

Fred Meinhardt, Charlie Kuehn and Henry Lohrenz left early and missed the good time at Mitchell.

John Steidle, J. W. Dunford, Henry Braun and ladies did not reach their homes in Clayton until after midnight, but then they had a good time.

Henry and Mrs. Berning stayed over to visit relatives in the city.

Carl Beyer, Frank Weber and F. J. Fillmore were seen to hobnob with the members and talk picnic all afternoon.

Fred Ammann was pleased at the big turnout. The stay-at-homes missed a great treat as usual.

E. W. Guy, Henry Emunds and Adolph Fehr, of Belleville, were on hand, but stayed only for the nomination of officers. The next meeting will be held in Belleville.

Billy Winter was the only Kirkwood member present, and he postponed his Chicago trip in order to be on hand with the boys.

W. C. Smith attended his first meeting as a member, and was delighted that he was the only fare passenger in the bunch.

A. G. Greiner has his sunbonnet with him. He should be on the detective force. He's a good sweater.

Charlie Juengel and his corn-cob pipe were on hand, and he came near losing his wife in the round-up.

Various Notes.

G. H. Pring is now in charge of the orchid houses at Shaw's Garden, in the position recently vacated by Mr. McClure, who, with his wife, has returned to his old home in Buffalo. Mr. Pring attended the last club meeting in company with Professor Irish.

W. J. Pilcher started Monday for a two weeks' trip west. It is rumored that he is looking for a location between here and Kansas City, where he will build a large range of greenhouses.

J. W. Dunford is sending a fine lot of Lilium longiflorum giganteum to Berning's, and they are selling well.

C. C. Sanders has sent to Texas for Colonel Moss's badger, to be used in the badger fight at the picnic next Thursday, and will wager any amount that the badger can lick any dog in the neighborhood.

C. A. Kuehn is handling some extra fancy stock in roses, such as Perle, Ivory, Carnot, Kaiserin and Beauty.

At Ellis's thousands of sweet peas are handled each day, from Kirkwood, and sell well, though cheap in price.

The florists of St. Louis should not forget the annual outing of the Florists' Club next Thursday, July 26. Every florist, with his family, is invited to participate. The place is at Romona park, on the suburban line. The trustees are working hard and say this will be one of the best outings the club has ever had. The features will be the baseball game and the badger fight. A good time is in store for those who attend. All the wholesale houses will close at 12 o'clock on that day.

G. Angermueller is still handling some very good looking carnations, also a fine lot of outdoor stock.

W. C. Smith & Co. disposed of several hundred Bostons in 5-inch pots the last week.

Resolutions on Death of Wm. Schray.

We, the undersigned committee, appointed at the last meeting of our club to draft resolutions on the death of our late member, Wm. J. Schray, submit the following:

Whereas, it has been the will of Divine Providence to remove from our midst our highly esteemed member; therefore, be it

Resolved, that our club has lost one of its most beloved members, one who did all in his power to aid and advance the best interests of the club. Also be it

Resolved, that the members as a club extend their sincere sympathy to members of the bereaved family in this their hour of grief, as a token of our esteem for his noble character, his true devotion to his family, his love for his profession and the welfare of those associated with him. Be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved family and entered in the records of our club, and a copy be sent to the trade papers for publication.

THE DAYTON SOUVENIR BOOK.

It is true that I have taken charge of this book individually, because the club, through its president, did not wish to accept the responsibility. Mr. Shaw, through an assistant, is aiding me on the advertising, as I believe he has done on several souvenir books, for which he will receive an ordinary commission, but the net proceeds of the publication will be expended for such features of the Dayton meeting as will be approved of by the executive committee of the S. A. F. and the Dayton Florists' Club.

I trust that the souvenir book will be supported, for while I am not printing it for profit, I would not enjoy doing the work and losing money besides.

The place is at Romona park, on the suburban line. The trustees are working hard and say this will be one of the best outings the club has ever had. The features will be the baseball game and the badger fight. A good time is in store for those who attend. All the wholesale houses will close at 12 o'clock on that day.

G. Angermueller is still handling some very good looking carnations, also a fine lot of outdoor stock.

W. C. Smith & Co. disposed of several hundred Bostons in 5 inch pots the last week.

Resolutions on Death of Wm. Schray.

We, the undersigned committee appointed at the last meeting of our club to draft resolutions on the death of our late member, Wm. J. Schray, submit the following

Whereas, it has been the will of Divine Providence to remove from our midst our highly esteemed member, therefore, be it

Resolved, that our club has lost one of its most beloved members, one who did all in his power to aid and advance the best interests of the club. Also be it

Resolved, that the members as a club extend their sincere sympathy to members of the bereaved family in this their hour of grief, as a token of our esteem for his noble character, his true devotion to his family, his love for his profession and the welfare of those associated with him. Be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved family and entered in the records of our club, and a copy be sent to the trade papers for publication.

THE DAYTON SOUVENIR BOOK.

It is true that I have taken charge of this book individually, because the club, through its president, did not wish to accept the responsibility. Mr. Shaw, through an assistant, is aiding me on the advertising, as I believe he has done on several souvenir books, for which he will receive an ordinary commission, but the net proceeds of the publication will be expended for such features of the Dayton meeting as will be approved of by the executive committee of the S. A. F. and the Dayton Florists' Club.

I trust that the souvenir book will be supported, for while I am not printing it for profit, I would not enjoy doing the work and losing money besides.

H. M. ALTICK, Vice President S. A. F.

NOTICE

Because of the new wage scale which the Printers' Union has enforced upon those employers not willing to suffer interruption of their business, especially because of that part of the scale which makes overtime practically prohibitive, it is of first importance that the Review obtain its advertising "copy" earlier.

It is therefore earnestly requested that all advertisers mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday morning, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

The Market.

Supplies to the flower markets continue to dwindle in quantity, while the demand is extremely spasmodic. Good material of any sort is rather scarce but enough for all requirements. In carnations Enchantress is now almost white, but Fair Maid again proves itself a useful summer sort and holds its color well. A few blooms from outdoors are already arriving. These bring fair prices, but many are still cleared out at low rates. Sweet peas were scarce and of poor quality for some days, owing to heavy rains, but are improving again. Those of good quality sell well, but many are quite poor.

Roses are not abundant but a good many poor, short-stemmed ones still arrive and realize little. Lily of the valley continues in good supply. Gypsophila is arriving in quantity, also Achillea The Pearl, and several of the herbaceous phloxes. Some nice Lilium speciosum is coming from one or two growers. The white variety proves useful in funeral work. There is no change in green stock.

Various Notes.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold its annual picnic on July 25 at Waushakum grove, South Framingham, in lieu of Caledonian grove, West Roxbury. The sports committee decided that the latter place was less suitable than the former, hence the change. Special cars on the Boston and Worcester street railway will carry members and friends to the grove. There is a roomy field for baseball and cricket, splendid pine groves, grandstand, etc. The sports committee, consisting of F. E. Palmer, chairman; Edward Hatch, William Sim, Peter Miller and David Lumsden, has been hard at work and has secured a splendid lot of prizes for the various events. An attendance of 500 is expected and a cordial invitation is extended to any who are not members of the club to join in spending an enjoyable day.

In spite of the great fight being made against the brown-tail and gypsy moths by national, state and local authorities this year, it would seem that the first named pest is still spreading at an alarming rate, and will soon be found in quantity outside the confines of New England. The gypsy moth seems to be as destructive as ever, but the strenuous efforts being made to prevent its spread are beginning to tell a little.

The Halifax Garden Co., at Halifax, Mass., is making large additions to its already extensive area of glass. Half a dozen new houses will be built this year, the two largest each 600 feet long. Tomatoes, cucumbers and lettuce occupy a number of houses at present and look first-class.

Carbone had the decorations for the wedding of Senator Crane to Miss Boardman at Manchester on July 10. White orchids were used for the bride's bouquet.

July 15 was the first dry Sunday we had for many weeks. It being St. Swithin day, the proverbial forty days without precipitation was looked for, but a fall of over half an inch of rain early the next morning and other showers since have shattered any such hopes.

The Boston parkways are unusually attractive this year, thanks to the copious rains. At present the loniceras in fruit are especially handsome. A big fight is being put up against the moth pests, several power sprayers being constantly at work.

It will pay florists to attend the sweet pea show at Horticultural hall on July 21 and note the newer kinds on exhibition. We find that fine new orange pink variety, Henry Eckford, is worthless here, as the flowers burn worse than any other sort we have grown, with perhaps the single exception of Scarlet Gem.

W. N. Craig.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

We have certainly had delightful weather here, and just about enough business to give every one left in the shops a little exercise. If one will just consider other seasons, he will be satisfied and then will be able to get more pleasure out of these opportunities for relaxation.

There is nothing out of the ordinary about the wholesale places. A little good stock and not a great deal of poor stock is on hand.

Boat Excursion.

The florists' boat excursion was an immense success. The steamer on which we were to go met with an accident, and at the last minute we changed to the barge Beauty, which was towed by a smaller steamer. But we were better off for room in the way of a larger deck and a dancing saloon. The boat left the wharf at 9:30 and reached the grove shortly after noon, but all had lunched on the boat and were ready to start the sports. At the place we stopped there was a good beach for bathing, and all of the boys from the wholesale houses took to the water for an hour. They had it all to themselves, as no one else joined them. The winners of prizes in the athletic events were: Boys' (6 to 8 years) 100-yard dash, A. Burki; girls' (6 to 8 years) 100-yard dash, Bertha Walters; boys' (9 to 10 years) 100-yard dash, N. Augney; girls' (9 to 10 years) 100-yard dash, Florence Ingham; 100-yard three-legged race, 11 to 13 years, E. Mains and Ed Ludwig; girls' (11 to 13 years) 100-yard dash, Myrtle Kraus; men's 100-yard dash, C. Stewart; 100-yard egg and spoon race, Lena Ludwig; 25-yard potato race, Ed McCollum; 100-yard bag race (14 to 16 years), Fred Holzman; 100-yard dash (growers only), J. Wyland; men's 100-yard dash, A. L. Riley; women's 100-yard dash, Mary Boss; ladies' 100-yard dash, Miss Lease; fat men's 100-yard dash, Ed Smerchel; ladies' 100-yard dash, Carrie Jordan; girls' (14 to 16 years) 100-yard dash, Josephine Henderson; 20-yard peanut race, Vic Mont; fat women's 100-yard dash, Mrs. Palmer; ladies' (17 to 20 years) 100-yard dash, Annie Reibel; boys' (6 to 13 years) 25-yard hopping race, J. Boss; running broad jump (boys 15 to 18 years), Master Geer; running broad jump (men only), J. Gerwig; tug-of-war, won by growers; cakewalk on boat, George Marshall and Miss Carrie Gordan.

The ball game was a hotly contested affair and was much better than the average amateur team puts up. The score at the end of seven innings was eight to eight. When the game stopped in answer to the boat whistle, lots were drawn for the prize, which was won by the growers.

The boys from the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. won all the cash prizes.

One of the features was the number of girls and women, about three for every man.

The steamer arrived in dock at 10 p. m. with everybody tired, but all of one mind that it was the best outing the club has ever given.

Various Notes.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Trade was fair last week and no complaint is made. This week started off with a good shipping demand, but an absence of local buying. Receipts of roses are on the increase, and it is difficult to move the lower grades, although extra Kaiserins bring $10 per hundred. Beauties are rather more abundant, but the best are selling well at regular summer prices. Good carnations are scarce and the receipts of indifferent stock are lighter than at any time this summer, for nearly all growers are now engaged in clearing their houses in preparation for a fresh start.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports the last 100 dozen peonies taken from cold storage Monday morning. One or two others have small lots, but all will be cleaned up within a day or two, although the demand is now light. It has been a fine peony season, lasting ten days later than usual. Auratum lilies have become abundant. There are still plenty of longiflorums, but candidum has passed.

Outdoor flowers are seen in quantity, interest now centering upon the aster crop. The first arrivals were not on time, but this week will see receipts in considerable quantity. It appears that the dry weather in June, for we are more than six inches short of the normal rainfall to date, has seriously affected the aster crop. The plants are small with many growers and are starting to flower weakly on short stems. Those growers who have had better luck will be likely to realize good prices until the later varieties come in, which are said to be in better shape.

Dry weather has also affected the sweet peas. Receipts run into the hundreds of thousands, but quality is in many cases poor, and careless bunching subtracts further from the value of the crop. There is simply an enormous glut of sweet peas now in the market.

Cornflowers, gaillardias, valley, daisies and other items are abundant. Daisies are especially good.

The Way to Do It.

Frank Schramm, who does business under the name of Schramm Bros., Arlington Heights, and has six houses of carnations, says the past season has been an excellent one, both for size of cut and average price of blooms. He says that the grower who takes the money is the one who produces a good medium grade of stock, not the extra fancy stock, nor yet a poor grade, but the kind of stock everybody wants every day. That he is qualified to speak is shown by the fact that he has just invested a part of his surplus in a Thomas flyer, eighteen horse-power, with all the latest automobile fixin's.

The Plant Trade.

The big growers of young plants for the trade have been complaining that the sale of rose stock was not as brisk as it should have been, but in the last few days demand has taken a spurt and stock is going out at a fair rate. The demand for chrysanthemums from small pots is something to marvel at. It seems more and more every year that growers are buying their cuttings or young plants of chrysanthemums from pots instead of propagating their own. There is a prospect of a big sale of field-grown carnation plants. Those growers who have their stock on low ground have fine plants, but those on high ground are suffering from drought. Last Sunday's heavy rains did not reach a number of the carnation fields north and west of town.

Street Men Missed.

It is generally conceded that stock is realizing slightly lower average prices than last year, the decrease falling upon the lower grades, not those used by the better class of stores. In search of an explanation a number of growers have come to the conclusion that it is because street salesmen are not operating. They consider that if a few baskets were on the street the unwieldy accumulation of sweet peas all would be taken care of. Not only would the peas themselves bring a fair return to the grower, but other items, especially those of medium or low grade, would sell much better and the whole tone of the market would be improved. Incidentally, the present complaint of dull local business is largely from down-town stores, where the advertisement formerly afforded by stands now is lacking.

Marriages.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wittbold announce the marriage of their daughter, Marie, to Fletcher A. James, on Wednesday, July 12. Mr. James is carnation foreman for the George Wittbold Co., at Edgebrook. The couple have gone east for a bridal trip.

ASTERS..

In the next week or ten days we will have large supplies of fine Asters. They will be wanted, for Carnations have shortened. Large supplies in all other lines.

Great Grates.

As fast as old grate bars are burned out many growers are putting in the Martin rocking grate. The call for this grate is largely increased by the fact that the growers who have used it for one or more seasons are almost without exception equipping other boilers with it. The grate costs considerably more than the stationary bars, but is figured to make a decided saving in fuel, and that is what all the growers are after.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a fairly well attended meeting July 12. A goodly delegation is promised for Dayton. President Hauswirth reached home July 15, from a trip of two months to California, and will have some interesting experiences to relate at the next session.

Otto Ristow has thrown out his roses and is replanting with carnations. A number of the growers north of town are beginning benching field-grown plants.

W. W. Barnard Co. has first Harrissii in this week.

E. F. Winterson is suffering with rheumatism.

Of. C. A. Samuelson's staff, Eisner is now at Antioch, and upon his return a week hence Enders will take to the woods.

Alex Newett, of the J. B. Deamud Co., is with his family at the old home on the farm near Joliet.

The Chicago Rose Co. is beginning to cut young rose stock, and the plants are reported as looking fine. Wire work business shows no let-down with them.

A. L. Randall, who is summering on his peach farm on the St. Joe river, comes over every Saturday for a day at the store.

Mrs. W. W. Randall went to Michigan on Monday, and "Web" is now a summer bachelor.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of Amling's, is spending a week fishing, and next week will go to Cincinnati with his family for a visit.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. received 11,000 tea roses from New Castle Sunday and 10,000 Monday. This is the last crop from the old plants.

O. W. Frese, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., is on vacation this week.

In Sunday's big rain a stopped-up sewer forced the Kennicott Bros. Co. to take in six inches of water. They 'phoned for a fire engine to pump them out and the chief, the hook and ladder, the chemical engine and the whole outfit responded. The basement under the Central Floral Co. also was flooded.

Not all the retailers are closing at 6 p. m., but those who stay open do not do enough business so that it affects the majority.

At E. H. Hunt's they have a label rack which does away with the "post-office" which has heretofore been a feature of all commission houses. The post by the water tap is encircled by a wire frame with a hanger for the numbered labels of each growth. The labels are perforated. It is much more convenient than the old method.

Monday, July 16, Kennicotts shipped eight dozen peonies to New Orleans that were cut June 5 and had been in cold storage forty days. The variety was Queen Victoria and its keeping qualities are such that E. E. Pieser had no doubt of their standing the journey well.

August Gutzloe, a gardener and florist at the east end of Chicago avenue, was thrown into jail when he went to a police station to complain of a nuisance, and the daily papers are making much of it.

Interest in the bowling team increases as the time for the Dayton convention approaches. Tuesday evening a large number of contestants attended the weekly "bowl-fest" at Bensinger's alleys.

Visitors.

There have been a number of visitors in town this week. Among them were the Bertermann brothers, of Indianapolis, with their families, on the way to South Haven for an outing; H. M. Altick, Dayton, O., working up interest in the great convention to be held in the Ohio town next month; Armin J. Baur, of the Baur Floral Co., Erie, Pa., on his way to visit his brother at Indianapolis; H. L. Kennedy, Carrollton, Mo., who made the trip of 500 miles on his bicycle; P. Kapsalis, of the Kapsalis Floral Co., Milwaukee.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market is literally dead at times, and during the last week, if not dead, then sleeping. Stock is poor in quality and there is little of it; there was hardly enough Saturday to go around, and yet there was only a slight demand. The call from Newport amounts to little, except for orchids. Window decorations are largely of ferns, from the graceful

The Busiest Thing You Know

Anywhere and everywhere dampness is likely to cause RUST or DECAY. You are familiar with the amount of damage done through Rust to all iron work around a Greenhouse. It works all the time and works harm. The boilers, piping, iron smoke stacks, steam traps, pumps, engines and windwills are all easily affected. The use of Mindura kills rust and will prevent further formation of rust already formed. It is the only paint that really resists moisture.

cibotium to the rugged Boston, with Elegantissima, Whitmani and Scottii all as popular as ever. There are a few good roses and carnations. Weather conditions are favorable. If the weather would remain as it is, New York would be a delightful summer resort. All the wholesale stores now close at 4 o'clock, and will continue to do so until September.

Tuesday, July 17, we had one of the hottest days of the summer, followed by a terrific storm which was heavier over in Jersey than it was in the city. It is feared that outdoor stock suffered severely.

The Dayton Trip.

Interest in the Dayton convention is growing every day, and now that this great annual reunion is but a few weeks distant, one may safely begin to estimate the attendance from the east. The transportation committee of the New York Florists' Club has arranged to travel by the New York Central via Niagara Falls, with stop-over privileges. The South-western Limited will leave the Grand Central station at 2 p. m. August 20, and will arrive at Dayton at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning. A special Pullman will be afforded the conventionists, and two of them if necessary.

It is expected that the Boston and New England contingent will join the train at Albany; on the way the Buffalonians will be "lifted," and it is expected that the Clevelanders will also join the procession. Doubtless, too, the Detroit host will by this time have arrived by boat at Cleveland, so that a multitude of several hundred should come down from the north to Dayton. We count on at least fifty from New York and the immediate vicinity. The fare for the round trip will be $22.67 and the extra charge for Pullman $4. Doubtless many will avail themselves of the opportunity of a visit to the Falls, with a side trip to Toronto on the return, and altogether this promises to be one of the most enjoyable excursions and conventions the society ever has known.

Messrs. Sheridan, Nugent and Treandly compose the transportation committee of the club, and those desiring berths reserved for them can notify any of these gentlemen at once, and accommodations will be secured.

Various Notes.

The exodus to Europe continues. J. H. Troy leaves next week for his annual business and pleasure trip, and will attend the international conference on plant breeding, July 30, in London, England. Mr. Ward will also leave during the coming week, and Louis Schmutz sailed last Saturday for his native country, France, his first trip in many years. On Friday Mr. Mills, of Helena, Mont., sailed on the Celtic. Early next month Phil Kessler, of the Coogan building, will visit Germany.

F. Lautenschlager, with Kroeschell Bros., Chicago, left the city Saturday by boat for Washington.

On Saturday Miss Bertha Lawson, of George Saltford's place, left for Dutchess county.

In nearly all the retail stores, the annual rejuvenation is in progress, and everything is being made spick and span for the coming season. Many of the craft are summering at the seashore, coming in daily to headquarters.

Herman Warendorff and family are at Averne-by-the-Sea. Mr. Warendorff has lately purchased a large tract of land on Long Island, near Babylon, which will doubtless rise greatly in value during the coming year.

The park department in Brooklyn is waging a twenty-thousand-dollar war against the caterpillars, the little pests giving the commissioners no end of trouble. G. M. Geraghty, of Donahue's, is spending the summer at his old home in Denver.

Importations of supplies from the European market are beginning to arrive, the result of the personal selections of Messrs. Reed, Hermann and Geller; there are many novelties among them.

The Limprecht Florists' Supply Co. is refitting its building, so badly damaged by the fire a few weeks ago. Max Limprecht, who has been dangerously ill for so long, gives some promise of recovery.

John J. Foley, 226 Bowery, is summering at his home in Madison. He reports no diminution in business on account of the hot weather, and a steady demand for his floral photographs.

James M. Thorburn & Co., the seedsmen, after many weeks of work in moving, have now occupied their new five-story building at 33 Barclay street, where their facilities cannot be excelled.

During June the number of new telephones installed in New York City was 3,591. This is of importance to every user, including all florists, for it increases by just so many the number of persons with whom business may be transacted by phone. The telephone is a mighty important factor to many lines of business, but to none is it of greater importance than to the florists. Many fashionable retailers do the bulk of their business over the phone and wholesalers do much in that way. The long-distance is taking the place of the telegraph for ordering cut stock to be shipped to out-of- town dealers.

The Julius Roehrs Co. is building four large houses, 30x150, for the growing of orchids exclusively. When completed, this great plant will include nearly 100 houses, all modernized and filled with a grand stock of every description. Bay trees of every variety and size are in great demand this year. The growing appreciation of the orchid in every city of any importance in the country is here realized and the prophetic eye of the senior member of the company sees in the near future a demand that present growing will be far inadequate to supply.

Igoe Bros. have removed from 226 North Ninth street to 63-71 Metropolitan avenue, Brooklyn.

J. E. Hoffmire, of McHutchison & Co., sails for Europe today on the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria.

Steamer work has shown a most encouraging increase over other seasons, and every retailer acknowledges the help this has afforded in the otherwise abnormally dull July. Donohue had many fine baskets for the Kaiser Wilhelm on Tuesday.

Wadley & Smythe had the table decorations at Delmonico's Monday evening, at the dinner given in honor of the French admiral. The entire scheme was in red, gladioli and Victory carnations being used exclusively. Mr. Smythe left for Newport on Tuesday and anticipates a strenuous season there.

Charles Schenck is back from a two weeks' stay in the mountains, with the Misses Schenck, brown as a berry and gathering energy for what he claims will be the biggest fall and winter season New York has ever known. He left for a water trip to Portland, Me., on Tuesday. Mr. Traendly will take his outing at Dayton.

Fleischman's big store on Fifth avenue has been closed for the summer.

Alex McConnell's new store in the Arcade proves to be in size and convenience just what the veteran has needed for years. Many handsome floral pieces were furnished by Mr. McConnell for the funeral of the son of H. McKay Twombly last week.

J. B. Heiss, Dayton, O., is in town on convention matters. J. Austin Shaw.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business is at its lowest ebb. There are probably fewer cut flowers coming in town this week than at any previous time during the season. The features of the market, if we may use that term, are the increase in asters, white predominating, and some very choice sweet peas coming in from a distance. Gladioli are plentiful.

A Correction.

The following letter from Charles E. Meehan, of the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market, is self-explanatory:

the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market. We had no interest in the game at all and none of our employees were players. When we play a game we will have the nerve to come out under our own name."

A Wholesaler's View.

A prominent wholesaler, in discussing the Florists' Protective Association of Philadelphia, said that it has two strong points in its favor. It will benefit him by enabling him to meet his obligations promptly, and it will benefit his customers by compelling their competitors to sell at a fair price. Under such an arrangement no reputable retailer need fear unfair competition from those who wish to shirk their obligations.

The Express Problem.

Edward Reid, chairman of the Florists' Club committee on express suits, has made a thorough study of the subject of the relations between the companies and their patrons. Mr. Reid believes that the next clear case of delayed shipment of cut flowers, if properly brought before the company, can be settled, or won in court should the company decline to settle, and that such a case should be used as a precedent on future occasions.

Various Notes.

William R. Gibson, formerly with Pennock Bros., of this city, now with the J. M. Connelly Co., Charleston, S. C., was seen in M. Rice & Co.'s one day this week. Mr. Gibson, who is looking well, is on a visit to his family in this city. He speaks enthusiastically of the possibilities in Charleston. The confidence of the flower-buying public there, once secured, is easily held. There are no local growers, flowers being obtained from Philadelphia, and, at times, from Savannah and Atlanta. The southern-grown stock is of fine quality during the winter months, but climatic conditions make it impossible to produce high-grade flowers during warm weather.

Walter P. Stokes told a correspondent of the REVIEW that he had done more business during the first fortnight of July than was done by the old firm of Johnson & Stokes during the corresponding period last year.

Paul J. Klingporn opened the Rosary Flower Shop at 2029 South Fifteenth street last Tuesday. This store was formerly occupied by Charles P. Poryzees. Mr. Klingporn, who first managed the cut flower department for H. Waterer, seedsman, on Seventh street, below Chestnut, was afterwards right-hand man for George M. Moss, wholesale florist, 32 South Seventeenth street, and later manager for Dumont & Co., 1305 Filbert street. Mr. Klingporn has the best wishes of his friends.

John Jensen, the popular florist of West Philadelphia, has started on a trip to his old home in Denmark. His friends wish him bon voyage.

W. E. McKissick is receiving some very high grade sweet peas.

There are now three who have the courage to say "profession"; D. Fuerstenburg, A. Farenwald and Phil. Robert Kift will undoubtedly be the fourth. No man who writes such poetic and inspiring articles about what we have done for mankind can much longer remain in darkness.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving some fine white asters.

Mr. and Mrs. William Blacker, of Clearfield, were in this city recently on their way to Atlantic City.

A prominent member of the Florists' Protective Association states that I was in error last week in saying that the rules of the association apply only to Philadelphia and Camden counties. They are operative wherever the members do business.

William J. Baker is receiving choice Queen Alexandra daisies. PHIL.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The conditions of the market remain about the same as last week, except that roses are more plentiful. They are shipped in from Chicago, as home-grown ones are very scarce and poor in quality. Sweet peas are more plentiful. There were only a few weddings this week and most of them used sweet peas and snapdragons for their decorations. The weather has been delightful, cool, and with plenty of fresh air for this month. We need rain badly, for carnations are growing very slowly. If we don't have rain soon there will be quite a number of small carnations housed next month. Asters out of doors are heavy in bud, and a few of the early varieties are coming in bloom now.

Various Notes.

vacant. We all wish him a speedy recovery.

Ernest Groshuff, head gardener at the soldiers' home at Fort Leavenworth for the past four years, has accepted a position with the city park board. He is now in charge of the flower beds between Ninth and Eighteenth streets, on the Paseo. Mr. Groshuff believes in lots of water, for he is surely pouring it on the beds. The plants were very small when first set out, but if cared for as he does it, they will be large and fine by September.

Ed. Humfeld left Wednesday on a trip to Omaha to visit friends and to see how the florists are doing things up there. He will be gone several weeks. Alexander Kerr is in full charge of the place during Mr. Humfeld's absence.

The Kansas City Floral Co. sold its store this week to Mr. Papadakos, of the Owl Floral Co. Mr. Shaeffer, the retired florist, who is now in the real estate business, transacted the sale. Mr. Papadakos now has two stores within a block of each other. He is quite a hustler, and comes from Chicago. The store he bought is one of the oldest stands on Walnut street, and was formerly owned by John Schneider.

Mrs. Beidermann, the South Prospect avenue florist, is still at her usual place in the market with her wagon full of plants. She now has quite a large lot of yellow coreopsis with excellent stems, in fact the finest we have seen this season. She sells them at 15 cents a dozen or 50 cents a hundred wholesale. She also does a large business in bouquets of mixed flowers.

Mr. Thornhill, the Rosedale florist, can be seen on the market with plants. He also raises fruit, such as apples and grapes. He raises quite a lot of cannas which he stores under the benches; and they seem to keep to perfection.

Andrew Arnold had a fine trade this year. He is now grading and leveling off a large space for hotbed frames. He intends to raise vegetables and plants for the city market. He also grows bedding plants. His greenhouses are located in the eastern part of the city near Sheffield. Andy is an industrious young man and we wish him success.

A plant agent claiming to represent a large firm of St. Joseph, with headquarters somewhere in the east or north, rang the door-bell at a large residence the other day, and the first thing that he said was, "I have come to see about replacing five rose bushes that have been reported to us as dead, that we furnished a year or so ago." The man at the door said that he had never bought any roses from his firm. "Yes, but you must have, as I have the report and have come to see about them." After a long confidential talk, trying to make the gentleman believe that his firm always made everything right, the agent finally succeeded in getting an order for $9.00 worth of stock. BUSY.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business is dull and few if any of the dealers are doing much. What little is being done is in funeral work. Stock is not plentiful by any means. Roses are very scarce and what few are brought in by the growers are of an inferior grade. Carnations are small and inferior and are not worth more than 25 cents per dozen. There seems to be an exceptionally heavy demand for sweet peas, and it is hard to know where to buy them in this locality.

Summer prices have kept up nicely in nearly every instance. Roses are sold for $1.50 per dozen.

St. Paul.

The Ramaley Floral Co. reports business as fair; this firm is carrying a good stock for this time of the season.

The Swanson Floral Co. reports that trade is good. Last week it had a large wedding out of town.

L. L. May & Co. have received a large importation of palms, which came through in fine shape. Mr. and Mrs. May have just returned from the seedsmen's convention at Toledo.

From all reports the florists' picnic, which will be held Thursday, July 19 (today), will be well attended, as all, with but few exceptions, have agreed to take it in. A trip down the Mississippi river is a fine thing this warm weather, and an enjoyable time is looked forward to. Minneapolis will send a large contingent.

Minneapolis.

Even when the thermometer is 85 and 90 degrees in the shade, the New York Floral Co. has its windows packed full of carnations at 25 cents a dozen, and from all reports is successful in selling them. Trade the last season has been good with them, and what profit they have made has been entirely on carnations, as they handle no roses to speak of.

James Souden has been kept very busy at the greenhouses and is not to be seen in the store very much.

The Donaldson Glass Block Co. seems to be doing a fair trade.

Carl Johansen, of the Powers Mercantile Co., says trade is only fair, but it compares favorably with last year's business.

The Whitted Floral Co. has its new store fixed up in good shape. There are a number of new fixtures, including a refrigerator counter, which adds greatly to the appearance. FELIX.

DORCHESTER, MASS.—Carl J. Dane has discontinued his greenhouse business here.

CARLISLE, PA.—Martin Hays succeeds W. H. Leaman as florist at the Indian school. Mr. Leaman expects to go south.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

THE Reynolds Seed and Commission Co., East St. Louis, has increased its capital stock from $5,000 to $10,000.

W. W. BARNARD, Chicago, is at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., where he will stay during the harvesting of the pea crop.

THE Holloway Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, Tex., will occupy a new two-story and basement brick building, to be built at once on West Elm street. The structure will be 30x150 feet.

THE boat from Bermuda reaching New York Friday, July 13, brought the main shipment of Harrisii bulbs for this season. The total was 3,238 cases, which, with consignments of late dug stock yet to come, would indicate a crop equal in quantity to that of any recent year, but the smaller sizes were greatly in the majority. Growers hope that the popular superstition as to the unfortunate significance of the day and date of arrival will not be apparent in the forcing qualities of the bulbs.

VISITED BOSTON: John C. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago.

THE onion set harvest at Louisville, Ky., is well under way and the crop is falling much below that of last year.

BULLETIN No. 239, published by the Agricultural Experiment Station of Cornell University, contains valuable information on some of the diseases of beans.

JUDGING from some of the California growers' latest reports, onion seed will not be so scarce as the previous advices indicated. Estimates of what a growing crop may produce are more or less unreliable anyway.

E. NEUBERT, Wandsbek, Germany, writes that in the opening paragraph of his notes on lily of the valley, published May 31, a stenographic error made him advise the use of the Berlin early-forcing pips for cold storage purposes, although the article made clear that the opposite was his intention.

WITH the canners of peas the situation is said to be getting serious. A great deal now depends upon the Wisconsin pack, as the south was very short; New York state packers will deliver only sixty to seventy-five per cent of the orders, and the Michigan output is reported to be short. Buyers are showing anxiety to secure additional supplies.

G. B. McVay.

The Vice-Presidents of the American Seed Trade Association.

THE Cox Seed Co., San Francisco, has leased a store on Market street, near California, for a term of years.

A REPORT just at hand from a Canadian pea growing station states that much damage to the pea crop has been caused by recent severe rains.

The situation on onion sets remains unchanged. The rains at the end of last week, which fell copiously over the whole of the Chicago section, came too late to give any material increase in the product, and it is a question whether it did not do some harm. A shortage compared with last year's crop at Louisville and Indianapolis, with no increase anywhere else, means a whole lot to the grower who has not already disposed of what he will harvest.

REPORTS in general show normal conditions all along the line. Peas are doing well, Alaska and other standard earlies being well advanced. Wonder and other dwarf sorts give promise of fair crops. Telephone and most of the main crop sorts are making a good show of vine and in many cases setting pods. Beans look promising. The wax sorts are doing better than common thus far. Green-podded sorts are pushing along. Valentines and stringless seem to be doing all that is expected of them. The Michigan vine crops look seasonable and there are no adverse reports from the plantings of other varieties of garden seeds in that section.

THE VICE-PRESIDENTS.

G. B. McVay.

G. B. McVay, first vice-president of the American Seed Trade Association, was raised on a farm in Texas, and educated in the public schools and university of that state. He was married in 1890, at the age of 20 years, and removed to Birmingham, Ala., where he now lives with a family of five children. In 1891 he secured a position with Amzi Godden, then a prominent retail druggist at Birmingham, as prescription clerk. Five years later the business was incorporated as the Amzi Godden Co., and he was taken in the company as secretary. In the meantime the company was pushing the seed business as a side line, having issued its first catalogue in 1893. A short time after, the company sold out its retail drug stores and engaged in the wholesale drug business, and opened up an exclusive seed business in another building. The company sold out the wholesale drug business in 1900, and since then its interests have been exclusively in the seed business. August 1, 1905, the company was reorganized, under the name of Amzi Godden Seed Co., with paid-in capital of $40,000.

Mr. McVay is president of the company. He is by profession a chemist and pharmacist, and at one time was president of the Alabama Pharmaceutical Association. Mr. McVay is also interested in the manufacture of fertilizers, being a director in the Jefferson Fertilizer Co.

C. S. Burge.

C. S. Burge, the second vice-president of the association, has been identified with the seed business from early youth. Mr. Burge was born in Maumee, Ohio, November 24, 1868. In March, 1882, he removed to Toledo, and two years later, when 16 years of age, he became an employee of S. W. Flower, who was engaged in the seed business. Mr. Burge later, in 1892, became active manager of the business, in which capacity he has continued until the present. He is now a partner in the firm of S. W. Flower & Co., wholesale field seed merchants. He has active control of the business, although Mr. Flower still holds an interest.

Mr. Burge is first vice-president of the Dollar Savings Bank & Trust Co., and

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The recent dry weather throughout England has considerably affected the length of the pea haulm, and judging by the short appearance of the straw, one would suppose the crop to be light, but as far as I can at present see the crops of garden peas generally are exceptionally well podded, and if nothing happens between now and harvest to upset the calculations, the pea crop will be an average one.

Beans are very poor, the straw being quite too short to make a full crop in most instances. Mangels and beets are looking none too well, either in England or in any other district of Europe. Beets especially are looking bad all over Europe and a short crop is expected. Swede crops in England will probably be heavy, although turnips and most of the brassica tribe appear to be rather poor.

Onions are in a rather poor way all over Europe and especially does this apply to Italy and southern cultivations. It is, however, astonishing what an improvement the last few weeks of summer weather have made to all seed crops. In many cases where light crops were expected, the growths have so wonderfully improved that a full crop is now expected.

The lifting all over the bulb fields of Holland is now in full swing. The tulips are turning out a poor crop and some failures may be expected in next season's blooming. Hyacinths are a fine crop. Crocuses are a little dearer, owing probably to a less quantity being grown, but quality will be good. Daffodils are a fine crop, but owing to the much increased demand no reduction in price will likely occur.

English clover is looking in many cases extra well, with a fine, even and clean growth and a full crop of blooms. Some few fields of white which I looked over recently were grand. B. J.

NOTES FROM HOLLAND.

Now that the general crop of tulips may be said to have been lifted, it appears that with few exceptions the crop is a decidedly short one. Those fields that did not suffer in May from the so-called blight in the foliage, have proved to produce a very superior crop to the places that did suffer so much during May. At present it is still doubtful what really causes this blight in the foliage, but that it spreads with great rapidity wherever it makes its appearance, and, in consequence, affects the growth of the foliage, and the more or less satisfactory crop of the tulips, is without doubt. One of the largest growers is at present engaged in making minute and extensive trials in this respect, and we may shortly expect to see the publication of the results of these trials in the trade papers. The many complaints that have been heard lately from both England and Germany in regard to bedding tulips, partly failing to come, or only making a weakly and unsatisfactory growth, go to show that this point should receive a more careful investigation as to the real cause on both sides of the channel.

The hyacinth crop, which has only been partially lifted, has not given any cause for complaint, but as the main crop of salable bulbs will not be out of the ground until the middle of July, nothing definite can yet be said. It is, however, very likely that the crocus crop will be a poor one and that quantities on hand will be sold out early in the season. Narcissi and irises are all looking well and promise to give a fine crop, but it should not be overlooked that, owing to the prevailing low prices, the stocks of these are not so large as they used to be, and should there be anything like a fair demand there will not be any surplus, as was the case during the last two seasons. The cleaning and curing of all these millions of bulbs is now requiring the help of many hundreds of hands, and if the present dry and warm weather will only continue, this process may be expected to be finished within two or three weeks.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

RUST-RESISTING CANTALOUPES.

In a recent bulletin of the Colorado Experiment Station P. H. Blinn reports the discovery by a local grower of a rust-resisting cantaloupe which promises to be of immense value to the Rocky Ford cantaloupe industry. In this case seed of the Rocky Ford variety was purchased from five different seedsmen. They were planted and cultivated under similar conditions. When rust attacked the field just before the melons began to ripen, it developed rapidly and soon destroyed all the vines except those grown from the seed of one seedsman. Many of the hills from this strain of Rocky Ford seed remained green throughout the season and produced a good crop of melons. Further observations in the muskmelon fields of that neighborhood also showed that wherever this strain of Rocky Ford seed had been used many hills were unaffected with rust, while with other strains of seed of the same variety the vines were all dead.

Mr. Blinn selected a quantity of seed from the rust-resistant hills and planted them in comparison with ordinary seed. "On the rust-resisting hills the melons were hidden under a healthy growth of vines, and were large, solidly netted, with thick, firm flesh, small seed cavity completely filled with seed. On the rusted hills the plants were almost devoid of leaves and the small melons were prematurely ripe, with thin, watery flesh, large, open seed cavity, and practically of no market value."

In tracing back the history of this strain of seed it was found that some years before a seedsman had saved the first lot from a single healthy melon taken from a field of rusted vines. It had therefore been developed by the simple process of saving seed from the best melons produced by plants which withstood attacks of rust when surrounding plants were destroyed by this disease. The point to be emphasized is that improvements in varieties nearly always trace back to individual plants.

RUST ON BRASSICAS.

One of the British Board of Agriculture leaflets deals with the white rust that attacks the cabbage family. The weed shepherd's purse is said to be the most prevalent cause of the spread of this disease. This weed appears to flourish and is quite happy when harboring the fungoid. Years ago I used to notice crops of the cabbage family and also turnip and others of the like kind badly attacked, and in nearly all cases I remember the ground was thickly covered with shepherd's purse. At that time we used to think the disease simply spread to the weed from the crop, never once thinking the weed was the main and primary subject of attack. As with most other fungous diseases, there does not appear to be any remedy except rooting up and burning the plants affected. No matter at what stage of growth they may be in, the trouble may easily be detected, as it forms whitish fluffy swellings on leaf and stem, often drawing the stalks and stems up into various contortions. When shaken in the slightest, the powdery mass will float in tne air like fine flour. B. J.

THE BARTELDES BUILDING.

The architects' drawing of the proposed seed warehouse of Barteldes & Co. is printed on the real estate page of the Denver Post with the following comment:

"One of the most significant incidents in the improvement of the trackage district of Denver is the building of the seed warehouse of Barteldes & Co., on the southeast corner of Sixteenth and Wynkoop streets, at a cost of $50,000, work on which already has been started. The building will be 50x125 feet in extent, with five stories and basement. The structure will be the heaviest in Denver, each floor being calculated to carry a pressure of 600 pounds to the square foot. Mill construction will be used throughout. The offices will be on the second floor, connected by bridge with the Sixteenth street viaduct. The exterior will be of dark red pressed brick, with red stone trimmings. The building will be completed September 1."

Boone, Ia.—F. J. Olsan is building a new greenhouse and will install three boilers, two for regular use and one for emergency.

Frank B. White, Chicago, reports that he knows of an eastern mail order seed house, established thirty years, which has an opening for a live, up-to-date office man and advertising manager, who will take a small block of stock in the company.

ELMSFORD, N. Y.

A new range of glass in course of erection here is for Scott Bros., the firm being composed of the well-known and capable William and James T. Scott. They are erecting a modern range of greenhouses, and will make a specialty of grafted roses, up-to-date carnations, gardenias and fine foliage plants, also handling a general line of bedding and other plants. Their nursery contains thirty acres of good land and will be gradually stocked with fine evergreen and deciduous trees, and they will also grow an up-to-date collection of herbaceous plants.

William Scott has been superintendent on the Eastman estate at Tarrytown for the past twelve years, and the stock he has grown has received high honors on the exhibition table. He will devote the whole of his time to the growing department.

James T. Scott has been employed for the past two and a half years as traveling salesman by the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, and in the landscape department, and will continue in the same lines. It is a good team and one likely to make a conspicuous success.

DENVER.

State of Trade.

The regular summer dullness is now on, although there has not been much complaint as yet. In fact, last week all the stores reported a fairly good business in the cut flower line. General business being good in Denver, the florists come in for their share. The Elks' holding their convention here has caused much money to be spent for decorations. The city has taken on a gala appearance.

The Grand Army decorations last year were elaborate, but they do not compare with what are now up. There are many prizes given for store and residence decorations, the flower stores working hard for some of them, and some of their artists helping out other lines.

Stock is coming in fairly well. Many roses have a parched foliage and are mildewed. This is particularly true of Bride and Maid, as some fine Chatenay are seen. Beauties still are fine with some growers and sell well.

Carnations, while abundant, are poor, causing a drop in prices. Some good Lawson and Enchantress are seen, white perhaps being the poorest.

Sweet peas are now coming in quantities and not many have gone into the waste bag. The ruling price for first-class stock is 25 cents per hundred. Other outdoor flowers, such as daisies, larkspur, candytuft, feverfew, etc., are plentiful. The market is well supplied with greens at the usual prices.

Various Notes.

One of the most fashionable weddings which ever took place in Denver was the Hughes-Morris ceremony, July 14. The chapter-house of St. John's cathedral was never more elaborately decorated. It was like a garden. At intervals down the center aisle were bay trees. Tied at the ends of the pews and on the altar were clusters of tiger lilies. The posts, the chancel and the choir were wound and festooned with ropes of evergreens, and quantities of ferns and palms were used. The bride's bouquet was of valley and white orchids. The reception which followed was held on the beautiful grounds which surround the Hughes residence. Bay trees and palms were added to the shrubs outdoors. The veranda resembled a tropical garden. Quantities of asparagus were used in the house. As the bridal couple departed, they were showered with quantities of rose leaves, which were used instead of rice. Their private car had been elaborately decorated with flowers and looked like a rose garden. The work was by B. E. Gillis, of the Park Floral Co.

All the large stores are closing at 6:30 p. m. during July and August, and at noon on Sunday.

We expect to see several members of the craft here this week, as there are numbers coming from the west who are Elks. E. S. K.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Hail Breaks Glass.

A severe hail storm visited this city July 12, and did a great deal of damage to vegetation in its path, all gardens being stripped. A. Wiegand & Sons' greenhouses were strictly in it, and paid the penalty. Fortunately this firm is insured against hail. Besides the loss in glass a great many plants were badly cut up, including a fine lot of 200 rubber plants. The greenhouse at the water works is a complete wreck, also the small park maintained by the company. Besides this storm, this section has had many good showers, that have kept all field stock in fine growing condition.

Various Notes.

Tom Hart, the veteran grower, is going to remodel his place this summer, and will add more glass. He expects to heat with flues.

John Hartje is about to sell his property on Illinois street, and will move his houses to a tract of land he owns west of the city.

The usual summer slump is here, not much being done except funeral work. All kinds of outdoor stock can be had in any quantity wanted.

Ed. J. Brown, of Shelbyville, is able to be around again. He took a course of treatment at West Baden, that did him much good.

The city is going to erect a palm house at Riverside park in the near future, the start of a botanic garden. S.

OLD ORCHARD, ME.—Mr. and Mrs. George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill., are here, at the Ocean House, for a fortnight's stay.

DETROIT.

The Market.

As is to be expected, business is at a standstill; even in funeral work there is very little doing. Stock is mostly poor, roses and carnations in particular. Sweet peas are good.

Various Notes.

Thanks to the weather man, the club had a beautiful day for the annual outing July 10, at Belle Isle park. No one was working but William Brown, who as chairman of the entertainment committee was kept busy. He deserves a lot of thanks, for the outing will long be remembered, as all participants had a most enjoyable time.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, was a recent visitor among the trade here.

The Market.

Business continues about the same as last week; taking all of the week through, it is holding out pretty well for this time of year. The short supply of stock is one of the main reasons why trade is not better. The demand is good, and with a supply of stock at all adequate to meet it, business would be a great deal better. But as stock is always scarce at this season of the year we have no complaint coming.

White flowers are in the heaviest demand, and they are sold out long before pink and red are cleaned up, but by the time that the morning's business is over there is nothing worth having in any of the commission houses. White roses and carnations are all ordered before they come in. Sweet peas are selling first-class. Gladioli are doing nicely. Lilies are not equal to the demand and the price is held up to the top notch on them. Candytuft, feverfew and sweet alyssum are selling out well. Green goods are also in for a good share of the demand.

We are having a great deal of rain this summer, and in consequence outdoor flowers and plants are in fine condition. The bedding all through the suburbs is looking first-class, and the lawns are in great shape. Carnations in the field had a very good season. The greater number of growers in this locality are about through housing their carnations.

Various Notes.

A meeting of the Florists' Society was held in the club-room Saturday evening. A report from the picnic committee showed everything to be in first-class shape. All arrangements have been made and a great time is assured all who go. The committee has been greatly encouraged by the tickets that are being sold, which indicate a very good attendance. A program has been issued, and judging from the number of events that will take place, every minute of the time from morning till night will be taken up. The committee on transportation to the S. A. F. convention reported that the C. H. & D. had been selected as the official route. The Cincinnati party will leave Tuesday, August 21, at 8:15 a. m. The rate will be $2.20 for the round trip. Tickets will be good returning at any time. Those of the party who will be obliged to return the same day can do so, leaving Dayton at 8:35 p. m. Those who want any further information can obtain it by addressing the writer at 113 East Third street, Cincinnati.

ELLIS, MASS.—Peter Fisher announces that he will next winter disseminate his new orange-scarlet carnation, Beacon, the distribution being made jointly with the Cottage Gardens Co.

PACIFIC COAST.

San Diego, Cal.—The Ford Tropical Nursery is no longer in business at this place. Mark the name off your mailing lists.

Santa Cruz, Cal.—W. E. King reports local trade as good as ever, but trade with San Francisco is gone for the time being.

PORTLAND, ORE.

There has not been much doing here this month so far, and our chief occupation at present is trying to keep cool. The hottest wave that has struck Oregon in several years blew in on the Fourth, and is killing business, flowers and everything. We had a good June, plenty of wedding work and school commencement exercises.

Harry Millatt is going to the convention, and will leave here the second week in August for the far east. H. J. M.

NURSERYMEN MEET.

The Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen held a well attended and enthusiastic meeting at Tacoma July 11 to 13. Officers were elected as follows: President, F. W. Powers, Chico, Cal.; vice-presidents, W. D. Ingalls, North Yakima; C. W. Howard, Riverside, Cal.; C. F. Lansing, Oregon City; M. J. Henry, Vancouver, B. C.; C. P. Hartley, Caldwell, Idaho; P. A. Dix, Salt Lake City; secretary-treasurer, C. A. Tonneson, Tacoma. The following committee was appointed on adjustment of difficulties: S. A. Miller, Milton, Ore.; W. D. Ingalls, North Yakima; H. A. Lewis, Portland.

C. N. Young read a paper on "Beautifying the Home." M. McDonald, of Salem, Ore., talked on the growth of English walnuts in Oregon and Washington. A. Brownell, of Albany, Ore., made an address on "Insect Pests and Their Relation to the Nurserymen and Orchardists." A talk by W. S. Thornber, of the state experimental school at Pullman, on "Co-operative Work of Nurseries and Experiment Stations" produced a long discussion, finally eliciting a consensus of opinion of the delegates that this state is urgently in need of two experimental stations, owing to the great difference in climatic conditions of eastern and western Washington. J. G. Hopkins read a paper on "Rose Growing."

North Yakima and Salem, Ore., were bidders for the next convention of the association, the delegates finally deciding to meet next July at the Oregon capital.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There is very little difference in the aspect of business at this time and that of July one year ago. We have only about one quarter the number of retail stores, and they handle the business for about half our customary population. The weather has turned very warm again, and according to the predictions of the weather prophet we may expect considerably more of the same thing. There is considerable demand for good white stock of all kinds. Bride roses and fancy white carnations are being handled in good quantities. For other kinds of stock there is little demand. Shipments to the country have ceased almost entirely. Occasional demands for funeral flowers or designs keep that portion of the trade alive.

A great many of San Francisco's wealthy inhabitants are at the various summer resorts or the seashore, and as a consequence there is almost nothing doing socially. The month of June was fully up to the mark on the score of weddings, and although elaborate functions were hardly the rule, quite a large quantity of good stock was constantly used.

In Oakland and Alameda normal conditions prevail. All the retailers report fair business for the month, with prospects for a good fall trade.

Various Notes.

H. Otsupo has purchased three acres of land in Elmhurst, and will improve the property in the near future. He will erect three houses for carnations and two for roses.

Alex. Frey, until recently employed by Shibeley, the florist, has removed to Oakland.

H. Hayashi, of Alameda, has built an asparagus house on his Elmhurst property, 25x100 feet in size.

John Young, of the Dwight-Way Nursery, Berkeley, will take a trip to southern California in a few days. He expects to be gone two months.

The Cox Seed Co. has leased a store on Market street, near California, for a term of years. They expect to be ready for business about the first of August.

John Vallance is on a trip through Lake county and the northern part of the state. He will return to town about the first of September.

Thorsted & Co. expect to dispose of some of their Fruitvale holdings. They have several valuable pieces of property on Fruitvale avenue.

A visit to the conservatories of Sievers & Co., on Van Ness avenue, will well repay a lover of flowers at this time. The display of ferns, palms and begonias is the finest ever shown by this firm.

W. W. Saunders is on a month's trip to Fresno, Cal. G.

PACIFIC COAST ROSES.

I have made several tours among our principal rose growers, and from indications there will be but a small percentage of the usual crop to be offered to the public for the coming winter. There has been such a poor demand for this flower for the last three months that at least fifty per cent of the houses have been allowed to dry out four months ahead of the usual time. There seems to be

HYDRANGEAS FOR SUMMER BLOOMING :::

WE have a magnificent lot of Hydrangea Otaksa grown especially for July and August Flowering. Plants are just coming into bloom, just beginning to show color, and will be in perfection during July and August, when they are in great demand at watering places and other summer resorts. There is nothing showier or more satisfactory for lawn decoration. We make a specialty of them, and find an increasing demand for them from year to year. They can be shipped anywhere safely by freight. Large plants in tubs, $2.00 and $3.00 each, according to size; very large specimens in half-barrels, $5.00 and $7.50 each.

little inclination among rose growers to replant anything this season. This is not true with all the wholesalers, but it shows the trend of the feelings regarding how much expense would be justifiable under the conditions existing. Whether it is a wise proposition or not to make an effort to get results from old stock will be seen later on. It is possible that there will be but a medium demand this winter, in which case it will make little difference. Notwitnstanding the way a great portion of the rose stock has been handled, it looks very well for the season, and when the benches are worked over and plenty of moisture applied, an abundance of stock should immediately result.

It is certain there will be no excess of American Beauties, as this variety is greatly in the minority. Brides and Maids still are the most popular, with Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and Testout second. In some localities Liberty is extensively planted, while Meteor and Siebrecht I find in only a few places. Ivory seems not to be in much favor here. The growers complain that it has made poor stems in most instances. From my own observations I think the fault has been entirely with the quality of the stock planted. Everything I have seen here has been grown on small, weak plants, and the growers have drawn too close a comparison between it and Bride or Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, which in a majority of cases were grown on big, heavy plants. Mme. A. Chatenay has, apparently for the same reason, been discarded by several growers.

Regarding the quality of stock planted I find the growers are inclined more than ever to plant heavy, field-grown, budded stock, when such is to be found, and are discontinuing the use of small plants on their own roots.

I noticed a house of Beauties in the neighborhood of Burlingame that was superior to the majority of houses in this vicinity. The plants were budded low on wild stock, so low in fact that when planted the point of connection was at least two inches below the surface of the soil of the bench, although that was only six inches deep. As a consequence, from the union innumerable fibrous roots had spread out, and the plants have an unusually thrifty appearance, much different from that usually seen, where the wild stock extends several inches above the soil of the bed.

Queen of Edgely and Golden Gate seem to have been entirely discarded here among the rose growers. The first mentioned variety did not appear to meet with popular favor in color, and the latter sort has been tried only in a few places, with but slight success. It is very evident that some sorts do not do so well under glass in California as they do farther eastward. G.

ORIENTAL POPPIES.

These gorgeous flowers are now contributing their full share to the attractions of herbaceous borders in which they are adequately represented. As the result of selective culture, the range of color has been considerably increased, and the flowers improved in form, and increased in substance and size. One of the most noteworthy of the varieties is Mephistopheles, which has immense flowers of a brilliant scarlet hue. The petals are exceptionally stout, and market at the base with a well defined, black blotch. The blooms should, if cut, be taken in the bud state, and on being put in water will expand in the most perfect manner. Flowers that are cut when more or less expanded and shipped invariably shed their petals soon after they are unpacked.—Gardeners' Magazine.

TORONTO, ONT.—It is reported that the Webster Floral Co. has assigned to F. H. Lambe, who is preparing a statement for the benefit of creditors. It is thought the loss to them will not be heavy.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

RECENT rains have done much to improve the condition of stock in western nurseries.

PROF. GORDON BENTLEY has been appointed horticultural inspector for the state of Tennessee.

THE new water tower of the Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven, Conn., was badly damaged by lightning July 3.

T. S. HUBBARD, founder of the T. S. Hubbard Co., Fredonia, N. Y., died at his home at Geneva, N. Y., July 5, aged 63 years.

AN account of the meeting of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen at Tacoma, July 11 to 13, will be found on page 546 of this issue.

DRY weather in the western apple-seedling district is reported to threaten the quantity and quality of the supply of stocks. Prices are advancing.

W. & T. SMITH CO., Geneva, N. Y., state that reports as to the damage to stock at their nursery, as a result of the hail of June 10, were much exaggerated. Only a few blocks of stock will have to be cut down.

EMERY ALBERTSON, as traffic manager for the American Association of Nurserymen, chairman of its executive committee and its transportation committee, should be in his element for the next eleven months.

THE Georgia peach crop is moving and gives good satisfaction. With few exceptions the crop is as large as the trees could carry for best results, and quality is excellent, which insures satisfactory prices.

THE Bulletin of the American Association of Park Superintendents for June makes its appearance in neat pamphlet form. The first of the new series is devoted to the discussion of "Floral Decorations in Parks and City or Village Squares."

IF there is any one thing more than another which will facilitate interstate nursery business it is the establishing of some sort of uniformity in state inspection laws and their application. The adoption of a uniform tag for interstate shipments will be a long step.

CLINTON FALLS, MINN.—The second annual picnic of the employees of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co. took place July 9, at Mineral Springs park. There were 134 in the picnic crowd, including the employees and their families, and the day was pleasantly spent in sports of various kinds.

DROPPING the word "wholesale" from the title of the Western Association of Nurserymen, and the changes in policy which it implied, have had the desired result of adding considerably to the membership, and a further accretion is expected at the annual meeting at Kansas City in December.

THE Prudential Nursery Co., C. A. Krill, treasurer and manager, is a not widely known but growing concern at Kalamazoo, Mich.

THE season has been a dry one in the western New York district, especially early, but stock is making fair growth, although transplanted stock made a late start.

PEONY LADY DUFF.

In reply to the note of E. J. Shaylor in the REVIEW of June 21, the peony Lady Alexandra Duff, which is, as your readers are aware, one of the very finest peonies that has ever been sent out, was raised, and at the time of writing can be seen flowering in our nurseries, at Langport, Somerset, England. If any plants which have been received on your side have not, as your correspondent says, been true to name, it has, of course, been due to a mistake; and in any case where it is shown that the mistake has occurred with us, it is one which we should regret and shall be happy to put right.

CENTRALIA, ILL.

J. W. Ross is making an extensive addition to his range of greenhouses. The new houses will contain 12,000 feet of glass. Mr. Ross already has 10,000 feet of glass. He will use the new space for growing carnations. He now has 8,500 carnations planted in beds, and they are looking fine. One house contains 2,500 roses. Trade has been good the last year, but is now quiet. Mr. Ross will hold one of his annual dahlia shows September 26 and 27. The last one was a big success.

Mr. Ross purposes to push and extend his business, as there is a good opening in Centralia for a wholesale firm, as fuel is cheap and shipping facilities the best. They use slack from a coal mine, costing 35 cents per ton. Railroad lines lead direct to St. Louis, Chicago, and every city of importance in southern Illinois.

NEW ORLEANS.

For the last few days we have had plenty of rain, which was badly needed. Everything looks brighter except business, which is as dull as ever.

Taking advantage of the dull season, the Horticultural Society had its annual outing last week, going again to Grand Isle. The attendance was not quite so large as last year. Those who went on the trip were: C. W. Eichling, J. A. Newsham, B. M. Wichers, W. C. Wichers, H. Kraak, Otto Warner, A. Alost, Frank Faessel, H. L. Ellwel, F. Broker, J. H. Menard, Paul Abele. M. M. LAPEL, IND.—W. T. Barnes is building a large addition to his greenhouse, which will more than double the size of the present establishment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

The hottest weather of the summer thus far has brought what little trade there was almost to a standstill. As for any real good stock in the market, it is the exception; flowers are of poor quality. A few good Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and Chatenay roses cover that line. Carnations have very little color these days; the good old Enchantress is about the best of them all. Some outdoor stuff of various kinds, and plenty of green goods, make up the supply.

Florists' Club.

Our club, instead of its regular meeting the first Tuesday in the month, had a "smoke talk." The committee on entertainment, consisting of Messrs. McKellar, Bauman, and Reichart, provided some very appetizing refreshments as well. The attendance was large, and the evening was most enjoyable. The two topics of informal discussion were the club's picnic and the coming chrysanthemum show.

The annual outing of the club last Thursday was a grand success. As usual, Buckeye lake was selected by the committee, and a special electric car was engaged for the occasion. The members and their families to almost an even hundred went, and all had a great day's fun. It was an old-fashioned basket picnic. You should have seen John Brust catch fish and McKellar play ball. Prizes for the sports of the day were awarded as follows: Boys' race, Herman Quecke; girls' race, Celia Oestreicher; sack race, I. D. Siebert first, A. M. Hills second; ladies' race, Mrs. Galbreth first, Miss Hoyeler second; three-legged race, Depray and Stephens first, Hills and Bauman second; besides these events there were boating, baseball and music. The committee which arranged it all was composed of Messrs. McKellar, Curry, Bauman, Reichart, and Metzmeier; they deserve much credit, as the whole affair was an unqualified success.

Various Notes.

Samuel Graff, of Graff Bros., is spending a two weeks' vacation in Chicago.

The city has appropriated for the care of Franklin park the coming year $5,500, and for Goodale park $5,000; while these amounts are $2,000 and $1,500, respectively, more than last year, they are very far short of what should be given to keep these grounds in presentable condition.

W. J. Williams is on his vacation. Mr. Williams is in charge of the cut flower department of the Livingston Seed Co. ZERO.

PARIS GREEN FOR THRIPS.

I recently heard that some growers use Paris green and sugar in a solution of water for thrips. Will you kindly give me the proportions of this formula and the best way to apply it? Any other information on the destruction of this troublesome little insect will be thankfully received. L. M.

I had not heard of the use of a solution of Paris green for these troublesome insects. Thrips are found deep among the close-fitting petals of roses, and unless you could saturate every petal it would not be effective. Red pepper, often called Cayenne pepper, is a more convenient remedy for thrips. Heat some common bricks red hot and distribute them around your house. We found four bricks in a house 21x150 did the business all right. As soon as you have the hot bricks in place on your paths, put a tablespoonful of the pepper on each brick. You need not stay in the house to witness the spiders expire. You can rest assured that they will be troubled with such a violent attack of sneezing that they will be glad to pass away in peace. Procure your pepper from some source where it will be fresh, for if old it loses its strength. W. S.

We are more than pleased with your paper, finding it instructive and delightful reading.—Max Rudolph & Co., Cincinnati, O.

Minneapolis, Minn.—T. H. Hall is planning extensive improvements to his establishment. He will build four houses, two of them 24x95, and two 24x119. A brick boiler house also is being erected. The cost of the new buildings will be $5,000.

Annville, Pa.—Daniel Whiskeyman, who recently established his business here, is making extensive improvements to his present range of houses. The new building will be 20x210 feet, and will be partitioned into six sections. A steam heating plant is also being installed.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Our sales of Jeanne Nonin have been phenomenal but we have a few thousand left and YOU are losing money if you don't plant them. Nothing else you can grow from now to Xmas will make you as much money or give as much satisfaction as Jeanne Nonin. Strong, 4-in., 10c. Strong, flat-grown, 5c. Rooted cuttings, $3.00 per 100, postpaid; $25.00 per 1000.
When you see the other fellow swapping Nonin for dollars next fall, you'll wish you had some, too. Better get in now.
W. J. Olds, Union City, Pa.

Not too late yet to plant Jeanne Nonin. We planted 4-in. Nonin last August, they brought us $2.00 to $3.00 per sq. ft. from Thanksgiving to Xmas, while a bench of late cuttings gave us 25c blooms up to February 22 with never enough for the demand. Nonin is sure money; plant plenty and get your share. Strong flat-grown, 5c. Rooted cuttings, $3.00 per 100, postpaid; $25.00 per 1000. Strong, 4-in., 10c.

WATCH US GROW

Think of Aschmann, the Great Araucaria Importer of America, before buying elsewhere. Araucaria Excelsa, the pet of all decorative plants that nature produced, our specialty. Now perfectly recovered from their sea voyage, well established, growing in pots, ready to ship to all parts of America.

These everlasting green foliaged pot plants are growing more in favor by the tasteful plant buyers of this land from year to year. Please watch the growth of our importation during the last 11 years; first year 100, second 250, third 500, fourth 1000, fifth 2000. This year (1906) which is the 11th anniversary of our first importation, our spring importation amounted to 6,000. All these are grown for us under contract by an Araucaria specialist in Belgium. I must say for the benefit of my customers that they were never before so nice and large for the money as this year. I herewith quote you special prices on these.

Araucaria Excelsa, 12 to 14 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 50c. 14 to 16 inches high, 5½ in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs old, 60c. 16 to 18 inches high, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 yrs. old, 75c. 18 to 20 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.00. 20 to 24 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old. $1.25. 36 to 50 inches high, specimens, 7-in. pots, 6 yrs. old, $2 50 to $3.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, have 1000 of them. Never were they as nice as this year. Plants are as broad as long, from 12 to 20 inches in height, 3 to 4 perfect tiers, 20 to 30 inches across from tip of one tier to the other, 3, 4 and 5 yrs. old. 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00, up to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and size, their beautiful greenish blue tiers give them such a striking appearance, that anyone seeing them must fall in love with them on sight. Plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, 3, 4, 5 perfect tiers, 15 to 25 inches in height, from 15 to 30 inches across, $1 25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each. Please bear in mind that the above mentioned varieties are the cream of Belgium's productions. We have thousands of them and can meet all demands.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, 1 large one in center, 3 smaller sizes, 22 to 25 ins. high around, $2.00 each; 6-in. pots, single plants, 35 to 40 ins. high, 5 to 6 good leaves, 4-year-old, $1.25 to $1 50 each; 30 to 35 ins. high, 4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 5 good leaves, $1.00 each; 25 to 30 ins. high, 5½-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 leaves, 75c; made-up plants with 3, 18 to 20 ins. high, 25c to 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 6-in. pots, 4-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, bushy, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.25; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, 75c to $1.00 each. These are the sizes entered in the customs house.

Cocos Weddelliana, 15c.
Jerusalem Cherries or Solanums, same varieties we sell at Xmas for 75c, $1.00 each; 2½-in. pots, $5 00 per 100.
Ficus Elastica (Belgian importation), 4-in. pots, 25c.
Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up with 3 plants in a pot, 25c.
Cycas Revoluta, sago palms, 6 to 7-in. pots, 7 to 20 leaves to the plant, 10c per leaf.

Assorted ferns for dishes, large, bushy plants, fine assortment from 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

Greenhouse Heating.

FOR FIVE HOUSES.

I have put up five houses. One is 21½x50 feet; the other four are 13½x50. They run north and south, and a shed extends the whole length of the north end. The large house has 4-foot walls; the others 6-foot. All have 10-foot ridges. Will you please tell me how large a boiler I need, and how many and what size pipes, using hot water? J. K. H.

It would not be wise to install a hot-water heater with a rated capacity of less than 2,000 square feet of radiation. The house 21½x50 feet can be heated by a riser and ten 2-inch returns, and each of the houses 13½x50 feet by a riser and seven 2-inch returns. A 2-inch riser will be ample in each case. A little more radiation should be placed along the exposed sides than through the middle, particularly in the outside houses. L. C. C.

HEATING TWO HOUSES.

How many lines of 1-inch and 2-inch pipe are required to keep the temperature to 65 degrees in zero weather, or 10 degrees lower, in two houses, each 24x186, built together, each sixteen feet to the ridge? What size of boiler do I need, using hot water? S. J. M.

I do not think it would be wise to attempt to heat these houses with hot water and use the size of pipe you suggest, i. e., 1-inch and 2-inch. In fact, I believe it will be more economical for a plant of this size to install a steam rather than a hot water plant. If a night fireman is kept, install a horizontal tubular boiler with sufficient capacity to care for 4,000 square feet of radiation. If hot water is to be used, get a boiler rated to carry about 5,000 square feet of radiation. If steam is employed, a 3-inch flow through each house and thirteen 1¼-inch returns will be needed. If hot water is used, a 4-inch supply and twelve 2-inch returns will be required for each house.

BOILER AND CHIMNEY.

I can buy a second-hand, cast-iron, sectional boiler (hot water) seventy-two inches long, fire-box 26x50. I believe the whole boiler is five and a half feet high. The plumber says it is rated at 3,500 feet, 4-inch pipe. Now will you tell me approximately how much I could heat with that size boiler under ordinary circumstances? I have one house at present 26x80, twelve feet high at the ridge, no sidelights anywhere, the south wall is four feet high and the north wall five feet. I intend to put up another one 18x80, half for roses, and half for ferns, smilax, palms, etc. Would I not be able in time to put up another one the same size, and heat it with the same boiler? That is my idea. I have an overhead heating system.

I also have a chimney sixteen feet high, twenty-two inches inside measure, standing near a barn, about twenty-four feet away, with the barn ten feet higher than the chimney. The wind blows into the chimney so hard that my boiler room used to be full of smoke every time we were blessed with a blizzard; we get more than 30 degrees below zero here. At the same time the draft was so good I could not open any door of the boiler for draft; in fact, I had to have the upper door partly or wholly open, depending on the weather, in order to

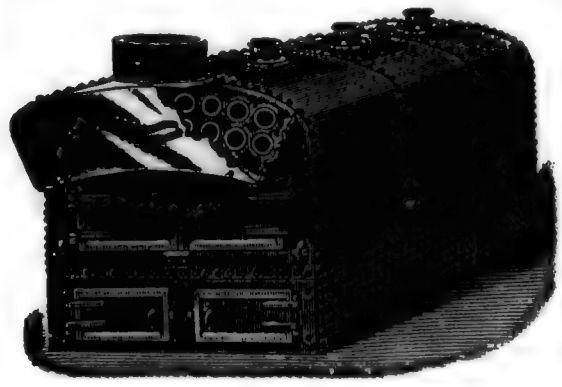
"We have had four of your boilers. The first gave us thirteen years' service, the second one eleven years, and the other two were put in in the last two seasons.

"We used the first two boilers nine years before we had to put in new flues. We have not used any other boilers, but our neighbors have other makes, and the life of their boilers is from three to four years shorter than ours.



"We are satisfied with the boilers in every possible way."

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

"I bought a No. 2 boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7,000 sq. ft. of glass; would take care of 2,000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down December 29, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell boilers, and do not worry about their breaking down."

JACOB PHILLIP, Rogers Park, Ill.

"I bought a No. 10 boiler in 1901. Have 20,000 sq. ft. of glass. We keep temperature at 60 degrees in the coldest weather. I have had one Kroeschell boiler 15 years, and the only repairs were a set of flues. Your boiler is so satisfactory to me that I do not care to try any other. Please enter my order for another No. 8, delivered in July."

prevent too hot a fire. Still, I used in this last winter, a comparatively mild one, considerably more coal than I did a year ago, seventy-five tons for one house 26x80. Last year I used about fifteen tons less and the winter was much harder. I think I ought to have either a narrower or higher chimney. Please instruct me about this. J. L.

The boiler in question, if capable of supplying 3,500 feet of 4-inch pipe, will be ample to care for the house 26x80 feet, and two houses, each 18x80. The three houses would require only about 2,000 feet of 4-inch pipe to heat them. From what you say of the chimney I judge it is too short; it can be raised either by a steel or brick extension. It would also be well to provide a good damper for the pipe from the boiler to the chimney to overcome too heavy a draft during wind storms. L. C. C.

PIPING FOR FOUR HOUSES.

I have four greenhouses and would like to know how many runs of 1¼-inch pipe it will take for each one. They are: One 20x60 feet, for palms; one 20x60 feet, for carnations; one 15x60, for geraniums; one 15x25, for carnations. The temperature never gets lower than 4 degrees below zero. E. W.

As the style of heating is not indicated, I have estimated on the basis of hot water at 180 degrees. If steam is used considerably less pipe will answer. For the house 20x60 feet, for palms, a 2½-inch flow and eighteen 1¼-inch returns will be necessary. To heat the house 20x60 feet, to be used for carnations, a 2½-inch flow and sixteen 1¼-inch returns will be required. The house 15x60 feet, for growing geraniums, should have a 2-inch flow and fourteen 1¼-inch returns, while the house 15x25 feet can be heated with a 2-inch flow and ten 1¼-inch returns.

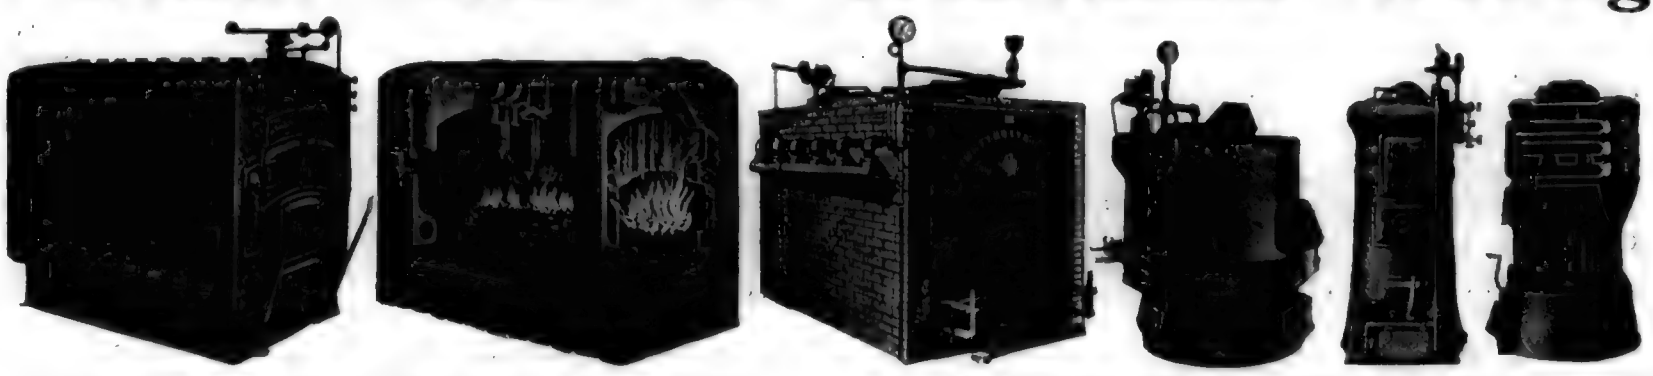
If steam is used, a 2-inch flow and twelve 1¼-inch returns will answer in each house 20x60 feet, a 2-inch flow and ten 1¼-inch returns in the house 15x60 feet, and a 2-inch flow and ten 1¼-inch returns in the house 15x25 feet. L. C. C.

BOILER CAPACITY.

Will a twelve horse-power boiler, fifty 2-inch flues, heat three houses, two 11x75 and one 16x65, with hot water? One end of one of the 75-foot houses is banked to the eaves. I have three 3-inch openings for flow and return, and carry a 3-inch riser to the top of each house, to return in two 3-inch pipes in one of the houses 11x75. The house 16x65 has one 4-inch and eight 1-inch returns. In the other house 11x75 I have one 4-inch and eight inch returns. Can I connect city water pressure to the returns near the boiler, or must I have an expansion tank? I want 45 to 48 degrees in cold weather, in central Ohio. J. F. S.

The length of the flues and the diameter and height of the boiler shell are not stated, and it is not clear whether there are eight 1-inch pipes or an 8-inch return in one of the houses 11x75. The only point on which a definite answer can be made is that if there are twenty-five or thirty pounds pressure on the city system, this will answer as well as an elevated expansion tank, if connection is made in the main return near the boiler by means of a small pipe, say ¾-inch. L. C. C.

BOILER AND PIPING.



Can you tell us how to pipe the following: One house 11x60 feet, 3-foot sides, double boarded, with paper between boarding; one house 20x100 feet, six feet on the back, three feet on the south side, to the eaves, with two feet of glass and a bank of earth to the glass on each side; one house 14x75, three feet of double boarding and sixteen inches of glass in the sides.

We are adding this year another house and a propagating shed. The former will be 31x200 feet, six feet to eaves, two feet of 4-inch cement and the rest glass on one side, the other adjoining the propagating shed, which is 5x100, with six feet of glass in the roof.

We intend to heat with steam, and have a horizontal boiler, rated at forty horse-power. It has forty-seven 3-inch tubes eleven feet long, and the head is forty-eight inches. Is it large enough to heat the whole plant? Our old houses are heated with 2-inch pipe, and we have a lot of 1-inch pipe which we want to use in the new houses, with the steam system. L. & W.

The boiler in question, if worked between five and ten pounds pressure, will be sufficient to handle the houses you now have and are building. One-inch pipe can be used for heating with steam, as can also 2-inch, but 1¼-inch is preferable to either. If you can avoid using the 1-inch pipe in the 200-foot house, it should be done. If a trade can be made so as to use the 1-inch pipe in the shortest houses and the larger pipe in the longest houses, best results will be secured.

The house 11x60 feet should have 265 square feet of radiation; the house 20x100 feet 660 square feet; the house 14x75 feet 290 square feet; the house 32x200 feet 1440 square feet, and the house 5x100 feet 200 square feet of radiation. You can figure out the best use of your pipe with the following constants if you use the house requirements I have stated. Allow 290 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe, and 161 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe, for each 100 square feet of radiation in the houses. L. C. C.

STORE AND CONSERVATORY.

We wish to heat a conservatory 20x50, also a store 20x60, with hot water. How much pipe will it take to keep up a temperature of 60 degrees, and how should it be arranged? Our coldest weather is zero. J. W. D.

If you wish to use radiators in the store, an aggregate surface of 360 square feet will do the work; if you wish to use coils, 825 feet of 1¼-inch pipe can be made to do the work. In the conservatory 850 lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe arranged in coils, and placed on the side wall or under the benches, if benches are used, will provide for a temperature of 60 degrees. L. C. C.

PIPING SEPARATED HOUSES.

I intend to build an addition to my forcing houses this summer. When I get it completed I will have three houses, 20x100, 11x100, and 25x100. They run east and west, and have a boiler shed extending across the west end of the north two houses, with the bottom of the boiler set four feet below the ground line. The smoke-stack stands at the northwest corner of the plant, and is two and one-half bricks square. The 20-foot house is eleven feet to the ridge, the 11-foot seven feet, and the other will be eight. It will be about thirty-seven feet from the middle of the north house to the middle of the south one. All the houses are to be used for lettuce, and the south one will have three solid beds, with 2-foot walks. Will I have to move the smoke-stack to the middle of the west end, or can I heat the three houses with it at the corner, where it is? How must I arrange the piping, and what size and number of flows and returns will each house need? Can the hot water pipes be carried outside successfully, to get from house to house? B. A. B.

While it would balance things up a little better to change the location of the boiler, I believe you can successfully heat the plant without going to this expense. Although it is not desirable to carry the flow pipes out of doors, I believe that by carefully covering them with a good asbestos protection and a hood of metal or wood, to protect the asbestos from the weather, it will give you no difficulty.

The piping for these houses can be handled from a riser under the ridge, and returns on the side walls. The first house, 20x100 feet, will require a 3-inch flow and ten 2-inch returns, five on each side wall. The house 11x100 feet can be heated by a 2½-inch flow and six 2-inch returns, three on each side wall; and the house 25x100 feet by a 3-inch flow and twelve 2-inch returns, six on each side wall. To heat the second and third houses, i. e., the houses 11x100 feet and 25x100 feet, it will be well to carry a 4-inch pipe to the center of the 11-foot house, and a 3-inch pipe into and through the 25-foot house. The main return should not be less than 3-inch for these houses. L. C. C.

USE OF A CHECK VALVE.

In piping a house for hot water so that the water can be drawn in severe weather, and steam can be used to heat the place, is it necessary to put a check-valve on the return near the boiler? The latter is six feet below the returns. Is it better to connect the expansion tank with the highest part of the system or with the return near the boiler?

J. I. M.

If the water-level in the boiler where steam is used will be three or four feet below the level of the returns in the houses, there will be no need of a check-valve in the return. The check will impede the circulation when hot water is used. A swinging check might be installed, and when hot water is used the valve disk be removed, to be replaced when the plant is placed on a steam basis, but with three or four feet difference in elevation, the system should work all right without the valve. The expansion tank should be connected with the main return near the boiler.

L. C. C.

A COIL BOILER.

Please let me know how many feet of 2-inch pipe it will take to make a coil boiler to heat two houses, each 11x75, four feet to the plate, seven feet to the ridge. There is no glass in the side walls. The houses run north and south, and the south ends are glass. I want 60 degrees at 10 degrees below zero outside. Would pipe smaller than 2-inch be better? J. S. M.

A coil boiler constructed from 2-inch pipe of sufficient size to care for the radiation in two houses, each 11x75 feet, should contain 150 lineal feet of pipe exposed to the action of the heated gases. Each of these houses should carry at least 365 square feet of radiating surface, and to care for this a heater of the size indicated will barely be sufficient. L. C. C.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

A fine rain visited us last week, and crops have been benefited by it. Fears were entertained of a complete failure, but there need be no apprehension now as to the successful maturing of crops. Greenhouse stock in the fields is looking, for the most part, at its best. Carnations are, as far as I have gone, the finest I have seen here, or elsewhere, and if given the proper attention from now on, some fine blooms will be seen the coming season. Roses are a little off now, the excessive heat together with dry weather being one of the causes. Some fine mums are coming on, and the prospect for excellent blooms is good. Shrubs and herbaceous plants are doing their best in this climate, and a new departure in landscape work is promised for next year. There is very little work being done aside from funeral work, and there will be nothing doing for at least a couple of months. NARCISSUS.

OMAHA.

Trade in all the stores is quiet at present. Roses are inclined to be scarce, in fact Beauties are noticeable for their absence. Carnations also are scarce, and generally of poor quality as compared with last year. Sweet peas sell well, as do other outside flowers that are being offered. Asters have made their appearance in a very limited quantity.

The summer meeting of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society was held in Hanscom park July 11 and 12, and a number of the Omaha florists were on the program. If these horticulturists would only have a session at bowling, the Omaha bunch would be much better satisfied. B.

WAYNESBURG, PA.—Abner Hoge is planning to start a greenhouse. He will raise vegetables for local consumption in addition to doing a general business in the regular florists' line. This is the first establishment of its kind in Waynesburg.

MACON, GA.—A. A. Wheeler, employed by the city railway company as a park gardener, recently died from injuries resulting from a street-car passing over his body. Locally it is thought he intended to commit suicide, and threw himself in front of the car. He was 56 years old.

The Test of Construction

Of what use is first-class workmanship and the best material if the construction of your house is antiquated and out-of-date? There is as much in the style of house as in the material of which it is built, and too much stress cannot be laid on the "right kind of construction."

There is a special house for each special condition and the ordinary planing mill knows nothing of construction details. The first step towards "right construction" is to get our catalogue and estimate. Write now and start right—erect houses that will enable you to compete with the other fellow.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Mignonette.

Those who want to cut good mignonette should not delay in sowing the seed. As is well known, the mignonette is a difficult plant to transplant, and if the soil drops off the roots the little plants are a long time in making a start. A very successful grower of mignonette sows the seed in 3-inch pots, a few seeds in three little groups in each pot, so that they can be divided without losing the soil from the roots when transplanting to the bench. It is safer, however, to sow a pinch of seed on the bench or bed where they are to remain and flower. If you want strong, stout spikes, then one foot each way is not too much room to give the plants. A dozen plants may come up where you sowed your pinch of seed, and will not harm anything till the little seedlings are an inch high; then you must pull up all but the strongest plant.

The chief enemy of the young mignonette plants is the larvæ of the sulphur-colored cabbage butterfly, which lays its eggs in the months of August and September. The worms or larvæ are so identically the color of the mignonette foliage that it takes good eyes to discern them, but they are easily conquered. As soon as you see that the butterfly is abroad, spray your plants lightly and then dust them with powdered hellebore. This will produce such cramps in the worms that they will wish tney never had been born.

Mignonette should have the fullest light as soon as the seed germinates, abundance of ventilation and a temperature of 40 degrees at night in winter. Some prefer a bench to a solid bed. The bed will grow larger spikes, yet a bench of five inches of soil will grow it well. Most growers have their own strain, and save their seed from year to year by selecting plants of the best habit and with perfect spikes. If you have not saved any of last spring's growth, Defiance and Golden Machet are both fine forms. A rather heavy loam with a fourth of animal manure is a good compost for these old favorites.

Smilax.

Don't neglect to train up your smilax as it grows. Never was the old saying, "A stitch in time saves nine," more applicable to any of our florists' operations than to the care and cultivation of this plant. A few weeks' neglect will cause you endless labor, and sometimes the destruction of this beautiful vine.

Cosmos.

I noticed that a friend who is a good gardener took my advice and filled a number of boxes with cosmos. They are outdoors now, but will be removed to the house before frost arrives. This is the only way we of the frigid north can produce this most decorative flower. It is late now to sow seed, but you may have some flats of seedlings left over. Get them into boxes of convenient size and you will be proud of them in the middle of October. There is no flower more liked by people of good taste.

Azaleas.

In these steaming hot days don't neglect your azaleas and other hard-wooded plants, that should be plunged outdoors in the broad sun. The azaleas will now be crowding, and while giving them more room put on an inch of rather fresh dairy manure. It will help greatly in the formation of flower buds and eventually the flowers themselves.

Gardenias.

Gardenias planted on the benches in June will be growing fast just now. Shoots that are making a vigorous growth can be pinched to produce lateral growth. They delight in our warm summer weather, but unless frequent and vigorous syringing is applied, they will soon be a host for that worst of all bugs, the mealy bug. In our common vernacular there is an endless variety of so-called bugs. Some you can exterminate with finger and thumb; others make only nocturnal visits; one species has partly robbed the white man of one of his important articles of subsistence, and a large number live on the inside of the cranium and cannot be reached by cold water or kerosene emulsion. They can only be cured by a vacation in the bughouse, but water properly applied will keep down the horticultural or mealy bug. Remember that while the gardenia delights in a high temperature, it should be given the most abundant ventilation when under glass.

Hydrangeas.

Should your hydrangeas intended for flowering next spring not have had their last shift, which should be to a 6-inch pot, now is the time to give it. If well supplied with water, they are making their most vigorous growth, and will be forming their flower buds, so they must be kept growing unchecked for another six weeks. A neglect of water now would be serious.

Roguing Stock Plants.

Just now when your geraniums and cannas are all blooming at their best, you should walk around and see if there are any rogues among them. In technical garden phraseology, the name rogue is applied to plants that have not come true to color or form. It can also be applied to your rows or beds of stock plants, where by accident a plant or two of a different variety is mixed in. Much future annoyance can be saved. The merest novice can distinguish them now, but only an expert can separate them when the flower is gone and the foliage is impaired by our early frosts. This occurred to me on seeing a plant of Florence Vaughan canna in a bed we thought was all Souvenir de Antoine Crozy. It is easy now to label or tag the few intruders.

Painting.

Possibly there is no time of year when the plant growers' benches are so vacant as this month and the next. There should, with an up-to-date florist, never be empty benches, but our Boston ferns, summer-grown carnations and chrysanthemums are yet small, and it is easy to build a scaffold over them and paint the inside of your houses. It is warm work, to be sure, but it is well worth the perspiration and labor involved. Don't expect the boys to work in a temperature of 111 degrees with the sun glaring through the glass in their eyes. A movable shade of canvas easily can be moved along as the work progresses. A house newly painted inside is practically a new house, as regards light and health of plants, as well as destroying the resting spores of fungi and hosts of eggs of destructive insects. Altogether it is worth far more than the cost in material and labor.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

SOUTHERN SUMMER FLOWERS.

We should be glad to have some information and suggestions regarding the housing and growing of profitable summer stock. We are interested chiefly from the retailer's point of view. Could you not get expressions from some of the successful southern growers that would be of general help to the profession? It strikes us as a very appropriate season to discuss this topic. We have been short of good flowers since our sweet peas gave out about four weeks ago.

We should like to know if any one in the south has made a success of a summer crop of carnations and roses, and if so, of what varieties? The demand is growing so that it is necessary to have good stuff the year around, and shipping in from the north at this season is far from satisfactory.

How late may sweet peas be kept bearing in the Gulf states? S. B. S.

S. B. S. is up against a pretty tough proposition, as it is taken for granted he wants roses and carnations during the long, hot days of summer. Most of the retailers are satisfied to make out on balsams, zinnias and asters, but the florist who wishes to be up-to-date must have carnations and roses.

Shipping in from the west is simply out of the question. For carnations you must have a batch of late Prosperity, and pinch them back until February. As the long summer days approach, you must shade the house lightly, and give lots of clear water. From the middle of April until June you will be rewarded with a good crop of fine, white flowers. White is the color most needed. Take off a good lot of Moonlight cuttings in November, keep them going until the middle of February in pots, and then put them out in the field on high hills as you would sweet potatoes. They will be giving fairly good blooms about the time that Prosperity quits, and if kept clean of grass and frequently plowed will go on blooming until fall. Thrips will divide the cut with the grower, and they present the yet unsolved problem.

Summer roses call for much time, space and labor. One must begin eighteen months ahead. Put a lot of young Kaiserin and Cochet (pink) in the field in April, and keep them clean and growing all summer. When they have taken a rest of about a month in the fall, lift and pot into 5-inch or 6-inch, keep in a cool house until February, then give them a house to themselves, and send them along. By the time other roses are going off, they should be throwing good size canes. Watch for pale foliage, and in case any should appear, hold up on the feeding before it is too late. As long as they are healthy, water them liberally, and you will be rewarded with good blooms. Kaiserin loves heat and lots of water at the same time. You cannot expect the flowers to last as they do in the winter, but the size and foliage should be as good.

Of course these methods are too costly for the wholesaler, but for the retailer who has high class local trade there is really no other way known under our conditions. But we are living and—I hope—learning. D.

SUMMER PESTS.

During the bright summer weather greenfly, while not so troublesome as during the winter months, should be carefully looked after and kept in check. A systematic fumigation once a week during these months will reduce the numbers of the pests to such an extent that they will be easier to manage during the fall and winter.

Our ever present enemy, red spider, should also share our attention, and all nooks and corners where the syringe cannot have full play should be thoroughly inspected, as it is there that they congregate, multiply, and, if not combated, will soon overrun a house.

During the season when firing cannot be resorted to, mildew is still our most troublesome and insidious enemy, and it is only by close attention to providing a supply of pure, fresh air, avoiding draughts and a judicious use of the sulphur blower, that we can escape having trouble with this disease.

In order that the plants may derive the full benefit from the supply of fresh air, and to facilitate syringing, training and supporting the bushes should never be neglected.

Repairing Houses.

During the warm weather, and while we are likely to have it comparatively dry, is the proper time for repairing roofs, painting, etc. A systematic and thorough going over now will save a deal of trouble and worry when the cold fall rains and frosts begin. If the work is left till September or later it cannot be done in such an efficient manner, as the wood will then have absorbed too much moisture to allow the putty or mastica to take hold. Old English putty with an addition of one-fifth of white lead and linseed oil, the mixture made thin enough to run easily from the putty bulb, makes an excellent and lasting job.

Particular care should be taken to see that the roofs are tight at the junction of roof and gutter, as this is where the cold air is most liable to pour in and create the conditions most favorable to the germination of mildew spores.

This class of work is tedious and if the weather is hot, very tiresome and trying, requiring patience and care, and should be entrusted to none but careful and painstaking help. It also involves labor and expense, but if the work is done carefully the roof will be tight and dry for at least one season. The better quality of cut and the satisfaction obtained will amply compensate for the increased outlay, as there are few conditions which prove so unsatisfactory to a rose grower as a leaky and draughty house. Ribes.

GRUBS IN ROSE SOIL.

We are bothered with a little white grub that we find clustered around the roots of newly planted roses and chrysanthemums, and although they have not done much damage as yet, we are afraid of the after results and the harm they may do when they get larger. What is the best and quickest way to get rid of them without harming the plants?

G. C.

Without seeing the little white grubs, it is impossible to give definite directions for destroying them.

Most soils and manures are alive with numerous varieties of larvæ, most of them harmless to plant life, many of them making a respectable living by devouring their neighbors, thus illustrating Dean Swift's oft quoted couplet:

The little fleas that do us tease
Have other fleas that bite 'em;
And these in turn have other fleas,
And so it goes ad infinitum.

Should these small grubs prove destructive to the rose roots or stems under the surface, they can be eradicated by using bisulphide of carbon. This is a colorless, volatile liquid used for destroying ants, phylloxera on the roots of grape vines and other pests that work underground and can only be reached by vapor. On exposure to air the liquid evaporates and as the vapor is heavier than air it settles rather than rises. It is highly inflammable and great care should be taken to keep it from fire in any form. Special caution should be given against smoking while the vapor is in the house. The liquid has a disagreeable odor which soon disappears when the ventilators are opened. It is harmless to plant life.

Muriate of potash applied as a fertilizer has a decided insecticidal value against underground insects. The soil should be well watered immediately after applying the fertilizer. Ribes.

THE ROSE.

[A paper by M. Stauch, foreman for J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia., read before the Nebraska State Horticultural Society at Omaha, July 12, 1906.]

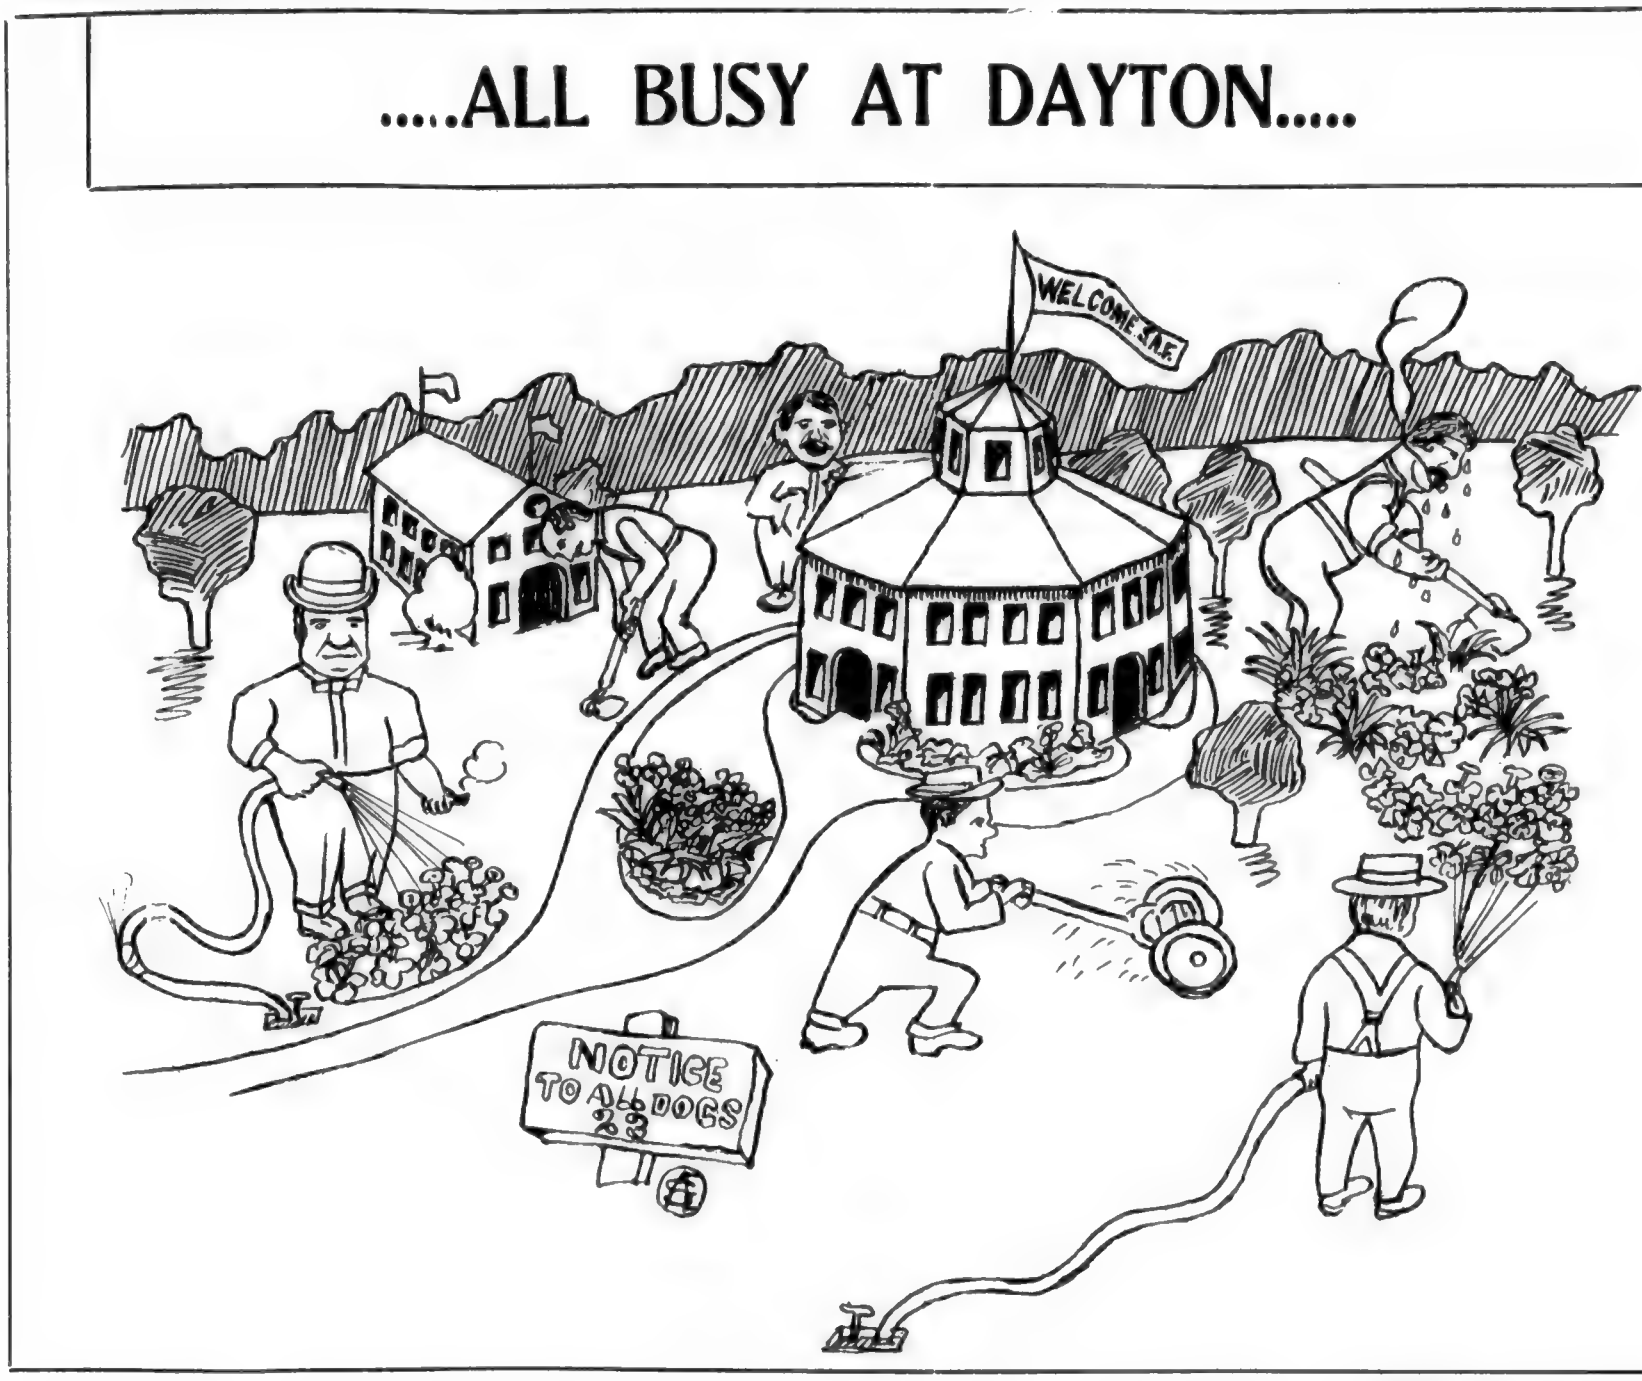
Throughout the vegetable kingdom there is no genus which commands and receives so much attention from horticulturists as that now under consideration. The rose has been immortalized from most ancient times by authors and poets of all countries. It is the emblem of youth, of love and beauty, and justly designated the queen of flowers.

It is needless to attempt referring to all the purposes for which roses are well adapted; they are generally familiar in our gardens and as cut flowers have no equal. There is more glass devoted to roses than to any other plant, and I believe there is no plant which brings better returns to the successful grower than does the rose.

Propagation.

The propagation of roses may be accomplished in many ways; by seeds, cuttings, layers, suckers, sprouts, divisions, budding and grafting, the methods mostly practiced being by grafting and by cuttings.

Cuttings can be made during almost the entire year, yet the best time to propagate varieties which are grown for cut flowers is from November until the middle of April. Cuttings should only be taken from the most healthy plants and the wood should be well ripened. There is quite a diversity of opinion among growers as to blooming qualities of the so-called blind wood and blooming wood.



It is undoubtedly the best to use the blooming wood, as it is the strongest and best matured, yet blind wood of equal quality is, in my opinion, just as good. Owing to the scarcity of that kind of wood, coupled with the large demand, it is easy to lose sight of this very important factor and to use inferior wood. The result is weak and poor-blooming plants. The cuttings should have two to three eyes. The best plants will come from so-called heel cuttings.

After the cuttings are put firmly in the sand they must be thoroughly watered. The sand must always be kept well watered, but as much as possible avoid spraying overhead. I find it best to keep the temperature of the sand at 68 degrees, and that of the house 56 degrees. The temperature should not vary more than 2 degrees either way.

In four or five weeks the cuttings will have made roots from one-half to three fourths of an inch long and should then be potted firmly in small pots, watered well and placed on the bench close to the glass. During the first few days it is necessary to shade them through the hottest part of the day, but as soon as root action is noticed, shading should be dispensed with.

Grafting.

From year to year the advantages of grafted over own-root roses are more widely recognized and understood, so that today there is hardly any large place where grafted roses do not predominate.

The grafting is done on Manetti which is imported from Europe, and usually arrives by the middle of December. The stocks should at once be unpacked and potted or heeled in a cool place, covering about two-thirds with soil, which is afterwards well watered. They then can be potted as convenient, but it must be done before the wide rootlets get too long or the stocks commence to grow. They are potted in as small pots as possible, placed in a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees and should get a thorough watering. After this the spraying of the wood two or three times a day is all that is needed. When root action commences and the buds begin to swell, they are ready for grafting.

The grafting in itself is very simple. Make an oblique cut about one-half to one inch in length as close to the pot as can be conveniently done, cut the scion to match the same, place the two cut surfaces together and secure them firmly with raffia or twine. It is not absolutely necessary that scion and stock are of even size, but the bark of the scion and of the stock must meet exactly at least on the bottom and on one side.

They are then put in an air-tight case. This case may be of any size and can be built in various ways. We use the center of a bench in a house, covering it with sashes raised from two to three feet above the plants. The bench should have a thin covering of moss, over which is put a layer of sand. This is well watered before the grafts are placed in it. The grafts, after being made, should be transferred to the case without delay. The temperature is kept about 75 degrees and the case kept closed for about five days. By this time the scion and stock will have sufficiently calloused to permit a little air. This has to be given carefully. First give a fraction of an inch, and gradually increase, when in two or three weeks they can stand the full air, but even then they must be guarded from the hot rays of the sun for a week or ten days longer, after which they can be treated like other plants.

Care of Young Stock.

The treatment of own-root and grafted plants is alike, except that the grafted plants should get the support of either wires or canes to prevent their breaking off. As soon as the pots are filled with roots, they must be shifted into 3-inch and from these into 4-inch pots, if such plants are desired, before planting in the benches. During this time the plants should never suffer from want of water nor be kept too wet. They must be guarded against mildew, red spider or black spot.

The importance of taking the best care of the young plants should never be lost sight of, and only the most competent man should be trusted with this department. It is here where we lay the foundation for our future success, and it should be well laid.

Soil for Roses.

To grow roses successfully a rich soil must be provided. A good fibrous loam of a stiff rather than light nature is the ideal soil. Where such cannot be obtained we have to accomplish the purpose by a combination of soils. As a rule, most of our large rose places are situated so that they are within easy reach of good soil.

The rose is a strong feeder and there is scarcely any soil which will grow roses up to standard without the aid of manure. In most cases one-sixth to one-fifth of manure safely can be added. It should be well decomposed and thoroughly mixed through the soil. Bone meal is also used extensively. I prefer to apply this when the soil is on the benches, being then able to distribute it more evenly through the soil with the aid of a hoe. The bone meal may, of course, be added at the same time the manure is, but as we usually have unskilled labor to assist us in this operation, we are apt not to have it mixed in the right proportion. I aim to use 150 to 200 pounds to a house 25x200 feet.

Planting.

Having thus prepared our soil, filled the benches and cleaned the house thoroughly of all rubbish, we are ready to plant our roses. None but the best plants should be taken. We plant fifteen to sixteen inches apart, five rows in a 6-foot and four in a 5-foot bed. The soil must be pressed firmly about each plant and a shallow basin left around it. This insures the plants being watered without watering all the bench before they have taken hold. It preserves the nourishment in the soil and keeps it from souring. This method of watering should be followed till the roots spread all through the bed.

The plants need staking and tying soon after they are planted. This is particularly true of the grafted plants. In tying there should always be one or two of the strongest branches brought reasonably close to the wire to keep the plant from shaking around too much or breaking off while syringing. It is essential that the benches be kept free from weeds and the surface of the soil stirred every two or three weeks to permit the free penetration of air. Air is almost as necessary to the roots of a rose as to its foliage.

The best time to plant is when the plants are well established in either 3-inch or 4-inch pots. This may be early in the spring or in the latter part of the summer, as the conditions on the place may require.

I believe in early planting, so that the roses will become good bushes before fall, in order to produce first-class flowers in the first part of the winter. Later planting than July is not to be recommended where good flowers are wanted during the winter months. Roses planted after that date are not usually at their best before March or April.

During the summer months, in fact at any time, the rose wants all the air which can possibly be admitted. While the rose should always have plenty of moisture about the roots, it is a mistake to keep it too wet. It brings about a soft, rank growth which will not have enough substance in it to produce a good flower, and by the slightest mistreatment in the fall will turn out a failure in spite of the promising look during the summer. Therefore it is well to allow the beds to get very much on the dry side at times before watering.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Distance to Plant.

While you are planting or preparing to plant, I want to say a word about the proper amount of space you should give each plant. Varieties like Enchantress, Lawson, Vesper, The Belle, etc., should have not less than 10x12 inches. In fact, there are few if any varieties that should have less. If your plants are extremely large, some of the larger growing varieties can very well stand more than 10x12. Very often we see growers plant small plants closer than this, thinking that to give 10x12 to a small plant which fills only 5x6 inches when planted is a waste of space. That is a mistaken idea. You will be surprised how quickly such plants will fill up the space, and more if they can get it. The longer they remain uncrowded the longer they will remain free from disease. If I were growing for quality alone, regardless of what was realized in money returns, I should plant my plants 15x15 inches, or even more if they were extremely large, so that each plant would stand practically alone, with several inches of air space between it and the next one. This alone would help the quality materially. Under the circumstances, however, we cannot afford to be so liberal with space, so we must set them as close together as possible without cutting too much on the quality. Just as soon as you begin to interfere with the plant's opportunity to do its best, then you must go carefully. Not only is this true with the space you give each plant, but it applies to any other way you may want to economize. We sometimes see growers plant so closely that when the plants have taken hold and the foliage has straightened out you can hardly see the ground between them. It seems they want to crowd as many plants on the bench as possible. How foolish this is. The wise grower will endeavor to fill a bench properly with just as few plants as he can.

Old, Tried Methods the Best.

We occasionally run across a grower who is always working some outlandish scheme by which he hopes to get around some difficulty, without first giving it due consideration. I do not wish to say anything against any man who is original and of an inventive turn of mind, providing he uses proper judgment. For instance, some years ago a certain grower informed me that he would have long stems on his Lawson early the next season and that he would get them by planting very closely. His argument was that when the plants could not grow in breadth they would draw upward and of course lengthen the stems. I advised him against it, but to no avail. The next summer I saw him again; he had had his experience, and I shall merely say he paid the price. Now he plants the regulation distance apart. No one realizes better than I that to be really successful a grower must be a thinking man, able to meet conditions as they come, and devise ways and means for overcoming obstacles which perhaps have never before confronted any one. He must also be able to originate new methods to keep pace with the times. But in all these he must recognize certain laws of nature, which will not be denied. That is where experience and sound judgment come into play. So, before you change from the generally approved methods, be sure you weigh carefully any change you may contemplate. A. F. J. Baur.

TEMPERATURE.

I shall grow the following varieties of carnations: Peru, Flora Hill, Enchantress, Morning Glory, Mrs. Nelson, Estella, Mrs. M. A. Patten, The Belle, Harlowarden, Glacier. In what temperature will they do best? In what temperature should I grow swainsona?

R. A. M.

You will find the following temperatures about the proper thing for the varieties you expect to plant: Peru, 50 degrees; Flora Hill, 52 to 54; Enchantress, 48 to 52; Morning Glory, 50 to 52; Mrs. E. A. Nelson, 50; Mrs. M. A. Patten, 50 to 52; The Belle, 54; Harlowarden, 48 to 52, and Glacier, 50 to 52 degrees. There is no such variety as Estella. Estelle is a scarlet variety and Stella is variegated. Both like a temperature of 50 to 52 degrees. Swainsona will do nicely in your carnation houses. It is not a bit particular as regards temperature.

I shall add that much depends on the texture of the soil you use as to what will prove the best temperature for your plants. For instance, if your soil is inclined to run heavy, with much clay in it, then you can run the temperature higher than if it is light and loose. Wherever I have marked a double temperature you will be guided by the texture of your soil. For instance, with Enchantress, if your soil is clayey and holds the moisture well, you can run them 52 or even 54 degrees, and they will have good stems and the blooms will be large and of good color.

John Westcott's Waretown Bungalow.

Scene at the Establishment of Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., During the Shipping Season.

If you should run them that high in a light soil you would get weak stems and a washy color, and inferior quality all around. The temperatures given are for the night. On cloudy days raise it 6 to 8 degrees and on bright days 10 to 12 degrees. Raise the ventilators to keep from going higher on bright days. A. F. J. BAUR.

CONCRETE WALLS AND BENCHES.

We are preparing to erect two houses 24x120 in connection with our range, and have about decided to erect concrete walls, but before doing so wish to learn your views, with regard to which would be the best, wood or concrete. We should also like to have your ideas with regard to cement benches.

C. S. Co.

I say most decidedly, build the walls of concrete. Concrete is the building material of the present and future. We have heard only one adverse opinion on this subject, that a solid concrete wall sweats in cold weather, and moisture accumulates on the inside surface of the wall. This can be obviated by reinforcing the wall with hollow bricks. You can purchase them three inches thick and 8x13 and perhaps larger. It will add fifteen or twenty per cent to the cost of the wall, but will strengthen it as well as make it dry and warmer. These so-called hollow bricks or tiles are used in all modern steel-frame structures, as well as for roofing and partitions between stores. You will, of course, begin using the tiles at the surface of the ground. Below the ground in the foundation of the wall they would not be necessary. Place them as nearly as possible in the center of the wall and vertically, end on end, so that there is a continuous air space the whole height of the wall to the plate.

In regard to benches; if for plants, a raised bench is what you want. It should have legs of wood and crosspieces of 2x6 and, running lengthwise, 2x4, with a floor of tiles. This is not an everlasting bench, but if you use pecky cypress and give it a heavy coat of cement on your 2x6 and 2x4, it will last many years.

If the benches are for roses and carnations, then I should use what may be called a semi-solid bed. Build two little concrete walls for the exterior of the beds, and fill between the walls with any refuse soil you have on the place, or coal ashes. Make this filling solid and flush or even with the top of the wall. On this lay a floor of the hollow tile, with a 2x5 edging of concrete. Here you have a bed of perfect drainage, everlasting, and no more expensive than 2x6 plank, and if you don't grow good roses, carnations or mums it will not be the fault of the bed. I have had no experience with an all-cement bed or bench.

The small concrete walls for the exterior of the beds can be any dimensions you choose, but four inches at the base, tapering to two inches at the top, and twelve inches high, will be ample. This height, with the 3-inch tile and four or five inches of soil, will bring your plants to a good working height. As for the exterior walls of the greenhouse, they should not be less than six inches thick, and eight inches would be better. This would allow two inches of concrete on both sides of the hollow tile. SPOTS ON LAWNS.

What is the best course to pursue where spots in the lawn turn brown, the grass and clover dying and large white grubs being found underneath? On taking up the sod, it comes up in sheets, showing that the matted turf has but little connection with the soil below, the connecting roots being eaten off. W. C. E.

The larvæ of the May beetle or June bug are the cause of the lawns dying out in the manner described. We have periodical attacks of this destructive pest in the east, usually at intervals of seven or eight years, and during hot, dry weather. Last June a large part of our lawns was ruined, and hundreds of acres of lawns and pasture lands in this section had to be plowed and reseeded.

The presence of numbers of robins on the lawns is a sure indication of the presence of this pest. These birds are fond of the larvæ, and if a part of the lawns affected can be turned up every few days, the robins will devour large numbers of them. Hand picking may be resorted to, but it is slow and tedious; if the area is not too great it will pay to adopt the following plan: We recommend the application to the whole lawn next spring of a fertilizer composed of 500 pounds of kainite and 200 pounds of nitrate of soda, this amount applied to an acre. It has been found to make the soil distasteful to the pests.

Reseeding should be done about September 1. Previously give the ground an application of air-slaked lime at the rate of 200 pounds per acre, and rake it in. Avoid cow manure for lawn enrichment, as it is usually swarming with the pest. Pulverized sheep manure or well rotted horse manure are preferable, or use bone or wood ashes. The attacks of this pest are only to be feared when lawns are suffering from drought. The larvæ then eat all grass roots away, until the turf can be rolled up like a carpet.

FERTILIZER FOR PEONIES.

We have soil ranging from a sandy loam to a very stiff clay, and some kinds of peonies that are planted in all of our soils show almost a week's difference in period of blooming, while on the lighter soils near us it is over ten days' difference. Banking the soil around the plants quite deeply in the fall, just before severe cold sets in, will also retard the blooming by several days.

We cultivate often, with a cultivator, going through just before severe freezing sets in. After severe freezing we completely cover the ground with well-rotted manure, or manure from the stables that has been thoroughly heated, at the rate of about fifty to sixty tons to the acre. The second year we use about half that amount, and every second year thereafter. On newly planted stock we aim to manure heavily the spring preceding planting, cropping with potatoes or some crop that will be well cultivated, thus neutralizing the manure. After planting we cultivate late, then give a very light application of well-rotted manure. We never use manure freshly worked into the soil on newly planted peonies. It is dangerous. After peonies are established they stand much rough usage.

The Best White Sorts.

We append herewith the best whites. We have a few novelties that are fine, but as they are not obtainable this season we will not include them, but I can say that they will cause such sorts as Festiva maxima, etc., to fall back on the exhibition bench, realizing, too, that that is a very bold statement to make.

Alice de Julvecourt (Pulcherrima), convex flowers, chamois and creamy, lightly flushed carmine, fading nearly white. Nearly all sent out as Pulcherrima are this sort.

Blushing Bride, fine, white guard, center creamy, lemon toupillon center edged carmine.

Boadicea, magnificent, large rosy guards flushed fleshy white, full center, a few petals edged crimson.

Boule de Neige, large, full, creamy center, a few center petals edged carmine.

Canari, the best even delicate canary, fine.

Couronne d'Or, very fine white with yellow reflection; shows stamens, center petals heavily edged carmine.

De La Cour Verhille, large coarse bloom, deep rosy guards, creamy white center.

Duc de Wellington, fine, sulphury white.

Duchess de Nemours (Calot's), one of the best florists' sorts; large white guards, full imbricated center, sulphury white, fades nearly pure. Diamond, Cytheree, Snowball, Sulfurea, Kelway's Mrs. Green Lewis, etc., are all the same thing, or duplicates.

Eugene Verdier, fine, large, full double, opens a fleshy white, fading nearly pure.

Festiva maxima, in some ways one of the finest whites; its fault is that it is not a keeper.

Golden Harvest, an exact reproduction of Jeanne d'Arc; may be described as a creamy lemon and pink, very fine, showy sort.

La Tendresse, fine, creamy, changing to white.

La Voluptuesse, untrue, similar to Marie Lemoine, but much taller.

Mme. Breon, bright rosy guards, center rich yellowish, fading to pure white, large brilliant crimson carpels.

Mme. Emil Galle, large soft lilac, white center, yellowish changing to cream, fine.

Mme. Crousse, pure white center, edged carmine, fine.

Mme. Verneville, fine sulphury white, full, rosy, attractive, one of the freest.

Magnifica, large rosy guards, opens creamy, fading to pure white, showy.

Marie, pure white, suffused chamois, fine, late.

Marie Lemoine, late, enormous white, sulphury; reflection shows stamens, center edged carmine, fine.

Marie Stuart, one of the best of all peonies, blooms before officinalis sorts are over; opens blush white, intermingled larger petals of a rosy white fading to purer color; hardy; every shoot produces a bud.

PEONY PICTURES.

The accompanying illustrations are reproduced, not because of the merits of the varieties, great as they are, but rather because of the perfection of the photographs, which were made by George R. Lawrence, at the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, in early June. They serve better than any others we have seen to show the form and character of the flowers.

Every one knows Festiva maxima, introduced by Miellez more than half a century ago. C. W. Ward says it is one of the most valuable of the white section, and is always in greater demand than any other peony. As a matter of fact, although it has been on the market for fifty years, it is only within the last year or two that it has become sufficiently abundant that one could procure true stock at moderate prices. It is a vigorous grower, of excellent habit, on long,

Peony Delicatissima.

M. DuPont, quite similar to Boule de Neige, fine.

Mont Blanc (Solfatare), one of the best, large white guards, lemony center.

Paganini, bright rose guards, center yellowish, fades lighter; one of the best for florists' use.

Whitleyi (Queen Victoria), more largely grown than any other white for cut blooms; fleshy guards, center creamy white; fades pure; center blotched with carmine; one of the freest of all. We have many whites evidently of this parentage with little variation. They can all be put into the same bunches, with only technical differences.

strong stems; an early bloomer. As the picture shows, the blooms are full double, with broad petalage. It is snow white, with an occasional carmine flake like a drop of blood on the center petals. It is fragrant and free and Peterson says that for many years it has been the standard of perfection in peonies.

Delicatissima, shown in the other illustration, is a large flower of delicate, clear pink. It is an excellent market sort, making a fine bud on a strong stem, opening well in water, and fragrant. This variety is a comparatively modern one, and those who are growing Richardson's Floral Treasure find the two so nearly alike that many consider the names synonyms.

TWO SMALL GREENHOUSES.

I have just built two greenhouses 9½x16 feet. One is for roses and the other for carnations. My object in building them is to gain some practical experience in the growing of these flowers before building larger houses. I have been much interested in greenhouse work for years, and have kept in touch with operations as far as it was possible without being actually engaged in it. The houses are well sheltered, being built at the south side of my house, and running south. The west or north winds will never reach them. The walls are three and a half feet high and will be banked up to the glass on the sides, which will be sixteen inches all around. The walks are sunk nearly a foot below the natural surface of the ground, and I should like to get your advice before building benches, about which there is a great diversity of opinion; and also in reference to the heating. I purpose putting down 2x5 planks, filling with soil, on top of these tile pipes, which will form the bottom of the benches, and boards 1½x7 inches for the sides, inverted sods over the tiles, and an inch of manure, then filled up with soil. My soil is not what I wish, but is a good, rich garden loam, neither sand nor clay, which has been manured heavily for the past two years. It is three parts soil to one of partly rotted cow manure for the rose benches, and four parts soil to one of manure for carnations, which will have a liberal addition of ground bone mixed in before putting on the benches. Benches are six inches from the walls, to allow for piping behind them. Would it be better for me to have raised benches in the carnation houses and grow a few violets under the bench near the walk? I want to get a practical knowledge of the growing of these as well, and don't wish to put up a house especially for them at present. I thought of planting grafted Bride, Maid and Richmond, all of which I understand require the same temperature. What is the closest I can plant them for best results? What size of Spence heater will be necessary to heat them? Please explain how to run the pipes to best advantage. The furnace will be in the cellar under my house. I wish also to heat my kitchen with the same furnace. It is 9x12x16 feet. The cellar floor is about three feet below the floor of the greenhouses. Any other advice you can give a beginner (who is in it to stay) will be appreciated. What varieties of carnations would be best for a starter?

W. A. D.

The aspect of your houses seems all right. Protection from your coldest winds is a great saving to your coal bill. It is not quite clear to me whether your houses are to run east and west or north and south. The former is best, because then you have the south slope to the sun all day, but if you use large glass, 16x24 inches, it will not make much difference. I do not like the sunken paths, and would rather make the walls one foot higher. In case of a freshet or sudden melting of your heavy snows, you may be troubled with water. If your side walls are not at least half glass, then the benches as low as you are planning will be shaded too much by the walls, and instead of 2x5 planks I should advise two small concrete walls ten inches high, four inches thick at the base, and tapering to two inches at the top, and the space between the walls filled in with any refuse material—soil, cinders or clinkers. The top two inches should be soil, for the roots of roses will go down between the tile. Instead of round drain tile for the bottom of the bed use the hollow tile; it is more convenient to shovel off.

The composition of your bed is all right, although the rich garden loam is not what roses like. A sod from a pasture is the thing if you can possibly get it, and it is worth trouble and expense to obtain. The garden loam will do first-rate for the carnations. Your proportion of manure to soil is also correct. Let it be more decayed for the carnations than for the roses. For the carnations add a bushel of slaked lime to every cubic yard of soil. Although it will curtail the area of your bench space, I would keep away from the pipes one foot, so that you can squeeze along between the pipe and the bench to weed, etc. What you lose in bench room you will make up in health of the plants and production of flowers.

Your selection of roses is excellent. You will have the leading varieties, white, pink and red; and try a dozen or two of the Killarney also. Plant roses fifteen inches apart; carnations, according to the size of the plants, from eight to twelve inches apart. Don't attempt to grow violets under the bench. Rather make a narrow bench across the farthest end of your carnation house. Don't attempt in your limited room to try too many varieties of carnations. If you succeed with two or three varieties you can grow all. Try, above all, Lawson, Enchantress and Lady Bountiful, and Estelle for red or scarlet. That is enough for an experiment.

The writer is not acquainted with the Spence boiler. Put two flows and two returns of 2-inch pipe in the rose house, one foot above the greenhouse floor on the side walls, and one flow and two returns on the side wall for the carnation house. Use nothing less than 2-inch pipe. Just how connections should be made from the heater would entail too long a story. For the present you can easily heat your kitchen by tapping the top of the boiler and running a 1-inch pipe up to the kitchen, there to connect with a radiator, and returning with a 1-inch pipe from the other side of the radiator, tapping into the bottom of the boiler or into the return pipe from the greenhouse. Put a valve on the pipe just before it enters the radiator. For some time you may need heat in your greenhouses, while the kitchen may be too warm. The fact that your cellar floor is three feet below the ground level of the greenhouses should give you good circulation. Let the pipes rise from where they enter the greenhouse to the farther end, two inches in the sixteen feet. Send a rough sketch of the position of the boiler and the openings in the boiler, and we will endeavor to help you out.

As these are experimental houses, let the carnation benches be raised and made of lumber; Canadian larch is excellent for the purpose. The height from the floor to the top of the bench should be about thirty inches. W. S.

CHRISTMAS SWEET PEAS.

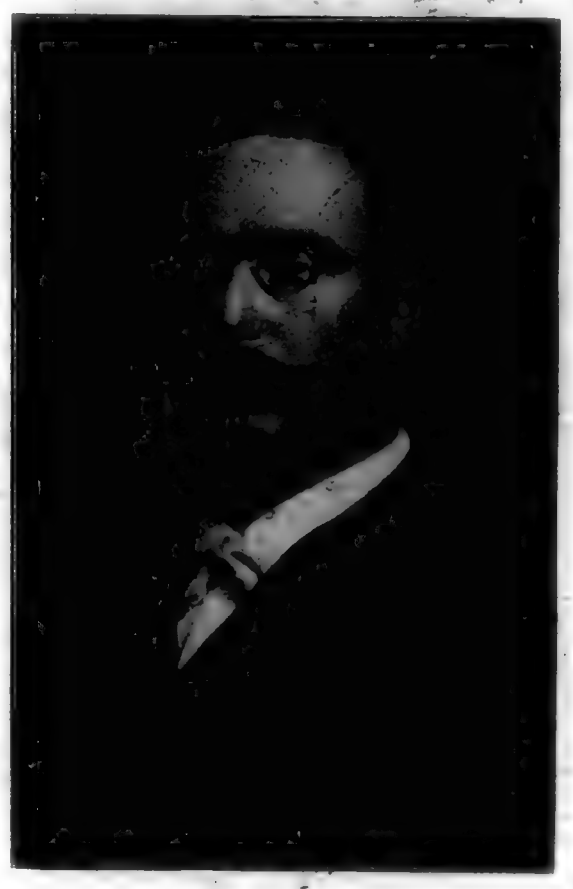
The Origin of the Strain.

About twenty-five years ago I made my first experiments in raising sweet peas in winter under glass. I tried all varieties which were at that date obtainable, but could never raise a plant which would give flowers before the latter part of April. After several years of such experiments I came to the conclusion that it was impossible to get sweet peas earlier than the time mentioned, from the present varieties, so I started cross-fertilization with others, among them the lathyrus, but the first few years without success. I obtained several new varieties, a few of which were double-flowered, but I did not succeed in getting a free-flowering plant until I made a cross with the European vetch, largely grown on farms in central Europe as green fodder. About October, 1891, I sowed some of this seed which I had hybridized with the vetch, and the following January 1, 1892, I was surprised to find two little plants, each with one open flower and several buds. The flowers were very small, color a reddish-pink, and not of much value, the plants growing only to a height of twenty-four inches under glass. But I was satisfied with this for a start, and increased the seed all I possibly could. I crossed and re-crossed each year, and each new hybrid showed improvement over the previous one, in size of flower, color, length of stem, and in the plant itself. The first seedling of value which appeared was obtained from Blanche Ferry; it came of the same color, but the plant was only twenty inches high, under glass, and produced only about ten single flowers; but after much crossing and re-crossing with the parent variety, I secured fine, long-stemmed, large flowers, plants over six feet high, which were covered with masses of bloom all winter.

In 1897 almost every day I was able to send to the New York market several hundred fine blooms. This variety is now known as the Christmas Pink, but it is today a great improvement over what it was in 1897. Crossing this variety with Emily Henderson, I originated, in 1895, Miss Florence Denzer, which is the best of all whites.

I now have sixty-four varieties in all existing colors, from lightest salmon to darkest pink and red, from lightest lavender to darkest blue and purple, also yellows and variegated. All these varieties, when grown under glass, begin to bloom when three to four feet high, and continue flowering all winter, sometimes until June. The plants are covered with a mass of large, long-stemmed flowers. Height of plants, eight to fifteen feet.

Sweet Peas in Winter.



Select the highest light houses for sweet peas. Fill the benches, or well-drained solid beds, with good compost, about three parts sod and one part old horse manure. Drop four to five seeds about 12x20 inches apart; water thoroughly, keep always on the wet side and in a steady growing condition.

White-seeded sweet peas, such as Florence Denzer, must be started in sand, as they seldom germinate if sown directly in soil. Or, soak them over night in water; next morning put them in damp sawdust or some similar material for two to four days until roots about one-fourth of an inch have started. As soon as this start has been made, sow them in moist soil which should stand a few days without watering. Plant either in the benches, where they will grow, or in pots. After the plants start to grow, which will be in two to three days, give them some water and in a few days more they can be watered just as heavily as black-seeded ones. If the space on the benches is not ready, sow in 4-inch or 5-inch pots, and then plant in benches after three or four weeks, but be very careful with the watering, as over-dry or pot-bound plants will never produce good flowers.

When the plants reach a height of six inches they should be given support, and the best method is this: Stretch one wire on bottom and another wire about six feet above that, and connect with strings, from time to time helping the plants to climb.

Ventilation is one of the most important points in growing sweet peas successfully. As soon as sown, all the air possible should be allowed. The best temperature is 45 to 50 degrees at night, 56 degrees during cloudy and 65 to 70 degrees in bright, sunny days. As soon as cool nights arrive, let the steam run in two to four pipes; at the same time the ventilators should be kept open as long as possible, especially when the first buds appear. This will prevent the dropping of buds, especially during rainy or inclement weather.

The first insect which will appear is the green worm, similar to the cabbage worm. These must be picked off every day before they become too numerous. After several hard frosts the worms will disappear. Greenfly is a very bad enemy of sweet peas, but light fumigating or syringing with a light solution of nicotine from time to time will check it if done in time. A. C. Zvolanek.

NEW ORLEANS.

Society Meeting.

July 20 the New Orleans Horticultural Society held its twenty-second annual meeting. The association is over fifty strong, and nearly every member was present. A few communications were first read by the secretary, C. R. Panter. President P. A. Chopin sent his thanks for the present he received from the members on the occasion of his wedding. Charles Wise, 87 years old, was elected a life member. The old gentleman, who is still healthy and active, is much pleased with the distinction. The committee on outing reported on the last trip to Grand Isle. The attendance was not as large as it has been in former years, and some change will have to be made in the future. The finance committee showed a balance on hand of $663. This may look good enough, but the treasury does not seem to improve in proportion with the list of members. C. R. Eichling proposed to increase the monthly dues. H. Papworth said that successful flower shows will bring more money into the treasury. E. Baker was the last to speak and said that our society is as prosperous as any one could wish. Its membership is increasing all the time, following steadily the principle on which it was founded over twenty years ago.

The most important business was the election of officers. Otto Abele was elected president, C. Louis Sieber vice-president, John Eblen treasurer, and C. R. Panter secretary.

The newly elected president was born in Germany, thirty-three years ago, coming to this country when but a boy. His love for nature induced him to learn the florist's business. After serving in several establishments, he started in business on his own account, taking up landscape gardening and the growing of plants while still very young, and was successful from the start. In 1894 he formed a partnership with his brother, Paul Abele, under the firm name of Abele Bros. Being a man of good judgment, high ambition and having a perfect knowledge of the business, he will undoubtedly direct the affairs of the society well. He is also a member of the German Gardeners' Club, of the German Singing Society and other organizations.

Louis Sieber is connected with the Metairie Ridge Nursery, being the secretary of the association. He has been in the business for years, and was for a long time head salesman for the late Mr. Troshler, the veteran seedsman of the south. His nomination was well received.

John Eblen can be called the "old reliable," having held the position of treasurer for twenty-two years in succession.

C. R. Panter was nominated by acclamation, which speaks enough in his favor. Dan Newsham was received as a new member.

To close up the meeting the members sat around a horseshoe table loaded with the best to eat and drink. The toasts were many in number, and were much enjoyed.

Joe Steckler, treasurer of the new Society of Southern Florists, reports forty-seven members who have already paid their initiation fee. He expects to call a meeting soon to decide the date of the next convention, and we hope that by that time the membership will be largely increased. M. M. L.

GLADIOLUS NANUS.

Immense numbers of Gladiolus Colvillei, more especially the white form generally known as The Bride, are forced here and in Europe annually for cutting, but somehow the merits of the different varieties of G. nanus are not yet fully recognized and it is only occasionally that a small batch is met with. This is rather surprising when the great beauty of this section, their ease of culture and low price are considered. We find that given precisely the same conditions as G. Colvillei The Bride, some of G. nanus come into bloom three weeks earlier, while the latest of them come in about the same time as the older and better known sort. The habit is a little less rigid and the spikes can be arranged much more gracefully than in the case of the G. Colvillei varieties. The foliage is a little heavier, of a beautiful dark green color and the plants seem less disposed to die off, as G. Colvillei often does when forced.

We grow them in flats in four inches of compost, treating similarly to Spanish iris, planting fifty to seventy-five bulbs to a bed 12x24. They are fed liberally with liquid manure when the boxes are well filled with roots and the latest lot is stood outdoors about the middle of May, thus giving a succession of flowers until the early part of July. The flowers keep splendidly in water and a large vase of one distinct color will rivet any one's attention at once; for a dinner-table center-piece also they are excellent to say nothing of banquet work. That they are bound to become very popular when better known goes without saying.

The following sorts are especially good and as all are inexpensive any florist who has not yet grown them can make no mistake in trying a few thousands: Apollon, fine deep pink; Mathilda, white, faintly suffused with lavender, early variety, and rather dwarfer in habit than other sorts; Pink Perfection, a much better sort than G. Colvillei roseus; Blushing Bride, really a variety of G. blandus, white ground, dark crimson spot on lower petals, large blotch in the center; Peach Blossom, in our estimation the most beautiful of the whole family, color a delicate peach blossom, received an award of merit in London in 1898; Crimson Queen, bright scarlet, light blotches on lower petals; Ackermanni, rich salmon orange, flowers very large and handsome, spikes extra strong; Salmon Queen, beautiful rich orange.

While the various forms of G. Colvillei and G. nanus can be planted outdoors as soon as the ground is open and will flower in June, we find we can get better spikes in flats, and furthermore these latter can be hastened or retarded as needed. W. N. C.

GERANIUMS FROM SEED.

Heretofore I have always multiplied my stock of geraniums by cuttings, but desire to experiment with seed. Will you kindly tell me when to pick the seeds, at what stage of development, and how soon thereafter it is advisable to sow them for commercial purpose?

D. W. D.

What we know as geraniums in this country are called by their correct name in Europe, zonal pelargoniums. In fact, pelargonium is the correct botanical name of the whole genus, which consists of hundreds of species, some of which were introduced into the gardens of Europe more than two centuries ago, and these numerous species have been so crossed and blended that there is scarcely left an original species in cultivation. At present the pelargonium can be grouped into four classes, and of late years it is easy to observe that some varieties have the blood of two crosses. For instance, that fine semi-double scarlet, Trego, must be a cross between Pelargonium zonale and the ivy-leaved section, or Pelargonium peltatum.

Broadly, the four distinct classes are as follows: first, the zonal or horseshoe, used so extensively for bedding the world over, so admirably suited to the temperate latitudes of this country, and universally known as geraniums; second, the ivy-leaved geraniums, the offspring of Pelargonium peltatum, so largely used for trailing plants in baskets and vases; this class seems to remain nearer to its ancestor than any other class, yet it has been so improved in stoutness of habit, form, substance and color of bloom, that it is doubtful whether the parent, P. peltatum, would recognize its offspring as being any relation; third, the scented geraniums, as a sample, the rose and nutmeg, two well known varieties; fourth, the show and fancy type. This is the only class known in this country as pelargonium, and absurdly as Lady or Martha Washington.

It is true that our climate and other environments do not suit the show pelargonium as well as those of western Europe, yet it can be and is grown in many gardens and some commercial places with great success. The writer has a reverence for this beautiful plant because it was the successful production of a few thousand pelargoniums for three or four years, and selling them at a public market first enabled us to collect ducats enough to start in business. It has a short and gay season of bloom in May or June, and after that makes its strongest growth, with few if any flowers, so it is totally unfit for a bedding plant. We no longer grow it and if we did it would sell poorly. The plants are sadly addicted to more than one species of aphis. If dampness surrounds them they drop their petals, and the wonderful perfection which the zonal geranium has now attained accounts for the passing of the show pelargonium. The cooler and less bright weather of England seems best suited to this fine plant, for at the leading flower shows of Great Britain the firm of Charles Turner, of Stough, England, annually exhibits plants not over two feet above the pot, and seven feet in diameter, with thousands of flowers. They are a sight not easily forgotten. Now it is possible that many of these widely dissimilar types would cross and have been crossed, hence the multitudes of varieties now cultivated.

Pelargoniums of any kind are only produced from seed with the object of raising a new and improved variety. The pelargoniums bear seeds readily without any artificial pollenization. If you want to cross two good varieties, the process is simple. Merely introduce the pollen of one variety to the stigma of another flower. It would be safest to do this under glass, not out of doors, or the bees or butterflies may have preceded you in your work. Early spring would be a favorable time. The seed should be gathered as soon as the seed pods are ripe, and sown at once. Don't think for a moment that raising the zonal geranium from seed is as profitable as from cuttings. If you raised 500 plants from seed, it would be two years before you had any fit for sale. Among the 500 would be a few as good as their parents, possibly one or two superior, but the great majority would have all sorts of freak colors and all the poor qualities of their countless progenitors. Unless your desire is to raise and disseminate new varieties, stick to your cutting bed or small pots. W. S.

CHRISTMAS SWEET PEAS.

The Origin of the Strain.

About twenty-five years ago I made my first experiments in raising sweet peas in winter under glass. I tried all varieties which were at that date obtainable, but could never raise a plant which would give flowers before the latter part of April. After several years of such experiments I came to the conclusion that it was impossible to get sweet peas earlier than the time mentioned, from the present varieties, so I started cross-fertilization with others, among them the lathyrus, but the first few years without success. I obtained several new varieties, a few of which were double-flowered, but I did not succeed in getting a free-flowering plant until I made a cross with the European vetch, largely grown on farms in central Europe as green fodder. About October, 1891, I sowed some of this seed which I had hybridized with the vetch, and the following January 1, 1892, I was surprised to find two little plants, each with one open flower and several buds. The flowers were very small, color a reddish-pink, and not of much value, the plants growing only to a height of twenty-four inches under glass. But I was satisfied with this for a start, and increased the seed all I possibly could. I crossed and recrossed each year, and each new hybrid showed improvement over the previous one, in size of flower, color, length of stem, and in the plant itself. The first seedling of value which appeared was obtained from Blanche Ferry; it came of the same color, but the plant was only twenty inches high, under glass, and produced only about ten single flowers; but after much crossing and recrossing with the parent variety, I secured fine, long-stemmed, large flowers, plants over six feet high, which were covered with masses of bloom all winter.

In 1897 almost every day I was able to send to the New York market several hundred fine blooms. This variety is now known as the Christmas Pink, but it is today a great improvement over what it was in 1897. Crossing this variety with Emily Henderson, I originated, in 1895, Miss Florence Denzer, which is the best of all whites.

I now have sixty-four varieties in all existing colors, from lightest salmon to darkest pink and red, from lightest lavender to darkest blue and purple, also yellows and variegated. All these varieties, when grown under glass, begin to bloom when three to four feet high, and [illegible] times over. The plants are covered with masses of large, long-stemmed flowers. Height of plants, eight to fifteen feet.

Sweet Peas in Winter.

Select the lightest light houses for sweet peas. Fill the benches, or well-drained solid beds, with good compost, about three parts sod and one part old horse manure. Drop four to five seeds about 12x12 inches apart; water thoroughly, keep always on the wet side and in a steady growing condition.

White-seeded sweet peas, such as Florence Denzer, must be started in sand, as they seldom germinate if sown directly in soil. Or, soak them over night in water; next morning put them in damp sawdust or some similar material for two to four days until roots about one-fourth of an inch have started. As soon as this start has been made, sow them in moist soil which should stand a few days without watering. Plant either in the benches, where they will grow, or in pots. After the plants start to grow, which will be in two to three days, give them some water and in a few days more they can be watered just as heavily as black-seeded ones. If the space on the benches is not ready, sow in 4-inch or 5-inch pots, and then plant in benches after three or four weeks, but be very careful with the watering, as over-dry or pot-bound plants will never produce good flowers.

When the plants reach a height of six inches they should be given support, and the best method is this: Stretch one wire on bottom and another wire about six feet above that, and connect with strings, from time to time helping the plants to climb.

Ventilation is one of the most important points in growing sweet peas successfully. As soon as sown, all the air possible should be allowed. The best temperature is 45 to 50 degrees at night, 50 degrees during cloudy and 65 to 75 degrees in bright, sunny days. As soon as cool nights arrive, let the steam run in two to four pipes at the same time the ventilators should be kept open as long as possible, especially when the first buds appear. This will prevent the dropping of buds, especially during rainy or hot weather.

The first insect which will appear is the green worm, similar to the cabbage worm. These must be picked off every day before they become too numerous. After several hard frosts the worms will disappear. Greenfly is a very bad enemy of sweet peas, but light fumigating or syringing with a light solution of nicotine from time to time will check it if done in time. A. C. Zvolanek.

NEW ORLEANS.

Society Meeting.

July 20 the New Orleans Horticultural Society held its twenty-second annual meeting. The association is over fifty strong, and nearly every member was present. A few communications were first read by the secretary, C. R. Panter. President P. A. Chopin sent his thanks for the present he received from the members on the occasion of his wedding. Charles Wise, 87 years old, was elected a life member. The old gentleman, who is still healthy and active, is much pleased with the distinction. The committee on outing reported on the last trip to Grand Isle. The attendance was not as large as it has been in former years, and some change will have to be made in the future. The finance committee showed a balance on hand of $663. This may look good enough, but the treasury does not seem to improve in proportion with the list of members. C. R. Eichling proposed to increase the monthly dues. H. Papworth said that successful flower shows will bring more money into the treasury. E. Baker was the last to speak and said that our society is as prosperous as any one could wish. Its membership is increasing all the time, following steadily the principle on which it was founded over twenty years ago.

The most important business was the election of officers. Otto Abele was elected president, C. Louis Sieber vice-president, John Eblen treasurer, and C. R. Panter secretary.

The newly elected president was born in Germany, thirty-three years ago, coming to this country when but a boy. His love for nature induced him to learn the florist's business. After serving in several establishments, he started in business on his own account, taking up landscape gardening and the growing of plants while still very young, and was successful from the start. In 1894 he formed a partnership with his brother, Paul Abele, under the firm name of Abele Bros. Being a man of good judgment, high ambition and having a perfect knowledge of the business, he will undoubtedly direct the affairs of the society well. He is also a member of the German Gardeners' Club, of the German Singing Society and other organizations.

Louis Sieber is connected with the Metairie Ridge Nursery, being the secretary of the association. He has been in the business for years, and was for a long time head salesman for the late Mr. Treasher, the veteran seedsman of the south. His nomination was well received.

John Eblen can be called the "old reliable," having held the position of treasurer for twenty-two years in succession.

C. R. Panter was nominated by acclamation, which speaks enough in his favor. Dan Newsham was received as a new member.

To close up the meeting the members sat around a horseshoe table loaded with the best to eat and drink. The toasts were many in number, and were much enjoyed.

The S. A. F. convention opens at Dayton, O., Tuesday, August 21, and continues until Friday, August 24. Every indication is that the attendance will be probably the largest in the history of the society.

CYANIDE FUMIGATION.

I notice on page 515 of the REVIEW for July 19, that A. F. J. Baur endorses my formula for using or generating cyanide gas, for which I am very thankful, but Mr. Baur goes on to caution people to be careful in the method of use, and advises that the little parcels of cyanide be dropped into the jars through a hole in the roof by a string. This plan is tedious and awkward, and may deter some readers from using this excellent remedy against the minute white fly and other troublesome insects. I can assure Mr. Baur and others that there is not the slightest danger if you follow directions given on page 461. For instance, if your house takes six or ten jars, a jar for every 2,000 cubic feet of atmosphere, they should be set on the paths and equally distributed. When the sulphuric acid and water are mixed and the jars are in place, you go to the end of the house farthest from the door and drop the parcel of cyanide into the first jar, then walk to the next, and so on until you reach the door. In fact, you scarcely even smell the gas. Don't stop between jars to light your pipe, tell a story, or dance the highland fling, and there will not be the slightest danger. I am positive of this, for frequently we have operated nine or ten jars, and then stood with our noses inside the house and legs outside, waiting to inhale the fumes and contemplating the glorious massacre that was going on among our little enemies. The hole in the roof and string are quite unnecessary. Of that I am absolutely positive. WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE DAYTON SOUVENIR.

To offset a wrong impression, created by a communication from a member of this club, recently published in the trade papers, we wish to state that the reference made to the publication of the Dayton Souvenir being left to "private enterprise," was made without knowledge of the actual conditions and does an injustice to H. M. Altick, in charge of this work.

We therefore, by action of this club, fully endorse H. M. Altick's statement of facts published in a recent issue of this paper, as correct in every respect, and herewith assure the patrons of the Souvenir and the members of the S. A. F. that their support of this publication will aid the Dayton Florists' Club in making a successful convention.

The Market.

The feature of the market this week is the increase in asters, now of excellent quality, in every shade of color that is favored by this summer beauty. Valley is also an important factor. Carnations are scarce, really fine blooms commanding high prices. Sweet peas are not abundant. Album and rubrum lilies are seen, as well as auratum. The New England roses continue to be the best in the market. Greens are plentiful. Business is good for midsummer.

Various Notes.

Harry Bayersdorfer and Mrs. Bayersdorfer returned home on the steamer New York, arriving last Sunday. They went at once to Atlantic City. Mr. Bayersdorfer, when seen at his office on Monday, said they had brought the crew of a wrecked vessel safely to port. He spoke with pleasure of his trip, promising to show the florists of America some beautiful novelties of which his firm has exclusive control.

W. J. Sherry, of the Johnson Seed Co., reports an encouraging local and out-of-town demand. German millet is an exception, there being next to no demand, owing to the rainy season.

Robert H. Glass is no longer with the Leo Niessen Co.

J. Liddon Pennock is the hero of a yacht race sailed at Ocean City, N. J., last Saturday. He took his brother, Samuel Sellers, along as ballast. Brother being a novice in the art of yachting, unluckily in the excitement of the race the ballast fell into the water, where, when the clever skipper described a circle, he rescued the ballast, and won the race amid applause.

M. Rice & Co. closed the best year in the history of the house on June 30. July is away ahead of the same month last year.

The Henry F. Michell Co. has installed a new private branch telephone exchange, both Bell and Keystone, the operator on the platform in the center of the store connecting the caller with any person desired, on any floor of the main building or in the annex.

Leo Niessen has been visiting the rose houses of some of the growers who ship such fine roses to his company. Frank P. Myers has over 25,000 Beauties planted. All are in fine condition. George Burton's place promises to uphold his high reputation of the past seasons. All the houses are in Beauties save one planted with Golden Gate. John C. Andre has a house of Killarney worth going miles to see. His Brides and Maids are also fine. Joseph Beavis & Son have three houses in Maids, two each in Liberty and Kaiserin and one each in Bride and Richmond, all in excellent condition. George C. Campbell has his new house finished and planted with Richmond. His place shows the effect of conscientious work.

Now is the time to buy rubber hose. The rainy season has caused a break in the market of 2 cents a foot on some good brands.

Lilium Harrisii are arriving in good shape.

The Stokes Seed Store has some nice celery plants grown on Mr. Stokes' place at Moorestown.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

54.—I notice over your pen name of "Phil," you and Mr. F., and possibly a few others, are trying to claim a discovery, that the growing of plants is a profession. Am sorry, for at best it may only be claimed as a rediscovery, for said occupation was known as a profession when I was an apprentice and how long before that time the necessary history is not at hand in aiding in determining. All horticulturists, I believe, who gleaned some inkling as to the intricacies of plant life in Great Britain pride themselves as belonging to a profession.

I said, "Who had the courage to say profession?" Nearly all our writers and public speakers use the word "trade," sometimes "business." I am sure you will join with me in doing the utmost to elevate our calling to the rank of a profession. PHIL.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There is no great stir in the market, but nevertheless trade is as good as could be expected at this date. July, 1905, was unanimously reported to have been the best on record, but the indications are that this month will be as good in the majority of houses, and with some that are fortunate in having special crops of summer stock it will prove an even better July than that of a year ago. Shipping demand is active, although the orders are not large. This week started with a brisk city trade so far as number of buyers went, but, of course, requirements were limited. One house reported ninety-eight tickets made on Monday at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

The increase in demand in the last few days is doubtless largely due to the fact that crops are at about the lowest level. With a majority of outside growers no roses are being cut and the carnation houses have been cleared. There are still plenty of roses in our market, but carnations have shortened materially and good carnations are excellent property this week. There continue to be good supplies of red roses and several growers are cutting quite a few Brides and Maids from old plants. Young stock is beginning to make its appearance, especially of Beauties, but, of course, the latter are short. A few outdoor carnations are seen, but they do not have the quality to make them salable. Good indoor stock readily brought $1.50 to $2 per hundred the first of this week.

Asters are now available in quantity. The quality generally is no more than medium. Bright weather has made short stems and the centers are open. The glut of sweet peas is passed and what remain are of only indifferent quality. Auratum lilies are exceedingly abundant and sell very low. Longiflorum does better. Gladioli are increasing in quantity each day. Quality varies widely and so do the prices. Tuberoses are arriving. Many outdoor flowers are seen, but are not especially attractive to the retailers, for the weather has not been favorable and quality is low.

The Latest Peonies.

Monday afternoon, July 23, Kruchten & Johnson still had seventy-three dozens of peonies in the ice-box. The variety was Late Rose and these were absolutely the last of the season. They had been in cold storage for something over four weeks, and had been in the firm's ice-box for nearly a week longer, coming out in remarkably good shape. It is believed that this is the latest date to which peonies ever have been kept in cold storage.

Azores Lilies.

Bassett & Washburn are marketing quite a cut of lilies from the Azores bulbs spoken of in last week's issue. These longiflorums had been in cold storage for eleven months, and were so anxious to bloom that the flowers were ready before much stem had been made. The bloom is of much heavier texture than are those from either Bermuda or Japan bulbs and will stand considerable handling without bruising. Bassett & Washburn are well pleased with their experience with the Azores lilies.

Cold Storage Candidum.

The A. L. Randall Co. is this week closing out the last of its candidum lilies. These were placed in cold storage June 23. They did not keep nearly so well as last year because a large proportion of the flowers were spotted when placed in cold storage, and the spot developed a brown rot which spoiled the flowers. The price realized has not been so good as a year ago, but much better than could have been done if the stock had all been placed on the market when it was cut.

Various Notes.

Philip Foley, president of the Foley Mfg. Co., is away on a tour of inspection of his western lumber and mining interests.

Fred Strail closed his store at 164 Adams street by invitation of one of his creditors. His present address is stated to be room 213, 175 Dearborn street, where he is engaged in another line of business.

The plans for the improvement of the west parks include the expenditure of $275,000 for conservatories and greenhouse at Garfield park, and the expenditure of $31,000 for a flower garden at Humboldt park. Jens Jensen, as general superintendent of the west parks, is making pronounced improvements.

L. Baumann & Co. are preparing to make a large display at the Dayton convention. Mr. Baumann found a number of excellent novelties while on his European trip.

E. F. Winterson is at West Baden doctoring his rheumatism. Miss Amanda Davidson, who presides over the Winterson books, is on a vacation and L. H. Winterson finds his hands full.

A. L. Vaughan and family returned on Tuesday from their outing at Spirit Lake, Wis. They report so much rain that the pleasure of the trip was partly spoiled, while Chicago growers report field plants burning up.

The J. B. Deamud Co. reports excellent business this week, being fortunate in having quite a quantity of carnations which grade well for the season.

J. P. Risch and H. W. Rodgers are home from a week's fishing trip, during which they left the store in charge of Mr. Risch, Sr., and Miss Furlong.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, who is partly a Chicagoan, for he belongs to our Florists' Club, left for St. Louis Tuesday, having spent a fortnight here.

L. Coatsworth plans to take his family to his old home in Canada for a month's visit, during which he will attend the meeting of the Canadian Horticultural Association.

J. P. Degnan is on his western trip.

Peter Reinberg is beginning to cut the new rose, Mrs. Marshall Field, in considerable quantity. He believes this rose will be in great demand as soon as the fall season opens, for local retailers are taking to it even at its summer quality.

Wietor Bros. are beginning to cut from a big field of asters. N. J. Wietor reports disease affecting the purples, but white and pink doing nicely.

John Zech is at LaPorte, Ind., for a few days.

George Reinberg is cutting some very nice Brides, which go a long way toward keeping up his daily sales record.

The Pieser brothers, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., are taking their vacation this year a half day at a time. G. H. Pieser has been going home each day in time for luncheon and beginning next week E. E. Pieser will do his day's work before noon.

At E. H. Hunt's they report the supply department doing a very nice business, the retailers over a wide range of country stocking up with requisites for fall trade.

The Chicago Rose Co. says the summer sale of wire work is brisk.

Among the week's visitors were Mr. Forsberg, manager of the J. C. Rennison establishment at Sioux City; H. F. Pruyer, Baraboo, Wis., getting prices on greenhouse building material; Andrew Anderson, Batavia, Ill.; Eli Cross, Grand Rapids; Gus Frederickson, Glen Lord, Mich.; Benj. Bartcher, Denison, Iowa.

BOSTON.

The Market.

For the dog-day weather, such as we have been enjoying of late, cut flower trade has been fully as good as could be expected. Some days there is a heavy overstock, but on others flowers clean up pretty well. Receipts are small and many growers are sending nothing in. Carnations are of poor quality, selling from 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred, a few bringing $2. Roses command "any old price," to quote a salesman at one of the markets. Beauties are not plentiful, but some very good Kaiserin and Carnot are seen. Chatenay also continues good.

Sweet peas are arriving in larger numbers and vary from 15 cents to 25 cents per hundred. Popular selling varieties are King Edward VII, Lady Grisel Hamilton, Miss Wilmott, Countess of Radnor and such whites as Emily Henderson and Dorothy Eckford. Outdoor gladioli and dahlias are coming in small lots. Asters are becoming much more abundant and sell at from $1 to $2 per hundred. Candytuft, gypsophila, perennial phlox, achillea and other outdoor material are seen. Adiantum and asparagus remain about the same.

Exhibition.

Sweet peas were the chief attraction at the exhibition in Horticultural hall on July 21 and, considering the humid atmospheric conditions which had prevailed for several days, causing spot on the blooms, the display was good, filling six tables. For thirty varieties, twenty-five sprays of each, W. J. Clemson, J. O. Kristenson gardener, won with a good selection. For twelve varieties Joseph Thorpe led with a very finely colored lot, followed by A. E. Hartshorn and W. Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener. O. B. Kenrick, A. E. Hartshorn and W. J. Clemson won in order named for fifty sprays white, all showing Dorothy Eckford. For light pink or blush A. E. Hartshorn was first, with excellent Countess Spencer, followed by E. L. Lewis and W. J. Clemson with Gladys Unwin. E. L. Lewis had the best fifty rose-colored, showing American Queen, also the best blue or purple shade, Helen Pierce. A. E. Hartshorn, with fine Mrs. George Higginson, won out on lavender, W. J. Clemson second with Lady G. Hamilton, O. B. Kenrick third with the same variety. The last named led with scarlet, showing good sprays of King Edward VII. In a strong class for orange or salmon-pink W. J. Clemson was first with Miss Wilmott; Mrs. A. W. Blake, J. L. Smith gardener, second, with Lady Mary Currie; W. L. Lewis third with Miss Wilmott. For any other color E. L. Lewis took first and second with Maid of Honor and America, O. B. Kenrick third with Stanley.

Additional honorary displays of sweet peas were made by W. W. Rawson & Co., who had large bunches of twenty of the newest and best sorts; Mrs. E. M. Gill, E. L. Lewis, W. J. Clemson and others. For six pans achimenes Mrs. J. L. Gardner, William Thatcher gardener, was first, also for best tank of aquatics. W. Whitman showed two splendid tubs of Hydrangea Otaksa, carrying over 200 heads each, also some well flowered plants of H. Otaksa rosea. He also had a large general display of cut flowers. Harvard Botanic Gardens as usual had a fine display of perennials and annuals in over 100 varieties, also two tanks of aquatics.

R. & J. Farquhar had some superb vases of lilies and other hardy plants, their Lilium auratum, L. superbum, Hemerocallis aurantiaca fl. pl., and Physostegia Virginica alba being especially fine. Blue Hill Nurseries had perennial phloxes in variety and the bright Lilium Chalcedonicum. Mrs. A. W. Blake had a large general display, including splendid Lilium superbum. Joseph Thorpe had a nice collection of dahlias, the first exhibited this season. E. L. Lewis had hollyhocks, Mrs. E. M. Gill and Mrs. J. B. Lawrence general displays. George F. Fabyan, James Stuart gardener, showed Shirley poppies and Hypericum Moserianum. J. Tailby & Son showed several seedling yellow callas. One, named Mrs. J. Tailby, of a pale yellow color and unique variegated foliage, received honorable mention.

J. E. Rothwell received a first-class certificate for Cypripedium Rolfei (Bellatylum x Rothschildianum). He also showed fine cut odontoglossums, phalænopsis, cypripediums and cattleyas. William Thatcher had a nice batch of the bright Clerodendron fallax.

On July 14 J. Tailby & Son showed Lonicera tragophylla, one of Veitch's recent introductions from western China through E. H. Wilson. The flowers are yellow in color and three inches in length. The plant shown was small and on this occasion received honorable mention. We hope it may prove hardy in New England.

The Boston Mycological Club had a fine display of fungi on exhibition July 21. The damp season suits the mushroom family.

Club Picnic.

Everything is in readiness for the Gardeners' and Florists' Club's picnic at Waushakum grove, South Framingham, July 25, and at the hour of writing climatic conditions promise to be favorable. The picnic occurs a little too late to report in this week's REVIEW. There are twenty-five events to be competed for in the sports department, including baseball, cricket, quoits, throwing the hammer, tug of war, races of all kinds, and in fact about everything that goes to make up a veritable sporting carnival. In the cricket game and tug of war commercial growers are pitted against private gardeners.

Several hundred dollars' worth of prizes are offered, comprising a wide assortment of valuable, ornamental, and useful articles. The donors include Lord & Burnham Co., W. E. Doyle, Welch Bros., Edward Hatch, Bay State Nurseries, H. M. Robinson & Co., W. W. Edgar Co., Braman, Dow & Co.; A. H. Hews & Co., Houghton & Clark, David Lumsden, J. Beck & Son, J. T. Grey & Co., O. Finlayson, James Wheeler, F. E. Palmer, Peter Miller, J. W. Duncan, Schlegel & Fottler Co., Daniel Iliffe, Henry Penn, Julius Zinn, Alexander Montgomery, Framingham Nurseries, W. J. Stewart, A. F. Scott, Shady Hills Nursery Co., Holly Castle Co., Thomas Roland, A. T. Stearns Lumber Co., Philip Feinstein, William Sim and R. & J. Farquhar & Co., the last named firm donating 150 boxes of chocolates for the ladies.

Various Notes.

The rival Park Street Market and Music Hall Market baseball teams will battle for supremacy on August 5 at Child's Farm, Waltham. Last year the Music Hall boys came out ahead in the game played at Robert Montgomery's. This year their rivals are determined to turn the tables on them in a decisive manner, and with J. R. Free as manager and the stalwart William R. Nicholson as captain they feel confident they can accomplish the trick. The Music Hall team is getting ready for the fray under the captaincy of T. F. Matthews and management of W. C. Ward.

Lewis R. Jackson, of Woburn, is adding a new greenhouse which will just double his area of glass.

The H. E. Fiske Seed Co., just incorporated, makes an addition to Boston's list of seed houses. H. E. Fiske, the treasurer, is late manager for W. W. Rawson & Co. The president is P. H. Stratton and the clerk S. W. Calver. The capital is $30,000.

Robert Marshall, of Newton, one of our best plantsmen and gardeners, will succeed A. J. Newell in charge of Mrs. R. M. Clark's estate at Pomfret, Conn.

John K. M. L. Farquhar hopes to sail on a European trip about August 11.

J. Tailby & Son, of Wellesley, have a fine display of hybrid yellow callas in their fields at present which attracts the notice of many of the passengers on the Boston & Albany railroad, which runs very close to them.

Waban Conservatories are sending in very fine blooms of the new rose, Wellesley. It has a good sale in Brockton, Lynn and other cities outside of Boston.

Elm leaf beetles have been unusually destructive this season, not only in Boston and suburbs, but in many other towns and cities. Many fine trees are now nearly denuded of foliage, while others have a brown and seared appearance.

Quite a few carnation growers are now busy housing their stock from the fields. Plants look well and are larger than in 1905.

W. H. Elliott finds Wellesley a good summer rose. He is growing several thousands of it at his Medbury, N. H., establishment.

Michael Galligan, a well known landscape gardener in Bristol county, died at Attleboro on July 20, aged 60 years. He leaves eight children.

J. Leech & Son, North Easton, are adding a new carnation house and boiler this season and making other improvements. W. N. CRAIG.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

If there is any business going on among the retailers, except a little funeral work, we haven't heard of it. The weather has been hot and Old Humidity is getting in his work in great shape. Little activity is shown at the wholesale houses during the morning hours. Everybody is talking picnic. According to the interest shown it should be a grand success. Quite a lot of fair stock is coming in. Some very nice asters, white and purple, are selling well. They are cheap enough, and with any kind of work should yield a good profit to the retailer. Sweet peas are still plentiful, but stems are becoming shorter every day. In lots of 1,000 the price is cheap.

showing fair quality. Bride and Maid are still afflicted more or less with mildew. Ivory, Kaiserin, Carnot and Perle are of better quality with good demand. Gladioli are abundant and the commission houses find it hard to dispose of them even at $1 per hundred. Little valley is seen in the market at present. Greens of all kinds are equal to all demands.

Various Notes.

George M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, spent Tuesday of last week in this city. Mr. Kellogg will go to Dayton with the St. Louis delegation.

S. B. Beal, with L. L. May & Co., St. Paul, was in the city last week.

Frank M. Ellis, after an absence of six months, is expected home next week. In a letter Mr. Ellis says that he has a good thing in his banana plantation.

W. C. Smith and Will Adels are out hustling in the interest of the Florists' Club. They say they will present six applications for membership at the next meeting of the club, August 9.

A correction should be made in the notes of the Edwardsville trip in last issue, which should have stated that only for the election of officers the next meeting would be held in Belleville, Ill. The articles of incorporation require that we elect officers in Missouri.

By the new bond issue $670,000 can be expended by the park department for new parks, to enlarge the old ones and make improvements. It has been stated that the old fair-grounds will be bought and new greenhouses will be built at Forest park, the old ones being too small.

Chief Clerk J. H. Nolen, of the State Labor Bureau, reports that the farmers who grew ginseng sold $105,648 worth of it this year, the weight of this being 17,608 pounds, and that the bulk of it was shipped to China.

Carew Sanders, one of the oldest members of the Florists' Club, has been sick of late. Let us hope to see him at the picnic Thursday, as Mr. Sanders seldom misses one of the club's outings.

All of the wholesale houses and some of the retail stores will close half a day on Thursday in order to give their employees a chance to attend the Florists' Club's outing.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Heat enough for all practical purposes and humidity to burn was the record last week, so far as New York weather was concerned. This concerns the florists most because of the big rise on ice, prices going up to the value of a best Beauty, 35 cents for a hundred pounds. As wholesale florists use ice by the ton in some of the big boxes, you can see an even temperature is just now a serious problem. The ice trust has the flower merchants by the esophagus.

Not only did Beauties soar last Saturday, but carnations were also scarce and high. Scarcity rather than demand was the uplifting power. The weather was at the bottom of all the trouble, but it was just ordinary July weather after all. Looking back at July of other years, history repeats itself. It's the old story. There will be no change until after the convention.

Roses begin to improve and really good stock secures excellent prices. Carnations are scarce and when wanted command encouraging values. The lilies rise to 10 cents at times and the supply is light. Green goods of all kinds are stagnant.

Orchids go neither up nor down. The Newport season is slow to open and the expected call from society has not been heard. In fact, there is some speculation as to an unusually dull season in the city by the sea. Sweet peas were unquotable Saturday, they were so abundant and so poor. Gladioli are rising, not in price, but like the tides, higher and higher, until soon the local flood will overwhelm us. Soon the rivers Childs and Cowee will overflow their banks and many a smaller stream, too, will empty into this big harbor.

Various Notes.

The interest in the convention grows steadily. It has been pretty thoroughly stirred up during the last two weeks and everybody is talking about it. J. B. Heiss has been here arranging with exhibitors. Boddington already has a fine display of cannas there and will make a big showing in Convention hall. Harry Bunyard, of this house, is also official traveling representative of the S. A. F. and has the credentials of President Kasting in his inside pocket. The ribbon men will have handsome exhibits and the boiler men and the supply men, and in fact in exhibits and attendance New York purposes to maintain its reputation. John Birnie to the contrary notwithstanding, it may attach first honors in the bowling contest. New York always has enough reserve material to make a good showing without giving lessons to Flatbush and Hoboken. John can thank the courtesy of the New York Club for Jersey's showing at the outing. Such rewards and variety are promised the sport lovers at Dayton by Chairman Altick that everybody is devoting time to physical perfection for the occasion, and so many unusual features of entertainment are listed that the ambitious and generous little city deserves a record crowd in acknowledgment of its enterprise and devotion to the national society.

James McManus reports the excursion of his life to Denver and the mountains. He saw no orchids on Pike's Peak, but he did see the Spanish peaks of Arizona 135 miles away, and he finds the far west awake to the fact that the orchid is the king of flowers and that every city of the land must have them.

Another suburbanite has found the land boom profitable. G. F. Neipp, of Aqueduct, L. I., has vacated in behalf of the Brooklyn water supply, which is short.

J. T. Lovett and family, of Little Silver, are enjoying a vacation amid the mountain resorts of Pennsylvania. The firm has just completed the largest nursery business in its long career.

V. L. Outerbridge has just returned from a six weeks' business trip to Bermuda.

F. H. Henry, of Henry & Lee, is now on the lily island. Everybody this year will have a short supply of large Harrisii. There will be a big call, therefore, for Japs and everything now indicates a banner crop. Owing to excessive rain in April and frosts in March, only half the quantity of the French stock of candidums may be expected. The first shipment of the year of Chinese lilies reached the coast last Saturday.

The youngest wholesaler was a year old last Friday, and now it's Traendly, Schenck & Traendly.

John J. Perkins had the misfortune to lose one of his best horses from the excessive heat last Thursday. Mr. Perkins says the move of the wholesale business to Twenty-eighth street was a profitable one.

John Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, leaves August 1 for a holiday at Lake George, with his family.

John Seligman leaves on Saturday of this week for the Adirondacks. Jos. Levy, of this company, will unite his holiday in September with a very interesting event that includes honeymoon festivities.

M. A. Bowe and family are at Asbury Park, N. J. Mr. Bowe had some elaborate funeral designs last week at the obsequies of two of New York's most prominent attorneys, Walter S. Logan and J. Cardoza, orchid wreaths and a 6-foot broken column among them. The church was decorated profusely with large palms.

Michael Ford is away for his usual summer outing.

Mr. Hoffmeier is still recuperating from his arduous devotion to the outing, much of its success showing evidence of his persistent effort.

Arthur Wient, of Froment's, the man of all trades, is off for a two weeks' fishing trip.

F. L. Moore, of Chatham, has been up at Mt. Utsayantha, Stamford, N. Y., for a holiday, a fine health resort on the Delaware river.

Every wholesaler but one signed the document for 3 o'clock closing until September. The single immovable put the hour to 4 o'clock, which is now generally observed. "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump."

Charles Smith, of Woodside, has purchased fifteen acres of splendid land at Bound Brook, N. J., where he will reside and at once erect two 20-foot houses. He made a most advantageous purchase. One of his sons will accompany him and "the good twins" will continue to run the Woodside plant as well.

The Pierson U-Bar Co. is applying its construction to the florists' use in a somewhat novel and thoroughly practical manner in erecting show rooms, in which under conditions unmatched for lightness, attractiveness and downright cheery convincingness, the flowers and plants are shown to best possible advantage. This is positively an age when "any old thing" won't do; even the callous buyers who cry against innovations are the first to fall prey to advanced, inviting methods.

Victor Dorval and Gus Schraeder, of Long Island, are away on a trip to the Falls and down the St. Lawrence, through the Thousand Isles.

Myer, of 609 Madison, has a very artistic window trimmed with oak bark and clinging ivy, a 5-foot tank in the center with rockery filled with goldfish, turtles and ducklings. The bottom is covered with moss and leads to a miniature forest where a large hawk with chickens in beak and claw presides. A lot of interest is created and the value of unique and original decorative work is emphasized. So many opportunities for brainy work in window display are afforded in New York windows, and such an audience is always sure, it's a wonder more do not wake up to its importance. The handsome lily ponds at Small's and Warendorff's are as attractive as ever. There is plenty of time in summer for thinking and doing along these lines.

George A. Kuhl, of Pekin, Ill., and family passed through New York last week on their way to Portland, Me., for their month's vacation. The rest of us will have to be satisfied with Dayton.

About the only ripple on Monday was a fire near Theo Lang's store on Sixth avenue. Mr. Lang and family are on their farm in the Catskills.

C. S. Christianson, owing to ill health, has disposed of his business at 67 East Tenth street to Robert Koehne, who for nine years has had charge of the cut flower depot at Bloomingdale's, and George Wernz, who has been right-hand man for Mr. Christianson for many years. The new firm will be Wernz & Koehne and with an established trade the young men should do well. Mr. Koehne is a prominent and active member of the New York Florists' Club.

Lyman B. Craw, of the Lord & Burnham Co., and family leave on Saturday for Anisguam, a resort near Gloucester, Mass., for their summer outing.

J. B. Nugent's bookkeepers are holidaying and honeymooning at Lake Hopatkong. Everybody is pleased to know the champion caterer is to personally attend to the inwards of the conventionists on the trip to Dayton.

McManus just missed taking the train that was wrecked near Denver. He was too weary and too full of the glories of the Rockies for utterance on Monday evening. He had only four hours at Chicago, on one of the smoky days. Orchids love the sunlight. There's no place like little old New York.

A New Feature! Help It Along!

The Dayton Souvenir

Will Contain a

Pictorial Directory

of leading florists, seedsmen and nurserymen of the United States and Canada. The objects being:

1. To establish your personality among the trade.
2. To aid in identification at the convention.
3. To furnish a pleasing memento of the convention, a reminder of pleasant associations.
4. A reference book, invaluable in choosing future business associates.
5. In interchange of business by mail, a likeness is next to a personal acquaintance.

Whether you attend the convention or not, it is to your interest, from a business standpoint, to be represented as a leading, up-to-date florist. One telegraphic order may more than pay the cost of your advertisement in this book, to be distributed over the United States and Canada.

Besides the usual number of fine illustrations of Dayton and vicinity, one great feature of this souvenir will be a section devoted to civic improvement and welfare work, in which our city leads, and which will be finely illustrated, thus becoming a reference book of incalculable benefit.

Upon the receipt of $5.00 and your photograph, we will insert your business card, illustrated with your picture, and mail to you a copy of the Souvenir and your half-tone cut, prepaid. Address

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

THE H. E. Fiske Seed Co., Boston, is a new concern organized by the former manager for W. W. Rawson & Co.

THE harvesting of onion has begun in California and there is a prospect that deliveries will be larger than early reports had led the trade to expect.

NOBODY is saying much about beans at present. It is best so; the truth will be known soon enough and it will be just as unsatisfactory then as a guess would be now.

LATEST reports from the pea fields show an improved condition, and some of the growers predict that a good crop may be looked for. There are many things that may yet happen to upset these calculations, however, and a large pea crop is not any more of a sure thing than a big crop of onion seed.

THE onion set harvest is begun at Chicago. The fields of the southern section of the district are the ones first ready for the harvest and it is there that operations are under way. The northern section, except in a few cases, will not be touched for another week. The harvest so far bears out the recent forecasts made by the REVIEW that the crop will be fine as to quality, but much below average as to quantity.

REPORTS show that in the seed line summer trade as a rule has not been so good this season as ordinarily. The dry weather is responsible for this. In the Chicago district the exceedingly dry weather is working much hardship to some of the market gardeners. Crops that should be at hand to send to market are so far behind that little can be expected of them. The drought has prevented the usual plantings of beans, which will further curtail their source of revenue. Onions will be small, and on the whole the outlook from the ordinary gardeners' standpoint is far from ideal. There are exceptions to this rule, but they are what are considered the fortunate ones and are the people who could best stand a season of adversity.

SEED CROPS.

Peas and Beans.

W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, Mich., writes: "Pea crops in this section are good and stand even. I expect, with a good harvest, to get a normal yield. Early varieties are being harvested under favorable conditions. Beans are a good stand and color, but short in growth, owing to the cold spring. The present warm, dry weather is hurrying the blossoming and will curtail the yield. I do not look for more than a fair crop and not much, if any, surplus. Wax varieties are lacking badly in vine and if any rust appears the crop will develop short of present estimates."

Kentucky Grass Seed.

Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, report as follows: "Orchard grass seed has turned out considerably better than we have had for several years. Quality is brighter and crop is larger. The price of this item is lower than has ruled for four or five years.

"Kentucky blue grass was seriously injured by dry weather, and the rain came too late to prevent a serious shortage in the crop. There has not been much movement of this item as yet, due to the fact that growers are holding their seed at stiff prices, and cleaners are not inclined to pay the prices or to quote at anything like reasonable figures.

"Redtop will turn out a better crop than was anticipated a short time ago, though nothing like a large crop, and we are looking for higher prices for this seed the entire season. Very little old seed has been carried by dealers, and there will be a demand for all there has been carried before the new crop will be ready to ship, which will be some time in September.

"Winter turf oats are shorter this year than usual, due to less acreage, bad growing season, and the fact that farmers are using many of them as sheaf oats instead of threshing.

"Red clover is at present looking well in this section, and we are not anticipating any serious shortage.

"The crop of seed wheat in this locality is remarkably fine this year, and we have had most excellent yields from our crops, which will yield the very finest stocks for seeding."

Onion Sets.

Wood, Stubbs & Co. say of sets in the Louisville district: "Onion sets have turned out fairly well, though not quite so large a crop as in the last three or four years. The acreage sown in this locality this year was about the same as usual, but owing to the unfavorable weather many of the sets did not come up altogether satisfactory, and it looked at one time as if the crop would be very much shortened. The season has been fairly favorable for the growth of sets however (not too wet) and fields that it was thought at one time would make altogether pickle onions, have turned out fairly well, so we have a fair average crop of sets of good quality.

"Last season, owing to the wet weather and continual rain during harvest, many Louisville sets were very bad quality, especially the whites; in fact, it was almost impossible to get good quality white sets. We are not anticipating any such trouble this year, and there will not be anything like the shrinkage in sets this year that there was last. Quantities of sets already have been dug, though no movement in the crop has taken place.

"From crop reports in other sections it seems sets will be higher than they were last year, and we are anticipating considerably higher prices in the winter and early spring months than ruled last season.

"Louisville dealers prefer selling sets on prompt shipment to taking future orders. From the fact that there is such an enormous quantity grown here by so many miscellaneous growers, it would take enormous storage room to take care of the sets, and as they are offered daily on this market, stocks can be replaced in a short time."

Huntington & Page, Indianapolis, write July 21: "The onion set crop in this district is about two weeks later than usual, but in an extremely nice condition at the present time. We have had some showers which have been of great benefit to the same, but the acreage is considerably less than last season. The yield we anticipate to be fully up to the average if not a little better."

Connecticut Specialties.

The Everett B. Clark Co., Milford, Conn., reports: "With reference to growing crops we wish to say the month of July to date has been especially unfavorable to the growing and maturing of seed crops because of the continual rains we have had, also many severe thunder-storms, which have been extremely damaging to all crops. Our onion, just coming into bloom, has suffered by the recent hard showers, as the pollen has been washed out and this has caused blight which has already started on several of our fields, and we fear that this will affect our crop largely. Our carrot crop also has been affected the same way by the same thing. Beet seed, at this writing, looks well. Corn is making a rapid growth, and making up for its late start. The acreage planted, however, was very small, and as the rains have washed out the low lands, our crop will be quite light."

Nebraska Specialties.

The Western Seed & Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb., writes: "We can only report in a general way on the sweet and field corn and vine seed crops at the present time. We have received reports of fair to very good stands of nearly all varieties of sweet and field corn, with an occasional report of thin and uneven stands of a few varieties, but the crops are nearly all in good growing condition and clean, having been cultivated four to five times and in most instances laid by.

"The reports of the cucumber crops are not quite so good, many of them showing thin, uneven stands, on account of the dry weather in June at the time of planting, and the damage caused by the striped beetle. We have received other reports of fair to good stands, and look for enough seed to fill orders booked, if the crops do not meet with disaster the balance of the season.

"The muskmelon and watermelon crops mostly are reported as showing good stands, and in fine condition, with the exception of a few small lots, which were hurt by the cutworms and striped beetle, necessitating replanting and causing the crops to be backward and small.

"The pumpkin and squash crops also are fair to good, but in some cases are like the melon crops above referred to as having been damaged by the cutworms, etc.

"We recently have heard that the melon aphis has been found in a number of spots, on some of the cucumber and melon crops in the vicinity of Waterloo, but we do not know to how serious an extent the damage may amount, if any, at the present time. Should the same conditions that we have had for the last ten days to two weeks continue for any great length of time we may expect some damage to the cucumber and melon crops from the aphis. We have been having numerous showers, followed by hot, muggy, humid weather, which we understand are favorable conditions for the rapid increase of the aphis. However, the last two days have been clear and cooler, and we may not have any serious loss of crops from the aphis."

SEED IMPORTS.

The seeds imported through the port of New York for the week ending July 20, were as follows as to quantities and invoice values:

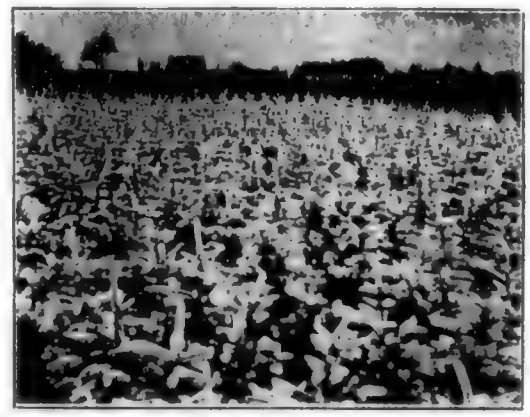
SEED CROPS IN FRANCE.

The French seed growers were recently all praying for summer weather, but now they have got it, do not seem from recent reports to be entirely satisfied. The drought succeeding suddenly a cold wet period appears to have baked the soil like pie-crust, and growth is in consequence not so robust as the growers would like to see. From what we can gather this is one of these seasons when the first-rate cultivator, whose land is well worked and fertilized, is likely to reap full advantage from his industry. In a normal year the difference is not so marked, the indifferent cultivators merely coming in a little behind, but this season some of them will probably fail to get any crop at all.—Horticultural Advertiser.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.



With the present fine summer weather, every kind of seed crop all over Europe is looking much better than would have been expected from appearances a fortnight ago, but still most articles will be short of the average. Beets and mangels, both in England and on the continent, although they have made exceptional progress, cannot produce more than a moderate crop, and in some cases the returns will have to be classed as poor. Onions all over Europe are reported as poor, in some cases bad. In reports to hand from the Italian districts and also from Leipzig, Germany, some very high prices are being spoken of, although growers are accompanying their offers with the remark that for some varieties it is hoped to reduce prices later on, should the crop turn out better than it at present gives promise of.

It is the general opinion in the trade that before long much higher prices will have to be given for all classes of seeds grown on contract, both in England and on the continent. For several years the seed farmers have complained bitterly that no profit is ever made now on hardly any class of seeds, contending that with the light yields growing prices have not advanced accordingly. It remains to be seen whether this probable advance will come out of the pockets of the actual consumer or the dealer. I imagine it will come out of the pockets of the contracting wholesale houses only.

In recent reports from Naples it is stated that the seed crops are making good progress, although annual and biennial flower seeds will be very late. Now that growth has got well under way, the flower seed fields of all classes are looking far better than ever could have been expected when viewing the fields after the eruption, and the quantities of most annual varieties of flower seeds will not be much below the average, although quality may be impaired by the necessity for replanting. The Paper White narcissi seem to be the hardest hit, and an advance of some forty to fifty per cent has taken place in top grade bulbs.

LILY OF THE VALLEY.

The generally poor quality of lily of the valley in England this season, and in fact for some seasons past, is causing a deal of comment among growers and the generally accepted opinion is that the quality is not improving, as it should do, but rather it is getting worse each year. One of the largest growers in England complained bitterly to me the other day that formerly he had no difficulty in getting all his spikes to bloom with from fourteen to eighteen large bells on each, whereas now if he gets that number of bells they are usually very small, and if he wants large bells he has to be content with only about ten on each spike. Of course this year it is fully recognized among growers that the poor crop of salable pips in Germany is caused largely by weather conditions, but it is also now becoming pretty well apparent that the continued yearly cause of this deteriorating quality is the fact of the large and rapidly increasing demand from America. Many German dealers appear to make it a general practice to buy up and otherwise control, by contract or otherwise, the entire product of the best growers and the product of the best plots of valley ground, thus leaving only the second-rate pips to come to England.

The fact of the English growers offering a higher price does not in many cases appear to secure an improved quality, although the price now given by many is quite as high as it is possible to give to leave the slightest profit to the grower. One of the largest growers in England, to place himself on an equal advantage with American buyers, and in the hopes of getting the highest quality, has sent a buyer regularly to the valley growing districts to buy direct from the smaller growers.

Some others in England have taken up the cultivation of pips at home with great success in quality at any rate, and I lately came across a grand stock of the true Berlin variety, some fourteen acres in extent, in the west of England and another fine lot of five acres on the east coast, both looking the picture of health and vigor. In the course of conversation with the growers I learned that these home-grown pips were in every way equal in quality to German grown, and in fact better than they had been in the habit of receiving from Germany for some time past, the only drawback being the question of cost of production. As time goes on and the cultivation is better understood, the expense will probably be brought down to quite as low as they can be imported from abroad. J. B.

SWEET PEAS MIXING.

Kindly advise me if sweet peas will mix when grown within a few feet of each other. I have some choice peas this summer and will want to save some seed, but if there is danger of them mixing I will, of course, not want to go to this bother and then be disappointed next spring. I am under the impression they will not mix, but I want to be sure. E. G. B.

Sweet peas as grown by the large operators in California are grown quite close to each other. They do not mix readily and if properly saved and care taken to keep the pods of one sort away from the pods of another, there is little danger of a mixture at harvest time.

OBITUARY.

Louis Goeppinger.

The English trade papers for the week of July 11 bring confirmation of our report that the Louis Goeppinger killed in the wreck of the steamer special at Salisbury, England, might be the well-known traveler who had just completed a tour of the United States. He had sailed from New York June 23 on the steamer of that name, landed at Plymouth and was on his way to London when the railway accident occurred which cost more than a score of lives.

Mr. Goeppinger was a German, for many years associated with Louis Van Houtte Pere, Ghent, Belgium, for whom he made nearly a score of trips to this country. Then he spent a couple of years in an American seed house and nursery to gain a closer acquaintance with the demands of the trade here, and then a short time ago stepped into the opening offered by the resignation of Mr. Sampson, foreign traveler for Peignaux & Lorin, Angers, France, successors to the well-known firm of Andre Leroy & Co.

Mr. Goeppinger had called upon practically every nurseryman, plantsman and seedsman of consequence in this country, and was held in high regard by all with whom he had dealings.

MOLES.

An English exchange says that a fairly light soil is one in which moles can work freely. This being so, the wary little animals easily work around the traps set, or make fresh runs. They are quick to detect and avoid danger, and consequently few are caught in traps where the latter are continually in use. If one has sufficient patience it will pay to carefully watch the ground, and detect new runs. The latter is fairly easy work if the soil is studied a little. Having found a new run, watch it closely at the end most recently disturbed, and it is probable that, ere long, a slight movement of the soil will be noticed; it will, however, be a very slight one, but directly it is seen stamp with all the promptitude and force you possess on the spot where the movement was observed. This will consolidate the soil, and prevent the mole escaping, but with a spade ready at hand, the soil must be dug out, and probably with the first spadeful the little burrower will be thrown out, when, of course, it can be readily dispatched. A good time to watch for moles working is after a shower, or between 1 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Patience, a quick eye, and promptitude are essentials to success in catching moles by this method, but the method is a good one, nevertheless, especially where traps have failed.

Christmas Flowering
SWEET PEA SEED

Christmas Pink and Florence Denzer (pure white), will be ready August 1. These two well-known varieties are raised by over 2,000 florists all over the world. Here is one of many letters I received:

DEAR SIR: My Sweet Peas, which I raised from your seed, received the HIGHEST AWARD in Boston, by the Carnation Exhibit, being over 18 inches long.
JOHN T. GALE, Tewksbury, Mass.

Price: ¼ lb., 75c; 1 lb., $2.00, mailed free.

NEW Christmas flowering Hybrids, 20 to 30 colors, mostly blue, salmon, purple, lavender, in mixture.

Mrs. Edie Wild, carmine, 1 trade pkt., $1.00; 5 trade pkts, $4.00. No order for more than 5 pkts. taken from each customer just now.

These new Hybrids are just as free bloomers as Christmas Pink and Florence Denzer, some much larger, and received first-class Certificate of Merit by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, March 24.

All seed originated with me is sold in my original sealed pkts. with cultural directions, to growers, for raising cut flowers, but none for seedsmen for propagating.

UTICA, N. Y.

John H. Ownes, of Whitesboro street, is building a large house to be planted with Enchantress. Aside from his florist's business he grows large quantities of lettuce and other vegetables.

George Benedict has just completed a large house and has it planted to chrysanthemums and roses.

J. C. Bigelow & Son have moved their office about twenty feet, raised it and built a fine stone cellar under it, so that it is seven feet deep and about fifteen feet square. They are also adding a large show house, something that they did not have before. They contemplate putting in an eighty horse-power horizontal steam boiler this fall, so that next season they can add two large houses to their plant.

Frank McGowan is busy making a front entrance to his show house, something that will be the means of drawing trade.

Charles Seitzer, the popular Oswego street florist, has been suffering from an injured hand, but it is getting better.

The florists in this vicinity have had a large amount of funeral work all summer; in fact, they do not know what dull times are. Many of them were short-sighted enough to let their plants die out in the early part of the summer, so that they have been buying from others. They report that it is hard work to get flowers to make up work with. We have had great weather in this section, just rain enough to keep carnations and all outdoor stock growing. ANON.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Dayton Florists' Club held a well attended meeting July 9, to put the finishing touches on our convention preparations. It was voted to send the chairman, Mr. Heiss, to New York and Philadelphia to interview the larger concerns and urge them to exhibit and advertise for this convention.

Messrs. Stewart, Kasting and Asmus, of the executive committee, being in Dayton Saturday and Sunday, July 7 and 8, looked over the ground to see that everything is completed, and finished the official program for the convention.

J. B. HEISS.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held July 11, with President Harrison in the chair. The attendance was large. There was one nomination to active membership.

The prize for the best exhibit of sweet peas, three varieties, twenty-five of each, was awarded to John F. Johnston. In the competition for points, S. J. Trepess scored 92⅔, with peaches, melons and Nephrolepis Whitmani; A. Mackenzie 90⅔, with adiantum, caladium and peaches; Felix Mense 81⅔, with hollyhocks, roses and stocks. H. F. Meyer made an exhibit of outdoor-grown vegetables and fruits, including Lima beans, tomatoes, sweet corn, cucumbers, peppers and blackberries. He received special mention from the judges for the exhibit.

A silver match safe will be given at the next meeting for the best exhibit of six varieties of vegetables.

W. Willesen tendered his resignation as a member of the executive committee, and F. Boulon, of Sea Cliff, was appointed to fill the vacancy. J. F. J.

JACKSON, MISS.

The Jackson Floral Co., incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000, has purchased a finely located tract of four acres in Belhaven Heights. One acre is now covered by a lake, and this will be broadened until it is two acres in extent, and will be stocked with the finest species of game fish and filled with aquatic plants. Several large greenhouses will also be built, and within a few months a complete transformation will take place, it being the intention of the promoters to make it one of the beauty spots of the city, a place where visitors can be taken on their sight-seeing tours of Jackson.

The company has been in existence about eighteen months, with a store at 119 South State street, and enjoyed a fine trade in cut flowers during the last season. The officers are W. B. Taylor, president; W. J. Brown, manager, and Messrs. W. B. Taylor, S. J. Taylor and W. J. Brown, directors.

NEW ULM, MINN.—Christ Boock is building an addition 20x100 feet. This will about double his present equipment. He is also installing a new boiler, which will heat the greenhouses and his residence.

BRACONDALE, ONT.—George Hollis, who is an expert with chrysanthemums, says that most growers for retail make a mistake in growing too many varieties. It would pay them better to use only a few sorts and gain a knowledge of the particular requirements of each variety.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Bayersdorfer Stirs the French.

The REVIEW is in receipt of the following from one of its subscribers at Toulon, France, dated July 5:

"Being a constant reader of your valued paper and not being a dealer in immortelles, I wish to state that Messrs. H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, who were always large buyers of immortelles and wreaths, have this year given orders for enormous quantities of immortelles and wreaths, such orders as the people here say have never been given by all dealers together. I wish them luck for the courage this Mr. Bayersdorfer has."

Mr. Bayersdorfer writes the REVIEW from Paris, July 8: "Very warm here. I am coming home July 14 per steamer New York with a shipload of novelties in florists' supplies."

THE GOUTWEED.

I send you under separate cover a specimen of a hardy perennial growing in dense masses of green and white foliage about twelve to eighteen inches high, and throwing up seed stems similar in appearance to caraway. The plant is useful for borders, foliage beds, etc. Please tell me what the name of it is.

W. J. O.

The plant is a variegated form of Ægopodium podagraria, the goutweed. The green form is described as a common and troublesome weed in Europe. All the forms are noted for spreading. It is reported from Rhode Island, Delaware and eastern Pennsylvania.

J. HIGGINS.

STEELTON, PA.—M. A. Frantz is preparing to build a greenhouse and go into the florist business.

PACIFIC COAST.

Riverside, Cal.—D. C. Twogood has gone out of the nursery business.

FRUITVALE, CAL.

We cannot get along without the Review, although we were too poor to subscribe after the great earthquake, but here goes a dollar. Please note that the Lacy Co. has leased its residence, stables and orchards to the Rupert Whiteheads for the season, but will run their nurseries and part of their greenhouses for the present. The outlook in San Francisco is most discouraging from the florists' standpoint. We cannot expect much business in two or three years at least. Yours truly, Lacy Co.

BUDDING NURSERY STOCK.

The Best Season.

Now that the season for budding roses and other sorts of nursery stock is well under way, a few suggestions on this line might be in order. During the months of July and August most of the work is done. Under favorable conditions it is possible to have salable stock six to eight months after budding. I refer to roses in this instance. Many of the strong-growing climbers and other heavy sorts, if the stock is kept growing either by artificial watering or extra cultivation, will grow enough to make salable plants by the following winter and spring. The stock in all instances should be kept growing as long as possible. The non-irrigated is always the best for transplanting, but in many places it is not practicable to grow it in this way. Better roots are made when irrigation is not the rule, and better hardened wood can always be depended on. This is especially true of roses, as has been demonstrated for many seasons in this state.

Selection of Scions.

In the selection of scions for budding, much time and stock have been wasted by selecting buds that were not sufficiently matured to take hold. It is a good plan to select only those stems that are of the latest growth, and from these discard about one-third from the tip. In selecting roses, if possible, always get such scions as have had flowers on the ends of the stems, and when the blossoms dry off it is safe to conclude that the eyes are firm enough to use. This rule cannot be followed with strong climbing roses. With them I always select long shoots and discard the usual tip. Wood is always ripe enough to use when the thorns can be broken off evenly without lifting the bark from the stem. This is an old rule and a good one. In a general way, it is much easier to bud successfully on young than on old stock. A difference of a season makes a big difference in the way such stock must be handled, and also in the chances for success in the work.

On a heavy stock, even when it is in the best growing condition, it is not so easy to have it unite with a young eye that would be suitable for a smaller and younger stock. In this case eyes should be selected from older scions and greater care taken in the tying. A union is never made so quickly as between the younger stock and the inserted bud, and the tendency to stay dormant is much lengthened. This I think is the rule with almost everything in the plant line.

Treatment of the Buds.

A few growers, especially among the older generation, still persist in removing the wood from the bud. It certainly appears more logical to unite bark with wood than to expect the wood in the bud to unite with the wood of the stock. There are two objections to this method. The first is the extra time taken, and the other is that there is always danger of taking the root out of the eye when taking out the wood, in which case it is of course worthless. If the eye is cut as thin as possible and enough stiffness is still left to insert it, there is no trouble in having a perfect union between the bud and the stock. I have noticed, however, that the eyes from which the wood has been abstracted have a greater tendency to grow out almost immediately than those from which the wood was left in, every other condition being the same in both cases.

This fact can be taken advantage of in particular cases, but for the ordinary run of budding it is now not generally resorted to. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Cooler weather prevails, and flowers are coming into town better, both in color and strength of stem. Sweet peas, which have been neglected to a great extent by many of the growers, are now scarce, and what few good peas are seen are eagerly bought. The outlook for asters, some few of which have made their appearance, is not very favorable. Many of the growers have almost entirely neglected their patches, and as a consequence there will be a good many poor flowers sent into town. A few dealers have gone to the usual amount of trouble, and from present indications it appears that there will be a very fair demand for good stock. The same conditions are manifest with the chrysanthemum crop, and as I stated before, it will not total over one-half the usual quantity.

Business has been very fair, considering the conditions here. There has been a good quantity of funeral work well distributed, with a fair amount of wedding and other orders.

In Oakland the retailers report everything fully up to the mark for this season of the year, with prospects for a good fall trade. The price of greenhouse crops is about the same as that received for the last month. The quality

Plant Now LILIUM HARRISII for Early Forcing

We offer some extra choice Lilium Harrisii which has been grown for us from the original, pure stock. This is the kind of stock that you want for the very earliest forcing, as it is the true, original Harrisii. The small sizes—5-7s and 6-7s—are particularly desirable for this purpose, as they will flower more quickly than the larger bulbs. If you want to get a little of the original, pure Harrisii, try a case or two of this. As our stock of this is limited we can offer only a few cases to a single buyer. If you have been dissatisfied with the Harrisii that you have forced heretofore, try a case or two of this and see if it is not more than worth the difference in price over the stock that you have been buying. In ordering ask for the pure selected strain of original Harrisii, which we offer as follows:

5 to 7-inch bulbs, 400 to the case, $17.00 per case.
6 to 7-inch bulbs, 350 to the case, 17.50 per case.
7 to 9-inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 18.00 per case.
9 to 11-inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 18.00 per case.

EASTER COMES EARLY THIS YEAR—MARCH 31

and a great many growers will want to use Harrisii instead of Longiflorum so as to be sure and have the plants in flower in time, as the season is going to be short for Japan Longiflorum. The crop of Harrisii this year is the shortest it has been in years, and in view of the extra demand, we advise those who have not already covered their requirements to lose no time doing so.

For very earliest forcing—Christmas and later—we recommend the pure Harrisii offered above, but for later forcing for Easter, our customers will find the regular stock offered below first-class stock—much better than the average stock usually offered. We can quote the regular stock as follows:

6 to 7-inch bulbs, 350 to the case, $14.00 per case.
7 to 9-inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 15.00 per case.
9 to 11-inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 15.00 per case.

FREESIA REFRACTA ALBA, the true white variety. Now ready. Finest Bermuda-grown stock. $1.00 per 100; $7.50 per 1000

Various Notes.

T. Deguchi has opened a store at 1503 O'Farrel street.

A. Galloway, of Fruitvale, is cutting an extra fine crop of Enchantress at present.

T. K. Love, of the Piedmont Floral Co., Oakland, is absent from town on a two weeks' vacation.

T. Okia has leased the Criss property on Sixty-third street, Oakland.

The California Evergreen Co. has opened temporary quarters at 348 Chestnut street.

The basket venders have moved their base of operations to Fillmore street. They have entirely deserted Market and all the other down-town locations.

A visit to the ferneries of H. Plath shows a splendid array of palms, ferns, asparagus, dracaenas, etc. A large supply of small sizes of the most popular varieties of ferns is carried at this place.

Cleis & Jacobsen have one of the most attractive stores on Fillmore street; one of their large show windows is filled with ferns and palms, the other being devoted to a good show of flowers.

The regular meeting of the Society Hortensia was held on Saturday evening of last week. G.

MISCHIEF AT MANN'S.

Alexander Mann, the wholesaler at 2041 Pine street, San Francisco, told Judge Cabaniss that on the afternoon of June 23, while Austin McNamara was in his store he imagined for an instant that the cataclysm predicted for June 29 had slipped a cog and prematurely begun operation. Disillusion came when he saw Mr. McNamara kicking holes in the wall plaster and hurling pots containing plants through the doorway to the street.

"He had entered the store in a bullying kind of way," Mr. Mann pursued, "and told me that if I didn't remove a box from the adjoining vacant lot he would smash my nose. I told him I wasn't a fighter, and as I turned to attend to my work he kicked plaster from the wall and threw three of my best plants into the street."

McNamara, who was accused of malicious mischief, told the court that he had been awarded possession of the vacant lot by its owner, Mrs. Maloney, and that when he courteously requested Mr. Mann to remove from it an unsightly box he was treated with contumely.

The hearing was continued for thirty days to afford the belligerents time to talk it over.

TOPEKA, KAN.

Suit has been commenced against T. J. Wintrode, marshal of the court of Topeka, for $1,500 by J. E. Rodman, who alleges that he was damaged to this amount by the action of the marshal in levying an execution against his stock of goods to satisfy a judgment of $144 rendered in favor of D. F. Blake, of Kansas City.

The stock was attached to satisfy this judgment by the marshal after the plaintiffs in the suit had given an indemnifying bond.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Mr. and Mrs. John G. Eisele sailed July 12 for a three months' trip through Germany, France and Switzerland.

STERLING, ILL.—The Sterling Floral Co. is tearing down five of its first houses and will replace with one large house for carnations. The cost of the change will be $3,000.

HAMPTON, IA.—The Curtis Floral Co. has made an agreement to construct and maintain several flower beds in the city park. Citizens subscribed $213 for financing this improvement.

GUELPH, ONTARIO.—Government contracts have been let for the improvement and enlarging of the greenhouses at the Ontario Agricultural College, located here. The new buildings will cost $5,000.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

ARTHUR BRYANT & SON, Princeton, Ill., are building a frost-proof packing-house 42x120.

THE comparatively new strawberry, Mead, is meeting with a very favorable reception.

THE New England nurserymen have had abundant rains and stock has made rapid growth.

THE invoice value of the trees and plants imported through the port of New York last week was $14,157.

THERE is promise of an especially interesting session of the Southern Nurserymen's Association at Lookout Mountain, Chattanooga, Tenn., August 15 and 16.

NURSERYMEN in Minnesota report collections turning out nicely. This spring has been particularly favorable for the growing of nursery stock, as complaints are few.

THOSE Huntsville wholesale nurserymen are good fellows and good friends; you can buy a little jag of stuff from each one and they will make up a car between them.

THE twentieth annual convention of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents is to be held at Detroit, August 21 to 23, the same week the S. A. F. is in session at Dayton.

A GREAT many nurserymen make it a practice never to sell a peony until the plant has flowered on their own grounds. Such growers are seldom heard to complain of mixtures, and one even goes so far as to advertise that he will give three plants for every one he sells that proves not true to name.

PACIFIC COAST NURSERYMEN.

In addition to the papers mentioned in last week's REVIEW as read at the recent Tacoma meeting of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen, S. A. Miller, of Milton, Ore., spoke on "Requisites for the Growth and Care of Nursery Stock, True to Name." He was followed by A. W. McDonald, of Toppenish, Wash., who read a paper on "Notes From the Last Year's Experience in the Nursery." M. J. Henry, of Vancouver, B. C., gave the members a few pointers on "How to Sell Direct." A. Holaday, of Scappoose, Ore., read a carefully prepared paper on "The Selection and Care of Scions."

Among members present were: W. D. Ingalls, North Yakima; F. K. Spalding, Sunnyside; H. A. Lewis, Russellville, Ore.; C. N. Young, Tacoma; S. A. Miller, Milton, Ore.; Lewis Remlinger, Vancouver, Wash.; R. H. Weber, The Dalles, Ore.; F. W. Power, Chico, Cal.; F. H. Stanton and C. T. Rawson, Hood River, Ore.; G. W. R. Peaslee, Clarkston, Wash.; C. W. Howard, Riverside, Cal.; M. McDonald, Salem, Ore.; C. Malmo, Sandahl & Son, and J. G. Hopkins, Seattle; A. Lingham, Puyallup; A. Eckert, Detroit, Wash.; Richard Layritz, Victoria, B. C.; M. J. Henry, Vancouver, B. C.; A. G. Tillinghast, La Conner, Wash.; C. A. Tonneson and Professor Fred A. Huntley, Tacoma.

DELPHINIUMS.

My hybrid delphiniums and those of many places near me are badly affected with some disease attacking both flowers and foliage. The blooms are bullheaded, bunching together and often turning black. Sometimes this affects only one part of the flower spike, the remaining part being almost normal. The foliage becomes thickened, curled and inclined to turn brown or black. What causes it and what cures it?

W. C. E.

The trouble with delphiniums is quite general, more especially with the named hybrid sorts which have been propagated by root division. We have had seedlings affected, but to a much less extent. The cause of the disease we are unable to more than guess at. The method of propagation may be one cause; we have found that a change of soil every third year keeps the hybrids free from it. In 1903 our plants were badly affected, but on being replanted the fall of the same year in a new location, where delphiniums had not been grown before, the trouble vanished and has not appeared since.

We tried persistent spraying with Bordeaux mixture one year, but it did not seem to do any good; I think it was not started early enough. I would advise replanting the clumps in fresh soil, and think the disease will not reappear. If this has been tried and has failed, spraying with Bordeaux mixture once a week after the middle of April will be beneficial. The disease is a common one; we do not know whether any of the experiment stations have investigated it or not. We have all seen it on clumps which have not been transplanted for several years; seedlings seem almost immune from it.

The Market.

The demand for flowers during the last week has been good for this season of the year, and was far in excess of the supply. Sweet peas and Maid roses were the most plentiful, but it was only at times that they did not sell out entirely. White blooms of all kinds found a ready market, and sold out at good prices for this time of year. A few asters are seen now and then, and they bring about $1 per hundred. It will not be long now till asters will be here in quantity, and we are looking forward to that time with pleasure, as they are greatly needed.

Rain seems to be the order of the day; during the last week it has been coming down in torrents. There has hardly been a day when it has not rained hard. It is to be hoped that we are not getting the entire summer's supply in one week, thus leaving us with a dry August and September. All outdoor stock is looking so fine now that it would be too bad to have it burned up as it is some summers.

The Outing.

The florists' outing was favored with fine weather, and over two hundred of the craft, with their wives and children, were at Norwood Inn Park bent on enjoying themselves to the utmost. All of the sports went off in fine shape, and when the day was over every one voted the trip to have been one round of pleasure.

The feature of the day was the ball game for the men in the afternoon. Two good teams had been formed, and they set to with the intention of winning. The sun was very hot, so it was decided to play but seven innings. The score was fourteen to three in favor of Harry Baer's team. The features of the game were the home run of Chas. Pfeiffer and the base running of J. W. Rodgers. The latter was nearly overcome by the heat, and was obliged to retire from the game before it was concluded. The bowling contests for both ladies and men were greatly enjoyed, and the foot races furnished sport for all. At supper time Ben George and D. Rusconi sprung a surprise on the picnickers by passing around fine boiled lobsters to the entire party. In the evening there were music and dancing, and it was a late hour before the last person had departed.

Various Notes.

Sunderbruch & Meier intend to construct three 100-foot houses this fall, in which they will grow roses for summer blooming.

Visitors were E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., and H. M. Altick, Dayton, O.

CANADIAN ASSOCIATION.

The ninth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association will be held in Guelph, Ontario, August 29 and 30. The convention this year occurs during the first week of the Toronto industrial exhibition. The meetings will be held in Gymnasium hall, at the Ontario Agricultural College.

The opening session, on the afternoon of the first day, will be given up to routine business. In the evening addresses will be by Professor R. Harcourt, of the agricultural college, on "Fertilizers, Their Nature and Use," and by J. Morgan, of Hamilton, on "Commercial Carnations." On the morning of the second day, J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, will discuss roses and their special requirements. A paper entitled "Greenhouse Insect Pests" will be read and illustrated with specimens by Professor Tennyson D. Jarvis, of the college faculty. A discussion of the best methods of greenhouse heating will follow.

The last two sessions will be taken up with a tour of the college grounds and a reception by the local members. Rev. P. C. L. Harris, president of the local society, will deliver an address; George Vair, of Toronto, will give a paper on "Conifers"; and W. C. Hall, of Outremont, Quebec, will have the subject "Business Pointers for the Retail Trade."

Exhibits will be staged, and a local committee will judge them and award certificates of merit for the best. Judging will begin at 11 a. m. August 29, at which time the entry lists will be closed. The report of the judges will be given that afternoon.

NAMPA, IDAHO.—Louis Poland, of Des Moines, Ia., is planning to move to this city and establish a greenhouse business.

I THINK the REVIEW is improving all the time and could not well do without it; here is payment for two years in advance.— GEO. O. KLEIN, Camden Station, Ky.

TRADE has been very good with me, and I attribute a considerable part of it to reading and following the instructions given me in the REVIEW.—S. M. WYATT, Watseka, Ill.

PLEASE send me extra copies of the REVIEW for the next two weeks, at the Park Hotel, Frankfort, Mich. I can't do without the paper while on my vacation. —J. F. SKED, Westerville, O.

OMAHA.

Cut flowers have been plentiful and are becoming more so every day, as outdoor stock is in, and as the new roses are beginning to make their appearance, especially Beauties, which have been scarce and poor. Trade has been fairly good for the summer months, and the florists seem always busy with something; as a whole, we have nothing to complain about.

The Nebraska State Horticultural Society held its annual summer meeting here July 11 and 12 in the pavilion at Hanscom park. The meeting was one of the most successful the society ever held. There was a large attendance, with representatives from all parts of the state, with many good papers read and discussed with interest, also a fine display of plants, cut flowers and fruits.

The second day the society was entertained by the Omaha Florists' Club, which had provided automobiles to take the visitors for a ride about the city parks and boulevards, which proved to be a very swift and enjoyable feature of the meeting, which ended at Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Floth's new residence and greenhouses, where lunch and refreshments were served. L. H.

DAYTON, O.—F. W. Ritter has been ill for a month, and is only now able to attend to business.

JUNCTION CITY, KAN.—W. P. Ranson is building an addition to his plant this summer. The new house is to be 21x40 feet. Lettuce and radishes will be grown in it.

OTTAWA, ONT.—W. A. Dier has built two small greenhouses for the purpose of gaining experience, after which he purposes to build a large commercial range.

GALVESTON, TEX.—Charles Eickholt, who has continued the flower business of Mrs. Eickholt since that estimable lady's death, filed a petition in bankruptcy July 21.

TOPEKA, KAN.—J. E. Rodman is planning to build a large addition to his present greenhouse plant. The new building will be an ell, one wing being 24x50, the other 22x90.

TWIN CITIES.

Trade is quiet and there is very little doing outside of funeral work. Stock is scarce, and good roses and carnations are hard to get. Prices are being kept up nicely by the large dealers, but the small ones will sell for what they can get.

The principal event among the trade lately was the Twin City florists' picnic, held Thursday, July 19. A general good time was enjoyed by about 200 florists and their families.

The steamer Hiawatha and barge were chartered for the occasion and a most enjoyable time was spent, in a run down the Mississippi to Red Rock. The committee which managed the excursion was composed of E. Nagel, R. A. Latham, C. Henderson, of Minneapolis, and O. J. Olson, Henry Puvogel, N. C. Hansen, Carl Haugen, of St. Paul. Following were the winners of the athletic events: Boys' race (under 12 years) E. Bergstrom; girls' race (under 12 years), Anastasia Dill; boys' race (under 16 years), Louis Frangen; young ladies' race, Helen Latham; married ladies' nail driving contest, Mrs. Busch; obstacle race for employees, George Radtz; 100-yard dash for employers, O. J. Olson; shooting contest, Carl Peterson; prize waltz on boat, Julius Neutzling and Miss Guerenz; mother's race, Mrs. Georzmeier. The bowling contest between the St. Paul and Minneapolis teams will take place later. The trade should not forget the local merchants who so generously contributed to the success of the picnic.

The trade wishes to sympathize with Carl Johnson, manager of the cut flower department of the Powers Mercantile Co., Minneapolis, in the death of his wife, which occurred at Bethesda hospital, St. Paul, Friday, July 20.

FELIX.

INDIANAPOLIS.

During the last week we have had splendid growing conditions, with showers and heat, and all field stock shows the effects of it, also the weeds. Asters are coming to the market now and will soon be plentiful.

Gus Wiegand is again behind the counter, after two weeks' vacation.

Clarence Thomas, of the Bertermann Bros. firm, has also resumed his usual place in the store.

Mr. and Mrs. Armin Baur, of Erie, Pa., were here last week visiting their brother, A. F. J. Baur.

Think of Aschmann, the Great Araucaria Importer of America, before buying elsewhere. Araucaria Excelsa, the pet of all decorative plants that nature produced, our specialty. Now perfectly recovered from their sea voyage, well established, growing in pots, ready to ship to all parts of America.

These everlasting green foliaged pot plants are growing more in favor by the tasteful plant buyers of this land from year to year. Please watch the growth of our importation during the last 11 years; first year 100, second 250, third 500, fourth 1000, fifth 2000. This year (1906) which is the 11th anniversary of our first importation, our spring importation amounted to 6,000. All these are grown for us under contract by an Araucaria specialist in Belgium. I must say for the benefit of my customers that they were never before so nice and large for the money as this year. I herewith quote you special prices on these.

Araucaria Excelsa, 12 to 14 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 50c. 14 to 16 inches high 5½ in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs old, 60c. 16 to 18 inches high, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 yrs. old, 75c. 18 to 20 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.00. 20 to 24 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.25. 36 to 50 inches high, specimens, 7-in pots, 6 yrs. old, $2.50 to $3.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, have 1000 of them. Never were they as nice as this year. Plants are as broad as long, from 12 to 20 inches in height, 3 to 4 perfect tiers, 20 to 30 inches across from tip of one tier to the other, 3, 4 and 5 yrs. old, 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00, up to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and size, their beautiful greenish blue tiers give them such a striking appearance, that anyone seeing them must fall in love with them on sight. Plants, 6 to 7-in pots, 3, 4, 5 perfect tiers, 15 to 25 inches in height, from 15 to 30 inches across, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each. Please bear in mind that the above mentioned varieties are the cream of Belgium's productions. We have thousands of them and can meet all demands.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, 1 large one in center, 3 smaller sizes, 22 to 25 ins. high around, $2.00 each; 6-in. pots, single plants, 35 to 40 ins. high, 5 to 6 good leaves, 4-year-old, $1.25 to $1.50 each; 30 to 35 ins. high, 4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 5 good leaves, $1.00 each; 25 to 30 ins. high, 5½-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 leaves, 75c; made-up plants with 3, 18 to 20 ins. high, 25c to 30c.

TWIN CITIES.

Trade is quiet and there is very little doing outside of funeral work. Stock is scarce, and good roses and carnations are hard to get. Prices are being kept up nicely by the large dealers, but the small ones will sell for what they can get.

The principal event among the trade lately was the Twin City florists' picnic, held Thursday, July 19. A general good time was enjoyed by about 200 florists and their families.

The steamer Hiawatha and barge were chartered for the occasion and a most enjoyable time was spent, in a run down the Mississippi to Red Rock. The committee which managed the excursion was composed of E. Nagel, R. A. Latham, C. Henderson, of Minneapolis, and O. J. Olson, Henry Puvogel, N. C. Hansen, and Jacobsen, of St. Paul. Following were the winners of the athletic events: Boys' race (under 12 years), E. Bergstrom; girls' race (under 12 years), Anastasia Dill; boys' race (over 12 years), Louis Frangen; young ladies' race, Helen Latham; married ladies' nail driving contest, Mrs. Busch; obstacle race for employees, George Radtz; 100-yard dash for employees, O. J. Olson; shooting contest, Carl Peterson; prize waltz on boat, Julius Neuzling and Miss Guerenz; mother's race, Mrs. Georzmeier. The bowling contest between the St. Paul and Minneapolis teams will take place later. The trade should not forget the retail merchants who so generously contributed to the success of the picnic.

The trade wishes to sympathize with Carl Johnson, manager of the cut flower department of the Powers Mercantile Co., Minneapolis, in the death of his wife, which occurred at Bethesda hospital, St. Paul, Friday, July 20.

FELIX.

INDIANAPOLIS.

During the last week we have had splendid growing conditions, with showers and heat, and all field stock shows the effects of it, also the weeds. Asters are coming to the market now and will soon be plentiful.

Gus Wiegand is again behind the counter, after two weeks' vacation.

Clarence Thomas, of the Bertermann Bros. firm, has also resumed his usual place at the store.

Mr. and Mrs. Armin Baur, of Erie, Pa., were here last week visiting their brother, A. F. J. Baur.

Our sales of Jeanne Nonin have been phenomenal but we have a few thousand left and YOU are losing money if you don't plant them. Nothing else you can grow from now to Xmas will make you as much money or give as much satisfaction as Jeanne Nonin. Strong, 4-in., 10c. Strong, flat-grown, 5c. Rooted cuttings, $3.00 per 100, postpaid; $25.00 per 1000.
When you see the other fellow swapping Nonin for dollars next fall, you'll wish you had some, too. Better get in now.
W. J. Olds, Union City, Pa.

Not too late yet to plant Jeanne Nonin. We planted 4-in. Nonin last August, they brought us $2.00 to $3.00 per sq. ft. from Thanksgiving to Xmas, while a bench of late cuttings gave us 25c blooms up to February 22 with never enough for the demand. Nonin is sure money; plant plenty and get your share. Strong flat-grown, 5c. Rooted cuttings, $3.00 per 100, postpaid; $25.00 per 1000. Strong, 4-in., 10c.

ELBERON, N. J.

The first flower show of the Elberon Horticultural Society was held July 13 and 14, in the fire company's building. There were fifty-three classes of exhibits in the premium list, and all but six had entries. The show was attended by large crowds during the full two days, the summer cottagers being much interested.

The exhibits occupied two floors and the basement of the building. The second floor had cut flowers and rare plants, the first floor bay trees, ferns and other decorative plants, while in the basement were vegetables and the geranium display.

Mrs. Thomas T. Kinney's exhibits were strong in outdoor fruit, herbaceous plants, annuals and ferns. G. W. Young, Samuel Sachs and Eugene Mayer, Frederick Dittlinger gardener, had fine vegetable displays. William Bryan's collection of roses took first prize. Special certificates of merit were awarded Daniel O'Day, A. Bauer gardener, one for Standard Bay Rambler roses, another for geraniums, box bush and heliotropes; Mrs. T. T. Kinney, for dahlias and ferns, exhibited by W. D. Robertson; A. R. Guggenheim, Herbert Hall gardener, Rex begonias and fruit.

The judges of the exhibit were Alexander Mackenzie, Glen Cove, N. Y.; H. A. Kettell, of Oceanic, and John Frankie, of Tuxedo Park.

The Elberon Horticultural Society was organized last November. At present it has seventy members, living in Long Branch, Deal and Allenhurst. The present officers of the society, to whom credit is due for the success of the first flower show, are: President, William D. Robertson; vice-president, Herbert Hall; secretary, George Masson; treasurer, James Kennedy; executive committee, A. Bauer, H. Wood, A. Grieb, E. O'Rourke, Frederick Dittlinger and J. Rallston. The society holds monthly meetings at the Elberon fire engine house.

BALTIMORE.

Business is good. The supply of cut flowers has been much shorter than the demand for some weeks past, even such common flowers as phlox, hollyhocks, feverfew and other outside stuff selling out from day to day. Business has fallen off considerably since the latter part of last week, and Cochet roses were left over in quantities on Saturday. Carnations are out of the question, a few good white ones coming in, but not nearly enough to supply the demand. Asters have made their appearance, but don't remain on sale long. Funeral work is the chief source of trade now. A. F.

HOUSE FOR LETTUCE, ETC.

How many 2-inch pipes will be needed to heat a house 21x40 feet, to grow lettuce, radishes or violets, using hot water. The house abuts on others to the north and east, but the west side and south end are exposed. I want to use 2-inch pipe because the house will be used for benches. W. P. R.

The house 21x40 feet can be heated sufficiently for lettuce, radishes or violets by nine runs of 2-inch pipe, a riser and three returns on the most protected wall and a riser and four returns on the exposed wall. That is assuming that the water is maintained at 180 degrees.

PIPING AND EXPANSION TANK.

Will you tell me how many runs of 1¼-inch pipe, what size flow, and what capacity boiler, rated in horse-power, are required to heat two connected even-span houses, running east and west, one to 54 degrees, the other to 58 degrees, with an outside temperature of 10 degrees below zero, using hot water? The houses are each 14x34 feet, 5-foot walls, nine feet to ridges. The north wall is boarded, the south has four feet of glass, and the east end has glass gables. There is a lean-to on the west 7½x18 feet, 4-foot wall, 7-foot ridge, with two feet of glass in the wall. The boiler shed is at the northwest corner. Where should the highest and lowest points in the system be located, and where should the expansion tank be connected?

L. C. B.

The houses in question, 14x34 feet, can be heated by one 1½-inch flow through each house, with twelve 1¼-inch returns in the house to carry 58 degrees, and eleven pipes in the one to carry 54 degrees. The highest point should be at the most distant point in the system from the boiler, i. e., an "up-hill" system. The lowest point should be the main return where it enters the boiler. The expansion tank should connect with the main return near the boiler.

L. C. C.

PIPING IN FOUR HOUSES.

I have four greenhouses, and should like to know how many runs of 1¼-inch pipe it will take to heat each house. One is 15x60, and is for geraniums; one is 20x60, to grow carnations; another one, 20x60, will be in palms; and the fourth, 15x25, will be used for carnations. We never have lower than 4 degrees below zero.

E. W.

If this plant is to be heated with hot water at 180 degrees, the houses 20x60 feet, intended for geraniums and carnations, can be heated by installing a 2-inch flow and sixteen 1¼-inch returns in each house. The palm house should be more heavily piped. A 2½-inch riser and eighteen 1¼-inch returns will serve for this house. The house 15x25 feet should have a 1½-inch flow or riser and fourteen 1¼-inch returns, to provide a safe amount of radiation.

L. C. C.

HEATING SCATTERED HOUSES.

I have one house 20x100, three-quarter span, 6-foot north wall, 3-foot south wall, with eighteen inches of glass, and an 11-foot ridge. It has raised benches and is heated by two 2½-inch overhead flows, and eight 2-inch returns under the benches. Another house, south of the first but not connected, is 11x100, with 7-foot ridge and solid beds. It is heated by one 2½-inch overhead flow, and three 2-inch returns under the walks.

I intend to build a house 25x100 two feet south of the second house. The new one will have a 2-foot north wall and a 3-foot south one, an 8-foot ridge, and fourteen inches of glass in the walls. The small, middle house is only temporary, and I shall build a larger one in the 16-foot space later. The houses will be used for lettuce.

My boiler is at the northwest corner, and is a Kroeschell No. 3. How can I carry water across the ends of the three houses, thirty-five feet, and heat the new house? Is a 4-inch main flow, taking off 2½-inch flows for the houses, large enough? Can I return by 2-inch pipes, connected with a 4-inch main return? The bottom of the boiler will be six feet below the floor. Please describe the size and arrangement of pipes I need. How many returns will a 3-inch flow and a 2½-inch flow take care of? How large and how high ought the expansion tank to be?

B. A. B.

If, as I suppose, you have a potting shed covering the ends of all three houses, with the boiler at one corner, a 4-inch main flow from the boiler past the center house, and a 3-inch flow from that point to the far end of the new house, will undoubtedly provide the necessary heat for the radiation in the plant. The new house 25x100 feet will need a 3-inch flow and nine 2-inch returns to maintain a lettuce temperature. The only fault is the length of the run from the boiler through the new house, 135 feet, which is too long for the best results with hot water. In your climate, however, there should be no difficulty in doing the work with the boiler specified. If the boiler could be a little more centrally located, the runs could be shortened and a greater efficiency secured.

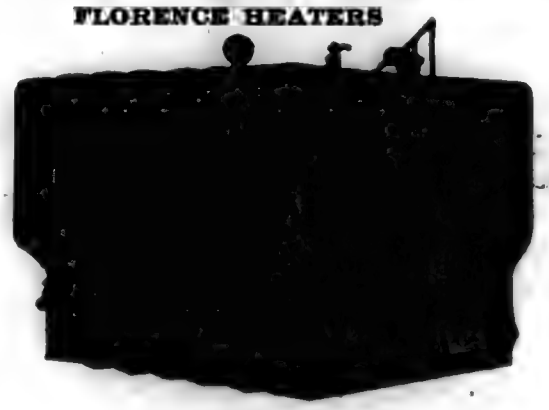
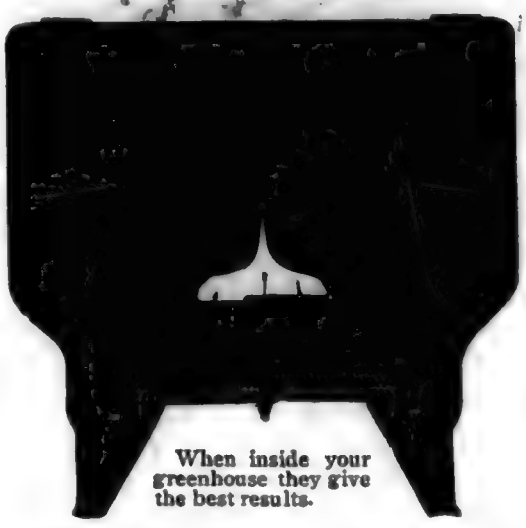
A 2½-inch flow pipe will supply heat for 600 square feet of radiation, i. e., 960 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe, while a 3-inch pipe will supply heat for 900 square feet of radiation, or 1,440 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe. The expansion tank should have fifty to sixty gallons capacity, and should be elevated as high as convenience will allow, ten or twelve feet above the highest point in the heating system. L. C. C.

BOILER CAPACITY AND PIPES.



I have two houses each 19x50, five feet to gutter, nine and one-half feet to ridge; one lean-to 9x40, five feet to gutter, seven feet to ridge; one house 34x60, five feet to gutter and seventeen and one-half feet to ridge. A dwelling house abuts on the end of one of the houses 19x50. My boiler room is at the opposite end of the range, on the corner of the large house. The latter is to be used for carnations. The large house has no glass below the gutter. The others are glass above three and one-half feet.

Can I heat these with a steam boiler, using hot water, ten feet by thirty-six inches, with twenty-eight 3-inch flues? It is return flue style, and is bricked in. The two houses 19x50 are piped with 4-inch soil pipe, and the lean-to with 2-inch pipe. Can I connect onto this 4-inch piping? How shall I arrange the pipes in the house 34x60 feet? W. P.



The boiler in question, if used as a water heater, will have ample capacity to provide heat for maintaining a proper temperature in all of the four houses noted. Whether or not this is accomplished will depend upon the radiation in the houses and the firing of the boiler.

The house 34x60 feet can be heated by using nineteen runs of 2-inch pipe, extending the length of the house. These can be arranged in manifolds of four pipes, each supplied by an independent flow, the flows carried either overhead or under the benches. L. C. C.

ALCOHOL AS FUEL.

Can you tell me how many units of heat there are in a gallon of denatured alcohol, and how many units there are in a ton of hard or soft coal? I am thinking of building a range of greenhouses of about 10,000 or 12,000 feet of glass, and wonder if it could be heated with alcohol. I am now using hard coal; it cost me a little over $500 last winter to heat 6,000 feet of glass. I am looking at the difference there would be in the work to be done. S. N. M.

From the best information at hand, I learn that the heat units in a pound of alcohol are just about the same as in a pound of the best bituminous coal. In order to compete with coal at present prices as fuel, the alcohol would have to sell for from 3 to 4 cents per gallon.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

At the second gathering of the florists of Springfield and vicinity, held to form some kind of organization, on Monday evening, July 16, reports were received from committees appointed at the initial meeting, and a constitution and by-laws were adopted. The name of the organization is to be The Springfield Florists' Club, and regular meetings will be held on the second Monday evening of each month.

Officers to serve for one year were elected as follows: John M. Good, president; Roger H. Murphy, vice-president; Chas. W. Schmidt, secretary; and Roy McGregor, treasurer. An entertainment committee was appointed, which has since announced the first picnic, to be held at Eichholz Park, on Thursday, August 2.

The Daily News of July 20 states, "Big hay wagons were used to carry fifty-six of the employees of the Good & Reese Co., with their families, to Clifton Friday morning, where they are holding their picnic. The day is being spent in playing ball and other outdoor sports."

A new record was established this season by the Leedle Floral Co., which made its first shipment of young rose plants from early summer propagation on July 11, new stock not ordinarily being expected to be in shipping condition until early fall.

MASON CITY, IA.

The Perry Florists' Association held its summer meeting July 17, 18 and 19, at the greenhouses of A. L. Wheeler. As in the past, the meeting was profitable, and was enjoyed by those present. The evening of the first day a musical program was given. The next morning a trolley ride was taken to Clear Lake, followed by a sail on the lake in the afternoon.

At the business session on the third day, presided over by President Wheeler, a paper on carnations, from the Albert Lea Floral Co., of Albert Lea, Minn., was read. An invitation from the New Hampton Floral Co., New Hampton, Ia., to hold the mid-winter meeting at its place of business, was read and accepted.

greenhouse builders have been striving for lighter houses, realizing that all other things being equal, the house admitting the greatest amount of light, gave correspondingly greater returns, whether it be of flowers, fruits or vegetables.

U-BAR GREENHOUSES

Are the Best Greenhouses Built

because they solve the increased light problem—by a 24-inch spacing of glass, and with one-half the shading members.

THE TEST OF DURABILITY

Durability in greenhouse material is of first importance. It is expensive and tiresome to be constantly rebuilding and repairing—trying to patch up houses built of poor material.

If you want lasting houses get material that stands the test. Our cypress material will stand the most critical examination or comparison. "Time waits for no man"—send for catalogue and estimate today.

They Are Little Things

To look for, but big things to find—the points that make H & Co. boilers. They mean a boiler for greenhouses—a boiler of economy of fuel and ease of management—the boiler that is used by 50% of the florists.

Heating Apparatus.

Though not cultural notes, I want to say a word about your heating apparatus. In the rush at the end of May when you cease firing, your hot water heaters and steam boilers are too often neglected. In the case of hot water cast-iron heaters the interior surfaces of the heater, all that you can get at, should be given a good coat of oil, also all doors and hinges. It need not be new linseed oil; any waste oil that has been used on journals will do. There is more abuse and wear on these heaters during the dampness of summer than in the use of them in winter.

Cast-iron heaters and pipes should be kept at all times full of water. Proper care of these most important implements may save you much future expense.

WILLLIAM SCOTT.

Your Friend Mr. Scott

Gives some right-down sound advice in that clipping, but there's a possible exception to be taken in filling the boiler and pipes where boiler cellars are damp and cool, as the boiler will then sweat and entirely defeat the purpose of the oil. Our experience has proven that neither rule is absolutely right—conditions of your cellar must govern it.

BOSTON BRANCH, 819 Tremont Building.

But there's one thing we do know absolutely, and that is if you wait until next fall to repair your heating plant or order a new boiler, you are going to be held up in the fall rush—so get at it now, it doesn't cost any more and what is the use of everlastingly putting it off?

Glass! Glass!

Factories are now out of blast, but we have a complete stock and want your inquiries and will try to merit your orders. Write us before buying.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Harrisii Lilies.

A very important article in our business has just arrived, the Bermuda lilies. Get them potted at once. For 5x7 bulbs 5-inch pots will do; for 7x9 bulbs 6-inch pots will pay best. Use a good loam or decayed sod, but avoid fresh manure. Cover each bulb, leaving only the top visible at the surface of the soil. Place outdoors and cover with two inches of stable litter, sandy soil or some material that will keep the sun from parching them every day. They should also be in a frame, so that in case of a wet time they can be covered with sashes. They should not be taken into the houses until the growth appears above the temporary covering.

There often is a failure with these early forced lilies. Most often it is the inability to give them a high temperature in November and December, but often it is because the bulbs are lifted too soon, when the stem and foliage are yet green. The Bermuda growers doubtless are anxious to be early on the market. It is a mistake. All bulbous plants should be allowed to be thoroughly ripe before being lifted or the growth arrested. The philosophy of this is that while flowering, and for several weeks afterward, the foliage is helping the bulb below to store up sustenance and dormant vigor for another year. So if these bulbs are dug when the stem and leaves are still performing their function, and storing up for future energy, you can't expect good results.

Last winter a brother florist told me that he heard from a Philadelphian, one of the foremost in the country, the following experience: This Philadelphia man exported to a customer in Europe a thousand or more Lilium Harrisii in August and for some reason or other they were refused. The Philadelphian at once cabled to his foreign customer to ship the lilies back again to this country, and they were potted and forced and turned out the most satisfactory he had. I can only see one lesson from this experience; that is, that in the time taken by the ocean voyage and other delays the bulbs had been ripening, so if the bulbs on arrival look green, unpack and lay out in flats with a little sand or dry soil beneath them and enough of the same material around them to about cover the bulbs. In this condition they can remain a month before potting.

And this brings us to the question whether it is advisable to give them a soaking with water as soon as potted or whether it is better to let them remain a month without water in the dry soil. Surrounded with the soil in the pots, and covered with the mulch over the pots, the bulbs will certainly not suffer. We have never tried this on any of the longiflorum type of lilies, but we have on the speciosum or lancifolium class, and found it a good plan. When received they were potted and placed under a bench and not a drop of water given them, and as they started they were lifted to the light. The premature lifting of the lily bulb is the cause of much disappointment in forcing these beautiful plants.

Asters.

Don't let your asters suffer for want of water at this season. We have had an acre of which we were very proud, and then a long, dry August set in, and we had nothing but a crop of single flowers. A sprinkling is no good. They want a thorough irrigation or you will not get good flowers.

Carnations.

Our experience in western New York is that this is the ideal time to house carnations from the field. The plants may not be large; that is of no consequence. They have lots of time to grow indoors. The growth is hard and short-jointed. If they lose a few fibres they don't feel it, for they have not much growth to support, and how they do enjoy the change from the parched ground in the field to the genial moisture of the bench! How different from the soft, succulent growth of September that, with perfect lifting and inside treatment, for a few days wilts down daily and takes all the vitality out of their leading shoots, which should produce flowers. How we have progressed in the cultivation of this most popular flower!

Hollyhocks.

I am reminded that this is a good time to sow hollyhocks. The disease is still with us; so bad is it that we are discouraged. W. W. Wilmore, of Denver, tells me it is not known in Colorado. In our severe winters the seedlings will not stand the winters outdoors, so it is well to sow in drills in a frame, where they can be covered with sashes, or evergreen brush, or straw. Every retail greenhouse man is asked for them and it is difficult to procure good plants. Procure the best strain of seed you can and you will have no difficulty in selling all the plants you raise. The day is past when the hollyhock flowers are used singly for any purpose, but as spikes they are in demand for large decorations and for mixed borders. Against shrubbery they are majestic and picturesque, far more so than the formal dahlia.

CARNATIONS

FERTILIZERS FOR CARNATIONS.

Will you kindly inform me as to what is the best fertilizer to mix with the soil for carnations? I have some blood, bone and potash. Would you use it in mixing? Is pure bone dust a good fertilizer? W. B.

I should prefer to use the blood, bone and potash later on as a top-dressing, when the plants need feeding. Before planting your carnations on the benches, mix into the soil some pure ground bone. Twenty-five to thirty-five pounds to 500 square feet of bench space is enough. There are so many brands and grades of ground bone that one sometimes is undecided what to buy. For several seasons we used a very finely ground bone flour. This is quick in action because it is ground so fine, and becomes soluble so much quicker. For quick results it is excellent. Of late years, however, we have been using a coarser grade, called pure ground bone. This is ground about as fine as corn meal, and contains particles as large as bird shot, as well as a good proportion of dust. This grade will give more lasting results, as it takes some time for the coarser particles to become soluble.

Bone meal is considered by far the safest and best fertilizer to mix into the soil at planting time. All others are added later on as top-dressing, or in liquid form as they are needed. The main thing is to get good, pure bone meal that has not been cut with acids. Buy from some reputable house.

RED SPIDER ON CARNATIONS.

I am sending you samples of some carnation plants I have just received. On unpacking them they showed brown on the tips of the foliage. I planted them immediately on getting them, and gave them good attention. They did not have a good color when they arrived. Can you tell me what is the matter with them? B. F. K.

The plants are badly affected with red spider, and if these plants are a fair sample of the lot, then you are likely to have much trouble before you are through with them. From the looks of the plants I judge they are Mrs. Lawson or one of its sports. These varieties are poor shippers, even when they are healthy, and when they are handicapped in this way you may be sure there will be plenty of trouble. You will find that they will lose most of the foliage and it will take fine culture to save the plants and get them under way in time to be profitable. Last season we bought 500 Lawson, which were afflicted the same way when they arrived, and they were an eyesore to us all winter.

I advise you to put supports on them at once, and then syringe them with a strong, cutting spray from both sides every day. Be careful to wet the soil no more than you want it wet normally. After they have been planted a couple of weeks, if they have taken hold of the soil, use the soap solution which I recommended recently. Take off the dead foliage when it is quite dry, as it will then break off readily without tearing the bark from the stems. Don't use any insecticides until the plants have taken hold. A. F. J. B.

CARNATION TEMPERATURES.

I have two carnation houses. One runs at about 50 degrees, the other 56 degrees. My carnations are William Scott, Louise, Enchantress and Genevieve Lord. Which of these shall I put in the cooler house, and which in the warmer? W. A. L.

None of the varieties you mention will do well in as warm a temperature as 56 degrees. I should hate to attempt to grow carnations in a house in which I could have no more control over the temperature. If there is no other way to keep the temperature down, you can arrange to open part of the ventilators a trifle. The best plan perhaps would be to procure enough plants of the various colors of Lawson and its sports to fill that house. These will thrive in 56 degrees. None of your varieties should have over 52 degrees under ordinary conditions. Queen Louise and Genevieve Lord, however, would likely suffer the least. You ought to be able to cut out any pipe on your place except the mains. A. F. J. B.

HINTS ON CARNATIONS.

Will you please give me the day and night temperatures for the following list of carnations, also any special points of difference in their culture: Pink Lawson, White and Variegated Lawson, Enchantress, Harry Fenn, Lady Bountiful and Nelson Fisher. M. S. C.

The following temperatures will suit your varieties admirably: Mrs. T. W. Lawson and all its sports, 54 to 56 degrees; Enchantress, 48 to 52 degrees; Harry Fenn, 50 to 52 degrees; Lady Bountiful, 50 to 52 degrees; Nelson Fisher, 54 to 56 degrees. I shall ask you to read my answer to R. A. M. in last week's issue in regard to the texture of your soil.

Aside from the difference in temperature, the varieties require pretty much the same treatment until feeding time comes. Mrs. Lawson and her sports will stand liberal feeding when in good health, and so will Fenn. Enchantress does not like much feeding, as it has a tendency to make the blooms soft. The same is true of Nelson Fisher. Lady Bountiful, if grown too wet and fed unduly, will have considerable pink mottling in the bloom. Grow this just a little dry when in full bloom. Don't top it too late either, else your first crop will be quite late. Watch close for thrips on the Lawson tribe; they are their special favorites. A. F. J. B.

CONVENTION PROGRAM.

The preliminary program for the twenty-second annual convention of the Society of American Florists has just been issued. It announces that in accordance with the instructions voted by the society last year in Washington, a system of numbered badges and key-book to correspond has been put into operation this year under the direction of the executive board. It is believed that the members will find these numbers valuable as a convenient means of identification of one another. The names of all new members joining prior to July 15 this year, have been included in the list. Each member of the society will be supplied with a copy of the book.

The opening session is set for Tuesday, August 21, 2 p. m. The opening session will be devoted to an address of welcome by Mayor Chas. F. Snyder, response by ex-President Patrick O'Mara; the annual address of the president, and reports of secretary, treasurer, state vice-presidents, committees, and other officials of the society. The judges will examine and prepare their report upon the novelties and new inventions in the trade exhibition immediately after the close of the opening session.

President's reception, 7 p. m. This always-popular social feature will be held on Tuesday evening at Far Hills, the private estate of John H. Patterson, under the auspices of the Dayton Florists' Club. Music, refreshments, and grand illumination of the grounds.

Second day, Wednesday, August 22, 9:30 a. m. Following reports of judges at the morning session, the prize essays prepared by members on the subject of "The Best Method of Marketing the Product of the Wholesale Plant and Flower Grower," will be presented and the awards announced.

The selection of the location of the next meeting (polls open one hour), nomination of officers and roll-call of states for nomination for state vice-presidents for next year will take place at this session.

There also will be an address, "Teaching Horticulture in the Public Schools," by E. V. Hallock, Queens, N. Y.

The executive board recommends the passage of the following amendments:

Article 11, section 2, to be amended by striking out in paragraph (d) the words "12 o'clock noon" and inserting "11 a. m."

The following to be added to paragraph (d) "In case of failure to elect on first ballot, the president shall order a new ballot immediately, polls to remain open one hour; should this ballot fail to elect, the president shall order a third ballot, polls to remain open one hour; this ballot shall be limited to the two candidates receiving the highest vote on preceding ballot."

Bowling tournament at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday. The bowling contests between teams representing the various Florists' Clubs, will take place at the bowling alleys, Fairview park. Preliminary individual rolling and the ladies' contests will take place at Lakeside park. Many valuable trophies have been donated. For instructions as to entries, etc., address George Asmus, 897 W. Madison street, Chicago, Ill.

There will be a promenade concert at the exhibition building during the afternoon for the entertainment of those who do not attend the bowling tournament.

Florists' Hail Association of America. Annual meeting at Convention hall, 3 p. m., Wednesday.

Illustrated lecture, 8 p. m. Title and lecturer to be announced later. The question box will be opened after the close of the lecture, and a general discussion will be in order upon a number of practical topics.

There will be a meeting of members of the American Carnation Society at the Algonquin Hotel, immediately after adjournment of the Wednesday evening session of the S. A. F.

Third day, Thursday, August 23, 9:30 a. m. Subjects for discussion will be: "Recent Improvements in Retailers' Methods of Offering Flowers." Essayist to be announced later. "The Ideal Private Gardener and His Work," by Fred E. Palmer, Brookline, Mass.

Election of officers, 10 a. m. During the discussion the election of officers for 1907 will take place, the polls being kept open two hours. The question box will be opened during the voting.

Exhibitors' day. By vote of the executive board, Thursday afternon will be devoted exclusively to the interests of the exhibitors. There will be band concerts in the exhibition hall, and in the grounds outside, noon and evening.

Evening session, 7:30 p. m. The main topic for this evening, as assigned by the executive board will be addresses and a discussion on the proposed national flower show.

Friday, August 24, is Dayton Florists' day. The program as arranged for the fourth day is as follows: At 10 a. m., a trip to the National Cash Register Co., the model factory of the world. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock, a street-car ride to Soldiers' Home; band concert at the home by Uncle Sam's band; address at Memorial hall. Further details will be announced from the platform at Thursday's session.

Main Street Bridge and the High School, Dayton, O.

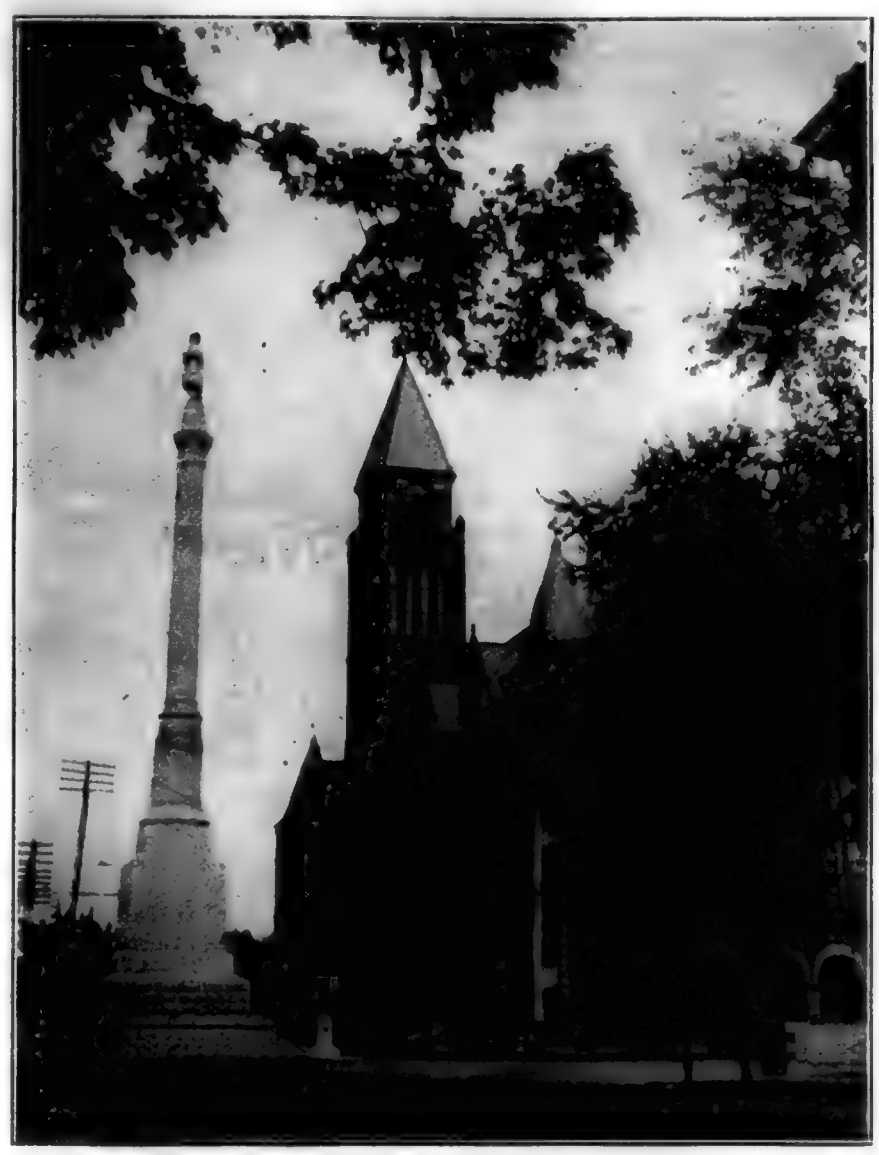
HARDY PLANT NOTES.

Best Sorts for Florists.

The majority of florists, more especially those doing a local trade, grow a number of the more useful hardy perennials for cuttings. In addition to their value for this purpose many customers by seeing them nicely grown will be tempted to buy roots of them, and as the majority of these plants increase quickly and can be divided readily they form a satisfactory investment. In growing hardy plants, as indeed any class of plants, it pays to handle a few of the best sorts only. It is poor policy to pay $3 per hundred for an old and inferior phlox, for instance, when a similar investment in one-fourth the number of a first-class sort will put more money in your pocket.

There is still time to sow seeds of a number of perennials and biennials for flowering another season, including delphiniums, aquilegias, sweet williams, hesperis, campanulas of sorts including Canterbury bells, hibiscus, digitalis and many others. Sow in light soil in coldframes in rows six inches apart. Shade the sashes with whitening and kerosene in preference to lime wash. Tilt them up top and bottom to insure plenty of air, water daily unless the weather is damp and the seeds will soon appear; when nicely up pull the sashes off nights and dull days, also for any gentle showers, but keep them covered during heavy downpours which will wash them badly. Gradually inure them to full sunlight and transplant into other frames or spare ground outside during damp weather. Keep the hoe well plied among them and keep weeds down, and it is really surprising what fine plants can be had by fall. Subjoined are a few notes on desirable plants for the general florists' trade. All are easily grown, free blooming and perfectly hardy.



Malva moschata alba; flowers are pure white, keep well in water and come in splendidly for design work. Seed sown now will give flowering plants for next season. Blooms the last of June and the early part of July. M. alcea, a deep pink variety, is also pretty but less desirable than M. moschata.

Lobelia Cardinalis.

Lobelia cardinalis, the brilliant and well-known cardinal flower of our swamps, is seldom seen on florists' places. It is generally supposed that this needs wet ground. While it luxuriates on marshy land, it can also be finely grown on high and comparatively dry ground. Seed sowing in February in heat is a good method of propagation. The seedlings can be planted outdoors by May 1 and a few will bloom the same season. The second year they will make a gorgeous show and even if the flowers cannot be sold customers will be found for the plants. The blue variety, L. syphilitica, is a more robust grower than L. cardinalis. Its densely flowered spikes of dark blue flowers are very effective in borders. The lobelias usually flower from the end of July until September.

Lychnis.

Lychnis vespertina plena, or the double evening campion, flowers over quite a long period. It may be picked in June and continues blooming until September. The double, scented flowers arrange nicely in small vases and are useful in design work when good carnations and roses of the same color are scarce and before asters come in. Several others of the lychnis family should be grown. L. Viscaria splendens, with its double red, fragrant flowers, is fine for cutting or making a mass display. L. Chalcedonica, the old London pride, grows a yard high and flowers in June and July. Its brilliant flowers make it a desirable border plant. L. Flos-cuculi plenissima, with delicate soft pink flowers, and L. Haageana in a variety of shades, are both desirable and may easily be raised from seeds sown now.

High School and Soldiers' Monument at Dayton, O.

Delphinium.

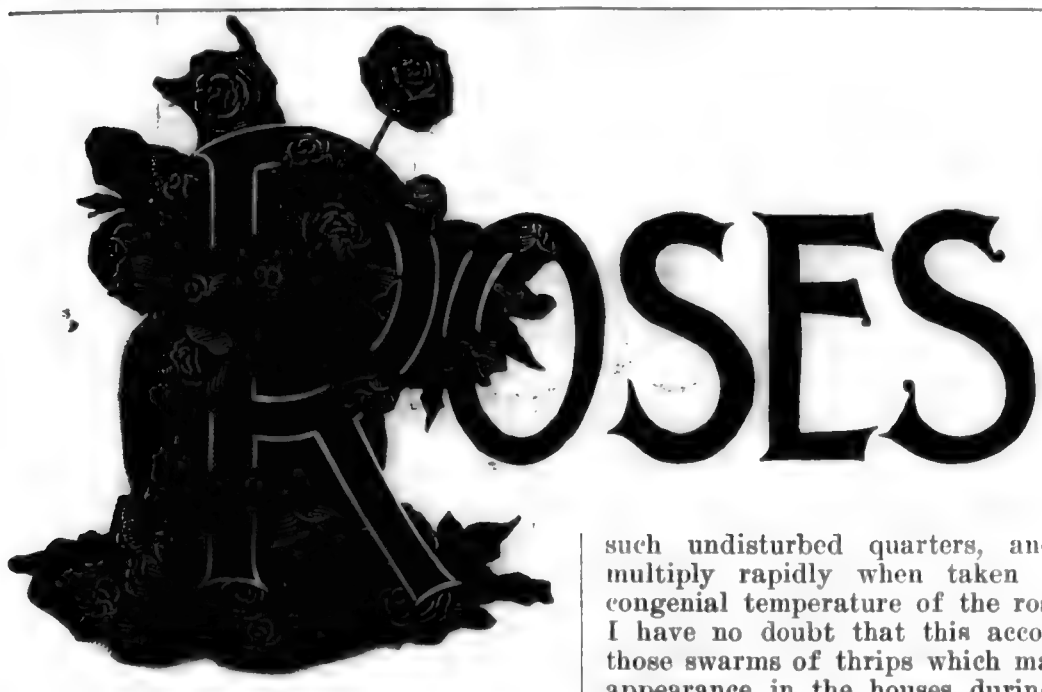
Delphinium Chinense, intense blue flowers with feathery foliage, and album, a pure white form, are the best of the larkspur family commercially. The flowers are produced in open panicles and may be had the whole summer. This plant may either be treated as an annual or perennial. If the latter the spikes are stronger and more numerous. The flowers are of great value cut. They look and last well. We think a small bed of this would be of great value to any florist who has any design work or calls for cut flowers in July and August.

Phlox Miss Lingard.

This is the best of the early or suffruticosa section and perhaps the best and most useful phlox in cultivation. It can be cut from the middle of June until October. Flowers are pure white except for a delicate lavender eye. The stalks are strong and the flowers last very well in water. It is readily propagated from soft-wood cuttings either in fall or spring. No up-to-date grower should be without this grand sort. Several forms are sold purporting to be Miss Lingard which are not true to name. They usually have deeply colored eyes and a considerable suffusion of color over the petals.

Achillea the Pearl.

Achillea Ptarmica the pearl is one of the most widely grown of perennials for summer flowering. It is so readily propagated from the roots that once a small bed is established all it needs is occasional replanting or keeping within bounds, as it spreads with alarming rapidity. It is one of the perennials no retail florist can well afford to do without. It is splendid for cutting, and for design work in July and August is of great value. Varieties raised from seed are liable to be single and of poor quality, but plants of the true type are so cheap that no one need be without them.



C. W.

BROWN FLIES ON ASTERS.

What can I do to get rid of the brown flies which are destroying my asters? They seem to puncture the stem just below the bud, causing the bud to wilt and die. These flies are on them in geat numbers and I am in danger of losing my whole crop. N. E. B.

We are not familiar with the brown flies, although we have often been troubled with the aster beetle. The beetle eats the center petals of the flower and attacks them directly they show color. They are a chewing insect and a teaspoonful of Paris green in a pail of water applied to the buds and foliage before the buds begin to expand is the best remedy the writer knows of. You would not term the aster beetle a brown fly, so your trouble is most likely an aphis of some kind. Any of the nicotine extracts will prove a most effectual destroyer of the green and black fly. They should be diluted with about 200 times their bulk of water and applied with the Eclipse compressed air sprayer, often called the knapsack sprayer, a most useful little apparatus. If you think it tedious to find out what is a 200th part, fill the cylinder two-thirds full of water, then add a 2-inch pot of the nicotine. This mixture is so colorless that it does not stain the fairest flower and is death to the aphis on roses, carnations or chrysanthemums. The spray is so fine and mistlike, and it is so much diluted, that it is not at all expensive. W. S.

THE RICHMOND ROSE.

From many sections of the country comes the report that young plants of the Richmond rose are still on the growers' hands, with the end of the planting season rapidly approaching. It appears that every grower who bought stock of the introducer of Richmond has the past season been propagating for all he was worth. As every piece of wood put into the sand roots and makes a plant, the result is that every one has stock to spare. It is the unanimous report of growers that Richmond is easier to propagate than any other rose now largely grown. Next year the price of young stock will doubtless be no more than moderate at the best.

MULCHING MIXTURES.

To get mulching material in good condition for fall and winter use, it ought to be prepared now, as the manure and soil can be obtained in any condition desirable. A compost consisting of two-thirds decomposed cow manure and one-third good, fibrous loam, should be put into a neat pile for two or three weeks. It should then be chopped up fine, much finer than compost for roses, and turned over two or three times at intervals of ten days.

When it is in a fine, mellow condition, it should be put through a ¾-inch screen or a fine sod crusher. It is then ready for use and should be stored where it will be protected from the cold fall rains and snow. If bone meal or other fertilizers are to be used, they can be added at the time of applying.

Danger in Weeds.

While in the pile, and indeed at all times, the material should be kept clear of weeds, as these attract insects which make them a depository for their eggs.

Material which has been lying neglected and covered with weeds all summer is not fit to be put into the mulch pile, as it is invariably swarming with thrips, red spider, etc., which delight in such undisturbed quarters, and which multiply rapidly when taken into the congenial temperature of the rose house. I have no doubt that this accounts for those swarms of thrips which make their appearance in the houses during winter and spring, as from personal observation I have found these pests become more numerous just after an application of mulch. By getting the material ready now, it may save some hours of anxious worry when the short, dark days begin.

It will also be wise to look after the soil required for potting the young stock. Having the soil in good condition and handy for this purpose constitutes one of the first elements of success.

Ribes.

THE ROSE.

[Conclusion of a paper by M. Stauch, foreman for J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia., read before the Nebraska State Horticultural Society at Omaha, July 12, 1906.]

Need of Early Fire.

Our aim should be to bring the roses into winter with plenty of good, vigorous, well-ripened wood, not stunted or soft and spindling. Many a crop of flowers is lost, or at least seriously injured, and often the prospects for the whole of the winter months are ruined, by not starting the fire in time. In August and September we often will have chilly, wet days and nights. Do not neglect to run a little heat through the houses, if it is only to take the chill and dampness out of the air. It will repay you with interest. You will not have much trouble with mildew and other fungous diseases. You also will not be so much afraid to syringe when you know that you will have the fire going at night, so red spider will not get a start, which means much by November, when the weather conditions may be so that you will not dare to syringe sometimes for a week or more.

Place to Cut.

Meanwhile the roses have been kept nicely tied up, all the weaker stems disbudded or cut back and we are beginning to cut some flowers from some of the strongest shoots. The stems should not be cut too low on the young roses, leaving four to six eyes, according to the condition of the plants, while weak stems may be cut lower or cut out entirely. As the plant grows stronger the practice of cutting two or three eyes is the best with most varieties, Beauties being an exception, as most of the flower stems come from the base, or near the bottom, of the plant, and should be left with four to eight eyes. It is impossible to cut the flowers by any formula or set rule; the difference in varieties and the condition of the plants varies so much that almost each individual plant demands a different way of cutting.

This apparently simple operation is accountable in a large measure for our high or low grades of flowers. I find it more difficult to teach the cutting of the flowers than the watering, or any other operation pertaining to rose culture.

Temperature and Ventilation.

The temperature most suited to our tea roses is from 55 to 58 degrees at night and 66 to 68 degrees in day. On exceptionally bright days the temperature may go up to 70 or 75 degrees, Beauties are kept about 2 degrees warmer.

The airing or ventilating of the rose houses is of great importance during the whole year; particularly during the fall, winter and spring they need very close watching. It often happens that the ventilation has to be changed four or five times an hour. Good judgment is necessary in airing. Never raise the ventilation too much at one time, but go around often and raise it by degrees. Avoid all sudden changes and draughts; a cold draught of air admitted suddenly is apt to check the plants and cripple the flowers, besides causing mildew, and may mean a setback for a month or six weeks. This mistake is most apt to occur in the early morning hours, when the sun commences to strike the glass, and may be partially avoided by shutting down the fires as soon as the sun appears, raising the ventilation part of an inch and so gradually raising the temperature of the house.

Watering and Mulching.

The beds must be frequently examined during the cold weather. They may appear moist on top, while heat from the pipes has dried them from below. Always water so that the moisture penetrates to the bottom and then let the bench alone until a good watering is needed again. Of course there are always places which need a little extra water between times, but the grower will soon find those places.

Most growers give a light mulch of manure about the first of October or earlier, and then no more until the middle of February or March.

Artificial fertilizers, such as bone meal, blood, wood ashes or lime, are used during the winter months. A light watering with liquid manure beginning in January and used every two or three weeks is a great stimulant. Artificial fertilizers should be used with great caution, particularly by beginners. It is easily overdone. Use a little at a time, and so ascertain the amount most beneficial. From the middle of March on manure and manure water, or any quick acting fertilizer, can be used more freely without injury.

Much more could be said of every operation in the culture of roses, but it would take too much time to enter into every detail.

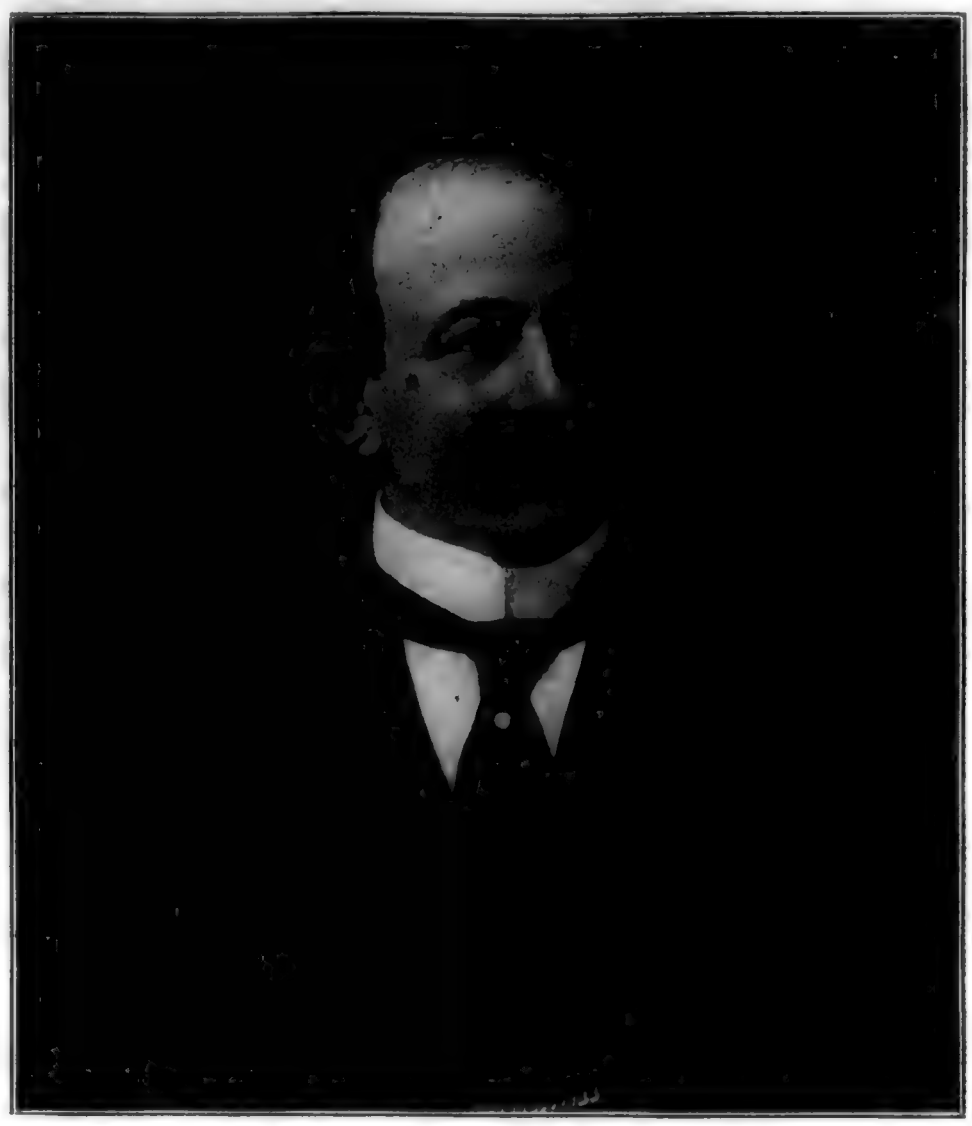
Diseases of Roses.

Among the many diseases the rose is subject to, the most common and best known are mildew and black spot, both being fungous diseases. Sickly, poorly ventilated or overfed plants are the first attacked. The disease is produced by sudden changes of the temperature, draughts of air, too much atmospheric moisture, and numerous other causes mostly due to poor ventilation or heating.

To prevent them means to overcome all these defects, which is possible, but not so easily done. Mildew, to which our teas are most susceptible, is the easiest to combat. Sulphur on the pipes, or dusted on the foliage, is the best remedy. The American Beauty is most susceptible to black spot. As a remedy, carbonate of copper is recommended. Air-slaked lime and sulphur are also used, but it is best to pick off all the spotted leaves as soon as they appear and burn them, keep sulphur on the pipes, give plenty of air; in short, work against the conditions which have brought the diseases about.

Insects on Roses.



The insects which infest roses and come mostly to our notice are greenfly, red spider, eel worm and thrips. The two first named are easily kept down, greenfly by proper ventilation, tobacco fumes and the various forms of nicotine. Red spider enjoys a warm and dry atmosphere, and its presence tells us that we have not made the proper use of the hose. Good, hard syringing on bright days, if only done well once or twice a week, is the best preventive and cure. Eel worm, a pest which infests the roots and means certain destruction to the plants, can be kept in check by the use of lime or lime water. Wherever it is present in the soil, it is best to resort to grafted plants, as Manetti is not susceptible to eel worm.

The most troublesome of all is thrips. It lodges in the buds and flowers. The damage it does to rose growers amounts to thousands of dollars every year. It is in itself easily destroyed, but owing to its habit of secreting itself, so far nothing has been found which will exterminate it, and at the same time not injure the plants. Various insecticides are recommended to keep them in check. Those which appear to give the best satisfaction are: Paris green diluted in water, fumigation with tobacco and red pepper, or the different nicotine extracts used either on the heating pipes or on the foliage; any of them means certain death to the thrips if caught out of its hiding place. It is therefore necessary to continue to use these two or three times a week if any satisfactory result is expected.

Summing up the whole rose culture, we find that whenever we do not observe the laws governing a healthy plant growth, we invite disease and insects to feast on the roses, and thus curtail our profits.

CANTON, O.—Chas. F. Blanc is building a new house 12x90 feet for lettuce and violets.

I LIKE the REVIEW best of all; it is very interesting and instructive.—LUDWIG ZIMMER, St. Louis, Mo.

Paul Berkowitz.

PAUL BERKOWITZ.

The REVIEW takes pleasure in presenting this week the portrait of a friend who will need no introduction to many readers. Paul Berkowitz, of the firm of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, has hosts of friends in every state in the Union and in Canada, who look forward with pleasure to his visits each year. To these any remarks of mine will seem superfluous. For those less fortunate, let me add, a man of tried integrity, commanding respect, whose genial personality draws men to him, a man to be trusted and liked almost at sight, a man whose happy laugh convinces you that he is a boy at heart, and makes you glad of it.

Mr. Berkowitz joined the firm of M. M. Bayersdorfer & Co. in 1879, spending three years in the florists' supply business, and then going south in another line of business. In 1889 he returned to the firm, then H. Bayersdorfer & Co., and he has since aided the present head of the house in building up the business to its present vast proportions. The advent of these two young men to the firm marked an epoch in the florists' supply business of the whole country.

SHADE FOR FERNS.

We have planted on the south bench of a three-quarter-span house, Boston, Piersoni and Scottii ferns. Is it best to shade these or give them the full sunlight? We have a number of shutters made of lath split in two. Would these be good if shade is needed? On the north bench we are growing in pots Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. Is it necessary to shade these? N. & T.

The Boston and Scottii ferns will certainly not be benefited by shade. If you want to use the slat shades (the best shading there is) for a few hours on hot, bright days, it will help to keep them the beautiful green which is natural. Remember we are a month past the time when the sun is most powerful and every day it is receding. The nephrolepis needs no shade if the roots are not neglected for water. They are natives of Central America and the islands known as the West Indies.

The same can be said of our ornamental Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. They need no shade except to preserve their color. It is late now to apply shade for almost anything. After our long, dark winters, when the sun bursts forth with burning rays in April and May is the time when the soft foliage of plants is benefited by shade, not now, when they are hardened to the fullest light. W. S.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The market remains about the same as last week, except that sweet peas are almost gone. The early asters are now in full crop, and go a great way in helping to make a show in the windows, as roses can hardly be obtained. Carnations still remain scarce, and what few come in are soon taken up. Asters seem to be free of disease this year, at least for the present. In passing a large patch the other day, we did not see one diseased aster plant; all looked thrifty and healthy. Most of the florists are busy now clearing the houses of the old carnation soil and repairing old benches. Some have been planting for the last two weeks. We have had two good rains since the last report, and everything is now growing finely.

Various Notes.

The Missouri Floral Co.'s new store at 920-922 Main street is in one of the best locations on the street for a flower store. With C. E. Hunt in charge, they will no doubt build up a fine trade in a short time. They had quite a large display of gladioli in their large show window this week.

The store of Miss Peterson & Co., on West Ninth street, has quite a neat appearance. This being the only store on that good street and in that part of the city, where most of the large office buildings are located, they surely will build up a large trade. A visit at the store found them very busy grading asters, of which they seemed to have an abundance.

Mr. Fruedenthal has been busy this week with funeral work. He seems to have good luck, as most of the other stores are idle and the clerks are complaining of the trade being dull. The day that we called on him his cooler was well stocked with carnations and asters, but no roses were in sight. He had just received several large cases of Boston ferns that were shipped in from Independence, Mo. Mr. Fruedenthal does a large business in ferns.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is making quite a change in its Walnut street store. The entire interior is being remodeled. They are putting in new fixtures and are doing away with their counters, and rearranging so that they will have a great deal more room. The wall will be paneled with burlap and mirrors. They are also putting in a fine mantel. Mr. Rock says that the store as it used to be was entirely too small, especially on holidays, to accommodate them. Their show window looks quite yellow this week, being heavily banked in Golden Glow, with all the vases to match the window, which has the appearance of chrysanthemum time.

Mr. Chandler is cutting asters by the thousand, and supplying all stores that are not growing any. What he does not sell in that way he passes over to the commission house, and Mr. Bastian does the rest. Mr. Chandler also grows large quantities of dahlias. He has a great number of seedlings which he is now cutting. They can be seen among the other standard varieties he grows.

William A. Bastian, the commission man, says business is quiet. There is little demand for anything except fancy ferns. Mr. Bastian doesn't seem to be discouraged, for he knows that there are better days coming.

The proprietors of the Monroe Greenhouses, 3701 East Seventh street, are adding one more house, 25x90 feet, and enlarging their boiler room. This is a new firm, being only one year old. They are growing mostly bedding plants, with a few thousand carnations. Mr. Smith, one of the proprietors, is well pleased with the last spring's trade, and he thinks the future is bright. Their location is in the east part of the city, with no opposition near and in a good residence district. If properly managed, they ought to build up a good trade.

Busy.

Hiawatha, Kan.—Miss Susan Margrave has taken charge of the business of J. W. Margrave & Co., since her father's death.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The increase in the supply of asters is more pronounced than a week ago, making the shortage of carnations less apparent, giving the buyers a chance to take only the best and leaving a balance of poor stock to be sold in job lots at low prices. Gladioli are abundant, the variety America being eagerly sought at high prices. There is no change in the supply of other flowers. The demand is fair for the season, but irregular. Water lilies and outdoor flowers are in oversupply. There is no market for greens and growers will do well to cut down shipments of smilax and asparagus until conditions change.

A Chat With Mr. Rice.

M. Rice, who has just returned from Europe, consented to chat about his trip for the benefit of the Review readers. "But first," Mr. Rice said, "let me show you this letter."

The letter was exactly what any one who knew Mr. Rice would have expected. It came from a man in the west, and began as follows: "I have seen in the Review about you checking up orders of the great Kaiserin Auguste Victoria. Can you send me a few dozens or a hundred and at what price? * * I would like your catalogue." etc. "Now," Mr. Rice asked, with the joyous laugh, "what good are your newspapers, anyway?"

To appreciate the satire of this speech, it is only necessary to recall that Phil mentioned that Mr. Rice was homeward bound on the floating palace, the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, and in a later issue that he was home again checking up orders in his warehouse, and as all the world knows, Mr. Rice distributes supplies, not Kaiserins. Well, the thing was rather staggering, the interviewer being interviewed, so to speak. The darkest cloud has a silver lining, and these were consoling reflections. Mr. Rice is a thorough business man who, while he believes firmly in the Review, never misses an opportunity of jollying Phil about the paper. Then, though the writer of this letter had mixed things up, he evidently read the Review regularly and felt kindly toward the man whose name had become as a household word, and believing that he was about to add a new department, wished to encourage him in his first venture in greenhouses. Then, he had asked for a catalogue. This was consolation. Mr. Rice is never happier than when people ask for his catalogue, and had the western man only written "kat-a-log," it would have been a positive triumph. These thoughts so cheered Phil that he enjoyed the joke and proceeded with the interview in earnest.

Mr. Rice had enjoyed his trip immensely, the weather had been cool and pleasant, the return voyage smooth. The flowers in Italy during May were gorgeous, and the public gardens, especially at Monte Carlo, beggar description. Mr. Rice had always been impressed by the taste shown by the florists abroad in their arrangement of set pieces, and one florist in Munich had designs of such rare beauty in his window that Mr. Rice introduced himself, complimenting him on the work, whereat the German artist was much gratified. Wages are steadily advancing abroad, due probably to the vast numbers who are emigrating to this country. The style of living among the workers is not to be compared with that seen here. The freshly arrived immigrants who excite our wonder by living in shacks herded together are doing pretty much what they do at home in Italy or Hungary. Mr. Rice spoke hopefully of the coming season, promising in a few weeks to give the Review readers some ideas about the importations now pouring into his firm's warehouses.

Recent Importations.

Through the courtesy of Harry Bayersdorfer I am able to give the Review readers a few ideas of the wonderful new supplies that are almost daily pouring into his firm's great warehouses in this city.

The combinations of color in waterproof pot-covers are varied and tasteful. Many new designs are seen that will afford opportunity for displaying certain varieties of plants to advantage. The covers as now made are very durable. In plant hampers and baskets, to quote Bayersdorfer's words, "There is every style and every grade, from the cheapest to the most expensive." This is a fact. The variety is endless. A particularly attractive basket is of Japanese style, of wood and rattan, with long, graceful handles. The improvement in the French baskets is very marked. The colors are softer and effects more pleasing than of old. Of grass-growing novelties there is a wide field for selection. There is Pat's head, and the jolly boys, and dear knows how many others, besides all sorts of pigs, to say nothing of birds and fowls, enough to please the most critical.

Mr. Bayersdorfer is a tremendous worker, devoting his whole energy while abroad to selecting an immense stock. He believes that American florists can give ideas to their brethren, both in London and La Belle Paris itself.

Riverton.

The most progressive paper dispatched its Philadelphia representative across the Delaware recently to see what was doing at Dreer's nurseries. There is always something doing at Dreer's, and the Philadelphia representative looks forward with pleasure to these trips. On this particular occasion, however, things seemed dark. The two months from the end of May to the end of July had been cram full of work and worry. The work and worry had brought good results, but bad effects remained. The mere sight of plants, usually a pleasure, was distasteful.

The Bristol boat was overcrowded and it was very hot. Do you wonder that Phil's first words to J. D. Eisele were, "Let's get a little boat and go out on the river." But Mr. Eisele, who had been through a much harder mill himself, was not going to play truant. "Yes, the hottest thing we could do," he replied, as he led the way to the greenhouses; in two minutes Phil forgot all about fancying the water cold, or G. C. W.'s joyous essays on subjects and items, or even David Rust's advice to enjoy life, so inspiring was the too brief time spent with Mr. Eisele.

Asparagus Colemanii is a beautiful thing, a sport from A. Sprengeri. It originated with the gardener for Mr. Coleman, of mustard fame, and was named by him after his employer. It may be described as a refined form of Sprengeri. It is a strong grower, with stems two to two and a half feet long, graceful foliage that will appeal to the artists who make such exquisite effects with green of varied form and hue. The Dreer company has secured the entire stock of this novelty.

Outside in the frames is a bed of the white stokesia, S. cyanea alba. It is a sport from Stokesia cyanea, coming with such persistence that there will be a large stock to draw upon when it is sent out next spring. One of the enterprising salesmen has already turned in one order for 1,000 white stokesias.

A field of hardy phloxes in their second year is a sight long to be remembered. These plants were selected from the immense Dreer stock early in March, before the shipping season opened. Each variety is planted in a solid block, all the best; not a poor sort is here. The effect is dazzlingly brilliant. R. P. Struthers is Mr. Eisele's favorite variety. A valuable lesson of this field is the chance it affords to compare the shade, color, habit and time of blooming of each variety. Nearby in a frame the native Lobelia cardinalis is planted out for seed.

The twin houses completed last January for dahlias are now the home of Adiantum Farleyense. The conditions possible in these houses will, Mr. Eisele feels confident, just suit this coquette. We may look for some fine stock from here before the new year, when the dahlias will return. Much of the Adiantum Farleyense is now in 1½-inch pots, a size rarely used in most places. Good plants of Cibotium Schiedei marked sold are also in one of these houses.

Ferns of the Boston type are still very prominent. Nephrolepis Whitmani is believed to be a great acquisition. It is dwarf and does not revert. Large numbers are ready to send out in pots. Another large block is planted out on the tables for stock. The old Boston fern still commands a good following among buyers.

Fully fifty varieties of marantas are grown. They present a beautiful appearance, their deep, regular markings contrasting strongly with the groundwork of their broad foliage. The kentias also are a grand sight, an immense range of glass being entirely filled with specimens in from 6-inch pots to 15-inch tubs. Three whole houses of them are picked out for orders for delivery at specified times in the fall. These tubs, by the way, are becoming a staple article at Riverton. Many decorators prefer them because they do not break or dry out easily. They are from ten inches to fifteen inches in size.

Various Notes.

The palm growers are discussing Sander's raid on the Lord Howe Islands. To have the total output of kentia seed locked in one man's hands for the next seven years is a serious matter.

The Whilldin Pottery Co. has purchased the property on the east side of Whilldin street fronting on Latona street. They will close the former street (a private street not in the city plan) gaining an additional thirty-four feet on Latona street and squaring their property, which fronts on Wharton street.

W. E. McKissick is receiving fine Ostrich Plume, a variety of white aster, with which he made a hit last September, when he started in business for himself.

Frank Ely, with H. F. Michell Co., has returned from his vacation spent in the country.

John L. North, of Sewell, N. J., is sending fine Scott carnations, outdoor-grown, to the Flower Market.

Miss Evans, who presides over Edward Reid's books, has returned from her vacation and once more smiles on callers at 1526 Ranstead street.

Miss Leedom, who sells for J. Henry Bartram, of Lansdowne, challenges the admiration of the cleverest of our wholesalers.

Alfred Burton made his last shipment of Liberties to the Flower Market on Saturday. This week he is sending nice Beauties.

William J. Moore is receiving fine blooms of Gladiolus America.

Robert H. Glass commenced work last Monday with Samuel S. Pennock.

John Wilson has returned to J. J. Habermehl's Sons at Twenty-second and Diamond streets.

D. T. Connor is sending out cards to his constituents asking what he can do for their heating apparatus to put them in good shape for next winter. This week he contracted with E. H. Bauer, of Chesilhurst, N. J., for a Burnham boiler.

George Samtman, who withdrew from the firm of Myers & Samtman on July 1, is considering accepting a position on a private place.

The William Graham Co. had an effective window this week, arranged with Queen Alexandra daisies on a purple ground.

The Highland Rose Co. has completed five houses, one range, of 17,000 square feet of glass, at Morton, Pa. The entire place is planted with Brides and Bridesmaids. W. E. Fowler is the resident partner.

The street is much pleased with the trade-mark of the $tokes $eed $tore.

David Herbert & Son, of Atco, N. J., will send the product of about seventy acres of dahlias to Samuel S. Pennock.

PHIL.

Teams representing the Thorn Hedge Nurseries and John Burton's place played a great game of ball at the Thorn Hedge Nurseries, Saturday, July 28. The Thorn Hedge team won by the score of thirteen to twelve in a ten-inning battle. The feature of the game was the playing of Frank Gaul, Henry Farmnun, Martin B. Farmer and George Laverty. William Stevens played a fine game behind the bat. After the game the players all enjoyed Mr. Battles' hospitality, which closed a pleasant day.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business has not been so dull as usual all this midsummer season. The design business has kept many hundreds busy through the shortened hours, for we all close at 6 p. m. through July and August, and I have not heard of any violator of this agreement.

Asters are abundant. Sweet peas sell well and the Lilium lancifolium, album and rubrum, are in their prime, and cut a big figure in all designs.

With the exception of one or two light showers, not enough to hinder the flight of a butterfly, we have had several weeks of dry, hot weather. It is ten years since we have had such real summer weather, and it is mighty good for the great staples of life, wheat and corn, and eventually pork.

Various Notes.

The store boys are taking their vacations, but I would have to draw on my imagination to tell you how Billy Greever is enjoying his by attending to his new baby.

Andy Adams is shooting bullfrogs on the marshes bordering the broad, blue Niagara.

Roland Cloudsley is spending all his leisure hours designing a motor boat, which will be launched in the spring of 1907, and with which he expects to emulate the performance of the famous "Maid of the Mist," and go through the whirlpool rapids at Niagara. The writer declined the honor of holding the wheel.

S. A. Anderson and W. B. Scott are watching the barrier at Fort Erie, and those who sleep near them are often startled by a sudden cry of "They're off!"

Miss Rachel Rebstock, ever industrious, thinks, like the late Russell Sage, that vacations are not necessary. J. H. Rebstock is busy with the great steamboat traffic of his summer resort, Crystal Beach, on the lake.

There have been few visitors of late. I forgot to mention a visit from Mr. Wilmore, the celebrated dahlia and hollyhock grower of Denver. He is a fine example of a western man.

The veteran, George McClure, has sailed for Rotterdam and then old Scotia. He has taken Mrs. McClure along; she will prevent him from sampling his native stimulant, "mountain dew," so invigorating in that cool, damp climate, and dangerous and demoralizing in this.

Louis Neubeck is so busy filling fern dishes and attending to other business that he has not had time to call a meeting of the Florists' Club for many months. There was a great excuse for his apathy last year, but none this. We want to talk over the national convention, and also the annual picnic.

The Dayton Meeting.

How many will attend the Dayton convention is a guess. There should be a good number, for have we not the president? From loyalty to him, as well as to the society, all should go who possibly can. It is selfish not to. The stay-at-homes don't realize what they miss, or the benefits they have reaped from the work of men who have unselfishly given their time and money to the society. We regret that there was any friction or misunderstanding in the Dayton Club. Somebody blundered, perhaps not intentionally. It is corrected, and let us hear of nothing but harmony and brotherly love, at least till we reluctantly say good-by to our Dayton brothers.

There is likely to be a spirited but friendly fight for several of the principal offices, and that always amuses the crowd. Vote for the men you think will do the most good to the society and not for personal reasons. When you meet men from the mouth of the Mississippi, the banks of the muddy Missouri, the far away Rockies, and the wheat fields of Manitoba, it makes you ashamed of your fellow townsman who had but eight hours' ride in a Pullman car and then did not grasp the opportunity to attend. Go to Dayton and cheer for your townsman, Billy Kasting, the eloquence of Robert Craig, the wise talk of Gurney Hill, and the remarks and advice of their more or less eloquent or wise comrades.

Then there is the social side, and the sports. The sports are all right in their way, and are greatly enjoyed by those who bowl or shoot, but a large element does neither, and it includes some of our hardest workers and most clever men. Without doubt the sports bring many to the convention city, and personally I like to see a certain amount of innocent sport in every man's character, but it is entirely foreign to the objects of the society, and anything relative to the games or the prizes should never be injected into the deliberations or time of the sessions. It is a feature that can be conducted and managed entirely outside the work and business of the convention. A member whom I know remarked on the platform at St. Louis two years ago, while distributing some prizes, "If a man can't shoot or bowl, or does not love these sports, he does not amount to much." I have communed with the author of that flippant, silly remark many times since, and know that he greatly regrets its utterance. Many a man says a foolish thing when on his feet, on the spur of the moment, that he deeply regrets afterwards.

Consideration of our leading commercial flowers has been pretty well thrashed out, but now we are ornamental horticulturists. There is a wide and splendid field to be yet explored, and the knowledge is sadly needed by an army of young men who call themselves florists.

Mr. Kasting's Club-house.

The only holiday W. S. has had this summer was a day and night with President Kasting at his club-house on Grand Island, on the bluffs of the majestic Niagara river. The club is called the Half-past Twelve Club. I did not learn whether it is twelve p. m. or twelve a. m. The fishing was poor, wretchedly poor. It appears that several sea-serpents in Lake Erie had swallowed all the fish, so there were none to swim the waters of cool Niagara. One bullhead and four 3-ounce perch were the result of three days' fishing by three men and two women. Never mind, our friend William had an ice-box and a corkscrew and such contraptions, so we got along finely. There was also a bunch of charming young married ladies, and if their husbands had known enough to stop in the city, we should have willingly put up with the absence of bites and considered ourselves far better off than the multitude of Israelites in the desert, who had only two loaves and five small fishes. These husbands are often officiously in the way. W. S.

as a trade getter; our sales have far exceeded our expectations and we find our shipments have covered the entire country, from Maine to Oregon and from New Brunswick to Texas.

W. J. OLDS.

Union City, Pa.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The general summer depression is felt all over the city, and especially in our business. The weather is hot and there is practically nothing doing. Here and there they have a batch of funeral orders, and there it ends. It is also a hard matter to obtain really first-class stock.

Plenty of good asters are coming in and are selling fairly well, especially the white and purple, with $2 per hundred the top price. Sweet peas are poor and the hot weather will soon put them out of the market. A few good white carnations are coming from the fields, but anything like good pink or red is out of the question.

Gladioli are a great glut. All light colors bring $2 per hundred. They are mostly used for window decorations. Roses are better; still first-class stock is limited to a few hundreds. Firsts and seconds are plentiful; in fact, more than the demand calls for. In greens the market, as usual, has everything one wants.

Club Picnic.

The Florists' Club's yearly outing, held Thursday, July 26, at Ramona park, was a successful and most enjoyable affair. The party numbered over 200, and only for a big storm at 1:30 p. m., which lasted nearly one hour, fifty more would have come. After that the sun came out and dried the grounds, and a delightful afternoon was spent in dancing, fishing and boating. At 2:30 the trustees, Messrs. Beyer, Weber and Fillmore, started the games back of the dancing pavilion.

The Baseball Teams at the Picnic of the St. Louis Florists' Club, July 26.

The first event was the 100-yard dash, twelve entries, won by A. Hartman, after a hard run with R. J. Windler; time, thirteen and a half seconds. Next was the boys' race, 12 to 14 years, four entries, won by John Bentzen. Hop, skip and jump, nine entries; Fred M. Alves had a walk-away, his mark being thirty-six feet. In the little girls' race five started, won by Alice Jablonsky. Eight single ladies entered in the next race. This was won by Eugenia Beeb. Running broad jump, ten entries, Fred M. Alves first, A. Jablonsky second.

The men's race, 50 years or over, was won by J. J. Beneke, E. W. Guy second. Only four fat men could be found, 200 pounds or over, won by Carl Beyer. The egg and spoon race, seventeen entries, was won by Mrs. Carl Beyer. Potato race, eleven entries, Dora Miller and Adolph Steidle being tied, they divided the prize, a box of candy. Louis Vogel won the sack race for boys. The tug of war had Beyer and Beneke as captains, and after a short pull Beyer's side won a box of cigars.

"Coming events cast their shadows before them" was the sign on the ball-grounds. The ball game between the wholesale and retail teams was the feature of the outing. The wholesalers won the game in five innings by a score of ten to two, when the game was called on account of two of the winning team, Fred Alves and Otto Bruning, getting hurt. When the umpires, Messrs. Ammann and Guy, announced that the wholesalers had won, a large sum in stage money changed hands. The badger fight did not take place, owing to the badger getting away and not being found in the woods. The older folks left early, but the young people stayed until late, enjoying the delightful music and dancing. All voted it the best outing ever held by the club, and great credit is due our trustees for the manner in which the outing was handled.

Notes of the Outing.

Belleville was represented by E. W. Guy, Henry Emunds, Adolph Fehr, Gus Grosshardt and their families.

Fred Ammann and his whole family came from Edwardsville.

Herman Weber, who was catcher for the retail team, showed league form.

Henry Berning, first baseman for the wholesalers, got to first base on a foul and refused to return.

Francis Fillmore, father of F. J. Fillmore, was the oldest florist at the picnic, he being 82 years old.

Prof. Irish, of Shaw's Garden, came late and alone but said he spent an enjoyable evening.

J. S. Wilson, of Western Springs, Ill., said he never had a better time meeting old friends.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, B. Eschner and S. S. Skidelsky got in just in time for the outing. Mr. Skidelsky put in good licks for the S. A. F. convention all afternoon.

The youngest florist at the picnic was Baby Braun, of Central.

Jas. Dunford will know better the next time he gets into a crowd with Chas. Schoenle.

George Schriefer and Fred Alves made a great battery for the wholesale team.

R. Windt said the weather was not good for pictures, so none was taken.

Charlie Juengle, Charlie Kuehn and their families were missed. The big storm kept them away.

We were glad to see our old friends, Theo. Miller and F. C. Weber, among us once more.

George Angermueller had the big crowd in good humor all afternoon with his funny hat and side remarks.

Fred Foster, Alex Siegle, John Burk, Jabez Gadd and Adolph Brix were seen together most of the time. They were glad they came.

The feature of the ball game was Adles' home run. On three strikes he crawled home from third base, and was called safe by the umpire.

W. C. Smith was a great favorite among the ladies. Smith is a great all-around man and plays any position on the team.

Various Notes.

Don't forget the Florists' Club meeting next Thursday afternoon. This is the most important of the year, the election of officers, the payment of annual dues and two important discussions by Messrs. Jablonsky and Sanders being on the program. This meeting will be held at our regular meeting hall, at Grand and Shenandoah avenues. One of the largest meetings of the year is expected. On this occasion all members going to the S. A. F. convention at Dayton will please report their names to F. H. Meinhardt, state vice-president.

The seventeenth annual Shaw banquet to gardeners, florists and nurserymen will take place at the Jefferson hotel, August 14, at 7 p. m. This is in accordance with the will of the late Henry Shaw. The banquet comes early this year, owing to the Apple Growers' Congress, which meets here that week. The early date will give them a chance to attend. J. J. B.

El Paso, Tex.—C. H. Kolle, late of Beaumont, has purchased four lots on Myrtle avenue, and will erect a greenhouse.

Grand Forks, N. D.—E. O. Lovell is building a residence and greenhouse combined. The latter is connected as a wing to the former.

NOTICE

Because of the new wage scale which the Printers' Union has enforced upon those employers not willing to suffer interruption of their business, especially because of that part of the scale which makes overtime practically prohibitive, it is of first importance that the Review obtain its advertising "copy" earlier.

It is therefore earnestly requested that all advertisers mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday morning, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

Contributors also please take heed.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

We note your advertisement in the current number of the Review of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

CONVENTION NUMBER.

The annual Special Convention Number of the Review will be published August 23, with a full report of the Dayton meeting of the S. A. F. We plan to make it the best we ever have issued; but we need the help of the advertisers in the matter of giving us early copy. Printers cannot do their best work if rushed. Give us a little time to get you up good display. We are ready now to begin.

MR. GRAHAM'S CHOICE.

Editor Review:—Would it not be wise for the members of the S. A. F. to give some attention to the selection of a suitable and logical candidate to fill the position of president for the ensuing year, rather than to leave it altogether to caucusing and buttonholing members at the last moment? Or until they have unwittingly pledged themselves to friends on personal grounds alone? It seems to me that the best interests of the society often point to some man who would never dream of seeking the position himself in any way.

I am expressing my belief that Mr. H. B. Beatty, for so many years a faithful member and efficient officer, serving, as he has, year after year, never wavering in his devotion to the best interests of the society, is such a man. He is too modest a gentleman to seek the office. Let us see to it that the office seeks the man. Adam Graham.

[While recognizing the force of Mr. Graham's point, and appreciating the worth of his candidate, the Review has felt it to be more fitting that nominations be made on the floor of the convention rather than in the columns of the trade press.]

THE READERS' CORNER.

Oriental Poppy.

In a recent issue of the Review a subscriber asked about the Oriental poppy. The scarlet variety is the grandest lawn plant ever grown, it makes such a good show. The plants can be started now in coldframes, and should be shaded till they are two or three inches high. Water them carefully until they get strong, then give them plenty of it. The Review is the most systematic journal in the business. I am driven to spend my money for it when I should be buying something to eat instead. A. W. M.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

Peter H. Murphy, aged 86 years, a veteran of the civil war and a well known florist, died July 23 at his home on North Limestone street, supposedly from heart trouble. His death was sudden and unexpected. Only his wife survives him. Mr. Murphy was a member of Mitchell post, G. A. R. He enlisted in Urbana, and a number of his comrades from that city were here to attend the funeral.

Chambersburg, Pa.—Byer Bros. have added three greenhouses, each 25x100, for carnations.

Akron, O.—William H. Collins was recently elected superintendent of Glendale cemetery, to succeed the late Captain A. P. Baldwin.

DAYTON HOTELS.

The headquarters during the convention will be the Hotel Algonquin. All hotels are within one square of all streetcars, taking you to the exhibition grounds within ten minutes. We give here a list and prices of the leading hotels:

AMERICAN PLAN.

The Algonquin—From $2.50 to $5 a day; 300 guests.
The Beckel—From $3 to $4 a day; 200 guests.
The Phillips—From $2 to $2.50 a day; 150 guests.
Hotel Daytonia—From $1 to $1.50 a day; 100 guests.
The Aldine—From $1 to $1.50 a day; 25 guests.
The Vendome—$1.50 a day; 25 guests.

EUROPEAN PLAN.

The Atlas—From $1 to $2 a day; 75 guests.
The Wehmer—From 50 to 75 cents a day; 50 guests.
The Stag Hotel—50 cents a day; 25 guests.
The Urban—From 50 cents to $1 a day; 60 guests.

We have also on our list a number of smaller hotels and many private houses, prices from 50 cents to 75 cents for single rooms. If enough applications are made a camp will be established, with well-furnished, double roof tents, four cots to a tent, at a nominal cost of from 50 cents to 75 cents each. Any one wanting accommodations, if no individual arrangements are preferred, should make application as soon as possible to J. B. Heiss, president of the Florists' Club, who will see that arrangements are made to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The Dayton Florists' Club held a well attended and enthusiastic meeting July 30. The reports of the various committees on reception and entertainment for the coming meeting of the S. A. F. were satisfactory.

The members of the committees have been untiring in their efforts to make this meeting a memorable occasion, and all who do not attend will miss the time of their lives.

Much credit is due President Heiss, of the local club, for the zeal and energy displayed in his efforts to make the event a grand success. Mr. Lutzenbuger, chairman of the entertainment committee, has also labored hard and faithfully for the entertainment of the visitors, and with admirable success. He has several surprises in store that he is keeping under his hat.

The ladies' committee is doing its part well also, and we can assure the visiting ladies that they will be well taken care of.

Vice-President Altick is having the bowling alleys brushed up, and will see that they are in apple-pie order for the bowling contests. The local society will install a bureau of information in the main waiting-room in the Union Station, where visiting members can procure all desired information immediately on arrival in the city, even as to where the best highballs are obtainable, although we have Vice-President Altick's word for it that the members of the S. A. F. do not indulge in anything so exhilarating, which fact we are pleased to know. The Dayton florists drink nothing stronger than Red Raven splits—occasionally.

But to sum up, the local club is in a position to give you all a royal good time. All they ask is for you to honor them with your presence and they will do the rest. F. W. Ritter.

Cincinnati, O.—C. J. Ohmer has gone east for a visit at the summer resorts and trade centers.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

A light demand for stock serves to give the market a deceptive appearance of activity. At no time this summer has really good stock been more scarce. Not only are local buyers canvassing from house to house to find material suited to their needs, but when a wholesaler receives a shipping order he usually finds that he must go in search for satisfactory goods for at least a part of it. Business is fully up to what it was a year ago, but it is nothing to brag about, except in the houses which have special crops of either roses or carnations. These fortunate ones are greatly increasing last year's sales records.

There are more good Liberty and Richmond than any other rose. Brides and Maids of shipping quality are practically out of the market. Beauties are in light supply and selling well. The cut from young stock is improving every day.

There is a lively demand for carnations of good quality, both white and pink, but the supply of poor stock is overabundant. Asters are coming in heavily and are glutting the market, somewhat to the detriment of the carnations. Most of the asters are short in stem, small in flower and following Saturday's heavy rain many flowers were rotted, but improvement is now apparent.

Auratum lilies continue plentiful and cheap. Longiflorums are rather less abundant than they were. Lancifolium is here, both album and rubrum. Gladioli are in large supply and include all shades. Sweet peas are again clogging the market because quality is not acceptable. There are many outdoor flowers which sell cheaply to retailers for use in window decorations.

Club Plans Entertainment.

There was a meeting of the downtown members of the Florists' Club at the office of the Benthey-Coatsworth Co., July 27, to discuss the possibility of offering a little entertainment to visitors passing through Chicago at the time of the S. A. F. convention. It was the unanimous sentiment that something should be done to make the visitors have a good time. The only point in doubt was as to whether the number in town at any one time would make it possible to provide for their pleasure. As the result of the meeting the club issued the following invitation:

"Convention visitors who may decide to make a further western trip during the week following the Dayton meeting, are cordially invited by the Chicago Florists' Club to advise its secretary, L. H. Winterson, 45 Wabash avenue, when they will be in the city in order that an afternoon or evening visit with the club can be arranged."

Chicago to Dayton.

The Chicago Florists' Club has concluded arrangements for the special train over the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis R. R., leaving the Illinois Central passenger station, Twelfth street, Chicago, at 12:45 Monday noon, August 20, and due to arrive in Dayton, via Kankakee, Lafayette and Indianapolis, about 8:40 p. m., practically a daylight ride all the way. The train will consist of three or more new day coaches, one combination car, one dining car to serve luncheon and dinner a la carte.
